ELECTRIC POWER.

Every plumber, carpenter and hardware merchant ought to have a small electric motor, say one-half horse power.

You will be surprised at the kind and amount of work that can be done with a motor of this size, such as sharpening skates, scythes and all kinds of cutlery, polishing and grinding metals, splitting and cutting up stock for windows and door screens, etc.

The motors are cheap and cost of operation is very small. Let us help you in any matter pertaining to power.

Rev. Mr. Smith Resigns.

Rev. Robert Keating Smith has resigned the position of assistant rector of Grace church to accept the post of rector of the Episcopal church at Westfield, Mass. The following letter is self explanatory.

14 Church Street, Newton, Mass.

November 2, 1905.
To the Vestry of Grace Church, Newton, Mass.

Dear Sirs:
You will recall that at the April meeting of the Vestry I announced that there was some probability of my resigning as Assistant Minister of this Parish.

Last month Bishop Vinton pointed out to me the opportunity which he sees of building up the mission of our Church in Westfield, Mass., into a self-supporting Parish. He made me a definite offer to appoint me Rector there, which I have accepted, my work to commence January 1st, 1906.

I therefore tender to you my resignation, to take effect December 31st, 1905.

It is needless for me to say how I regret to leave you, and how firmly rooted in my affection the people and children of this community have become during my work here.

I am very sincerely yours,
Robert Keating Smith.

To
Edward H. Cutler, Clerk.

Dr. Shinn preached in St. Botolph's Church, old Boston, England, at the morning service Sunday, Oct. 22nd.

This is the parish of which the Rev. John Cotton was rector for 20 years before he left to cast in his lot with the Puritan colony in Boston in this new country.

The old parish church was begun in 1309 and completed in 1460. It is one of the largest parish churches in England.

Ordinarily it can accommodate 1500 people, but upon occasions finds room for 2500. The congregations, however, seldom reach such high figures. There is especial interest in old St. Botolph's now because the suggestion has been made to copy it when the Cathedral is built in Boston. Only a few American clergymen have ever officiated in this interesting old church. Bishop Brooks, Bishop Lawrence, the Rev. Mr. Amory and Dr. Shinn have been representatives of the new Boston in the mother city and in the mother church.

Republican Club.

The annual meeting of the Republican Club of Ward One was held last evening in Athenaeum hall, Nonantum. The annual reports were read and the following officers elected: President, E. O. Childs, Jr.; vice president, William Hanson; secretary, F. L. Trowbridge; treasurer, Ralph E. Potter; executive committee, I. T. Fletcher, C. V. Moore, R. D. Holt.

Improvement Association.

A meeting of the Nonantum Improvement Association was held last evening in the Athenaeum building on Dallas street. President William Jenks presided and a constitution and by-laws, was adopted. Among those who spoke in the interest of the new society were Alderman W. J. Doherty, Rev. H. E. Oxnard, E. O. Childs, Jr., W. S. Bowen, J. W. Blakeney, I. T. Fletcher, J. W. Murphy, W. H. Thomas, H. J. Murgahan and J. M. Lavoie. An adjourned meeting will be held in the same place Thursday evening, Nov. 10th at 8.

Real Estate.

The terms were private but the price obtained was considerably in excess of the assessed value. The brokers in the transaction were Alvord Bros. & Messrs W. S. & F. Edmunds.

Mrs. James Tead

Mrs. Louisa James, wife of Nathaniel N. James, died at her home on Ward street Tuesday after a long period of failing health. She was a daughter of the late William Brackett and a sister of Mrs. Samuel Jackson. Deceased was born 74 years ago in Newton and her late residence was near the old Brackett homestead. She was one of the oldest members of the First church. She leaves a husband and one daughter. The funeral will be held from the house this afternoon at 2.

The Wedding at St. Ann's

By EDWARD MARSHEN COOKE

Copyright, 1905, by American Press Association

As Leonard Hopkins mounted the steps of the club he met old General Dodge coming down, and there was something very attractive about the way the younger man lent his assistance across the icy pavement to the veteran. Other men might have done the same thing, but not in just the same way, and the old man felt it and smiled to himself as he drove away, muttering something about "Hopkins' boy" being an uncommonly fine fellow. These young men all occupied places in his mind as some body's boys.

Up in the hall above the man who took Hopkins' hat and coat felt warmed by the kindness of his manner. The servants always felt that way about him after they got accustomed to the sternness of his face. It did not matter that they had no business to note the difference in their treatment by those who commanded their services. The fact was that they did, and tonight the stolid looking servant noticed that Mr. Hopkins' face was even more austere than usual, and he felt, too, that the other thing, the thing that somehow or other would make Mr. Hopkins up above the plane occupied by the other members of the club, was more marked than ordinarily.

As Hopkins passed on into the room a man stopped him and exchanged a few words with him about an engagement which, he said, circumstances forced him to break, and then went away thinking what a very disagreeable fellow Hopkins was, and it was some minutes later before his sense of justice added to the harsh verdict the saving word "sometimes."

The fact was that Leonard Hopkins was very much out of sorts, as he put it to himself. It was characteristic of him in a moody fit to be especially courteous to old General Dodge and particularly considerate of the servant and, in his quiet way, viciously disagreeable to the first man of his own age and degree whom he met. He felt that the man was fair prey, and he made the most of it and seemed puffed by it afterward and sorry the next day.

Hopkins walked back through the rooms to one in the rear and took a seat at a table where Russell Carroll and Philip Maltby were chatting and smoking, and they bailed him pleasantly and looked at their watches and went on with their talk. The three had met by agreement to go to the church together, where they were to perform the duties of ushers at the marriage of their old friend, Tom Borrowings. A young fellow with a noticeably good natured face and a bunch of violets on his coat sauntered up and, leaning over Hopkins' chair, made some light and some rather serious remarks about the wedding and joined with Carroll and Maltby in saying nice things about Miss Fielding and metaphorically patting Tom Borrowings on the back, very tenderly for men, and Hopkins sat silently flicking the ashes from his cigarette and carefully tilting a glass that stood on the table until the liquor ran down close to the edge and threatened to fall on the table and did not.

Finally the man with the good natured face turned to go and paused to say in parting:

"Well, for those who like weddings this is the kind of a wedding they ought to like. There is something about it that makes one feel comfortable all over. I really don't believe there is even an old aunt to come up from the country and wear queer clothes and spoil the artistic effect." And he laughed and went away, and Hopkins turned slightly in his chair and watched him go, smiling in a perfunctory sort of way until Maltby attracted his attention with an abrupt, "Well, what is the matter with you?" and Hopkins replied with an attempted laugh:

"Oh, nothing—that is, not much. I need something to drink—something like brandy, say." And he called a waiter, while Carroll mumbled something about being glad that he knew what he needed, and Maltby added a vicious thrust about the man who took weddings seriously, and they all laughed and emptied the glasses.

"I am not going to have anything but smiles about this thing tonight," continued Maltby. "I am in a measure responsible for his success and propose to see it go off with the flags flying and the band playing, and so on. It will be time enough tomorrow for you to think about the difference between Borrowings the bachelor and Borrowings married."

"Oh, it was not Tom I was thinking of," responded Hopkins thoughtfully; "it was another. Well, whatever it was, I'll think of something else. You see, I have been rubbed the wrong way today. I went down with the governor to see his patients in the slum, and if there was anything that was greivous or pitiful or sorry that we overlooked it must have been out for the day. Then I went to the Parkville to dinner—just a plain dinner, as they are always telling you; no wine and not very much to eat and, by way of conversation, a good deal of wandering around among the skeletons and tombstones of the past and proposals of dogging of the future, and as on. I know that they are awfully nice people, and I am sorry for their misfortunes, and sometimes I do not mind their dinners. But I all went against the grain today." And Hopkins pushed his chair back haptently and rose to go, the others following his example.

"St. Ann's church, Holden," Hopkins called to the coachman as he followed his two friends into the carriage, and when they were seated Carroll threw his head back, laughing heartily, and commenced a story to explain the fun of it, when Hopkins interrupted him in a queer sort of way as if he were talking partly to himself and partly to some one outside of the window.

"I forgot to say," he began in a low tone, "that between the slums and the Parkville I saw a ghost—that is, a first cousin to a ghost. I thought it was dead, and I wish it was, and it ought to be and it is not."

And Carroll said very sharply, "Nonsense!" and Maltby leaned forward and asked hastily, "What do you mean?"

Hopkins studied the burning end of his cigarette with careful attention before replying and then said slowly, "I have about decided not to go into that," and he looked out of the window again as if he were searching for something else to talk about, and then, facing them, he added quickly, "Still, I have begun, and I want to tell you fellows about it. Five years ago when I went to New York on the street railway business that turned out so badly for us all I met Agnes Fielding. That was long before Tom Borrowings had seen her. She was even prettier then than now, and she had more of the attractive enthusiasm and innocence and freshness of young girlhood about her. I fancy most men would like the worldly-wise Miss Fielding of today much better than the one I first knew, but I don't. The way she shook hands with me made me like her, and what I came to know of her in the next few months only strengthened my first impression. Now—but that is not a part of my story. If Tom had turned up there then and fallen in love with her we would not be going to his wedding tonight; at least not with her in the leading role. You see, she was in love with another man then, and, if I reckon the thing right, our friend Tom would have been turned away very promptly and would probably have gone to Africa or some other outlandish place for solace. Men who fell in love with the Agnes Fielding of those days did not forget it very easily or very soon, and they were apt to go off at a tangent.

"I met him here on the street today."

"You remember Harry Goodloe at Princeton, don't you? Of course you do—that giant fellow from Pittsburg; a senior in our first year. Well, he was the lucky man in this case. He was a fine sight in the way of a man to look at. His father died about the time I went to New York and left Harry a big pile. If I had been a girl I don't know any man it would have been easier for me to fall in love with than Goodloe. And he had, with his good looks and money, a lot of brains, too—good stuff all through and a fine prospect for making a handsome name for himself as an electrical expert. Harry and Miss Fielding were always together, and everybody said they were engaged. I don't know whether it had gone that far or not, but I saw enough of them to know that they were desperately in it with each other.

"One day Goodloe went out to look over and report on a new electrical plant at Plainfield. He got engrossed in his investigations and into a place he had no business to be, among the machinery and wires. Something went wrong, and a smashup occurred. An electric current went astray, and Harry got it badly. Well, they took him to a hospital and saved his life, but when he came out the sight was gone from one of his eyes and his face was shockingly scarred, to say nothing of other injuries. He was a terrible sight, and even I, cold blooded as I am, felt the repugnance of the thing, the desire to turn away when I saw him. Miss Fielding saw him once and only once after the accident. She went to see him as soon as the doctors would allow him to see anybody. That was the end of it. When he came out of the hospital she had gone to Europe. When she came back a year ago the family thought it best not to return to New York, and, as you know, they came to Philadelphia to live. I have only seen Harry once since then. He went to the far west and to the dogs. He got down so low after he blew in all his money that I understand he died faro at a gambling house, when he wasn't drunk, for a living. It ruined him—the mishap—physically, financially, mentally and morally. I don't know that I can blame the girl, but think of him—think of his hell on earth!"

There was a pause at the end of the story, and Maltby was the one to break the silence as the carriage stopped in front of the church door with a muttered, "Well, that is a corker," and then he whispered while Holden was opening the door, "But we must forget this thing now. Remember there is to be nothing but smiles here tonight."

The three young men hurried up through the awning in the blaze of light from the open church door. As they reached the vestibule Hopkins put a hand on the shoulder of each of his companions and drew them a step aside into the shadow and said in a low voice:

"This fellow Goodloe has not been seen in this part of the country since, but I met him here on the street today. He was worn to a shadow almost, ragged and drunk. Do you suppose his being here has anything to do with this business tonight?" And then, without waiting for an answer, he passed rapidly into the church, followed by his wondering companions.

People came to this wedding with the rush that is characteristic of weddings, and in the busy moments which followed the bridegroom's friends forgot for the time being in their duties as ushers the story told in the carriage. The big congregation had soon filled the church and sat waiting for the climax. The sea of faces and richly colored cloths and silks and furs, here and there gleaming with silver and gold and jewels, moved incessantly in the brilliant yellow light from the vaulted roof, and the murmur from it grew more and more distinct.

Everywhere the faces were eager and happy in the coming happiness of the heroine and hero of the night, save where a mother thought of a daughter already given or to be given in marriage and the pangs of the following separation, or a husband missed on his own shortcomings since he stood up there at the altar plighting his troth. The masses of green foliage and white blossoms in the chancel waved gently in the draft from an open window and seemed to beckon the bridal party. Then from the vestry room came the bishop in the flowing robes of his high office, followed by the rector, and for a moment stillness reigned, and as they took their places before the altar the organ burst forth into solemn melody.

The bridegroom, leaning on the arm of his best friend, entered, and down the aisle marched the daintily gowned bridesmaids to meet the bride. Then slowly the procession turned as Miss Fielding entered the church upon her father's arm; and, preceded by the choristers, their youthful faces uplifted in the notes of the beautiful wedding hymn, the group of sweet young womanhood moved back toward the altar.

Just as the party halted in their places before the chancel rail the doors of the church were pushed open to admit the last guest. To judge of him by the slinking manner of his walk and the evident desire to be unseen as he made his way into the nearest pew, he was an unwelcome guest. But all eyes were to the front now, and no one said him nay. He produced a singular spot of unattractiveness in the throng of well-dressed, well-looking men and women about him. It was not to be wondered at that the young woman beside whom he seated himself drew her gown a little closer about her for fear of the effect upon her from touching this unclean creature. He was tall, but physical and mental disease had worn away the flesh. It had ever been there, which was necessary to give the massive frame its proper proportions. His clothes, like his garment of flesh, were too small. His boots had long been without the attentions of a shoemaker or blacking and brush. They were laced in places with bits of once white string. His trousers, barely reaching to the tops of his miserable boots, were baggy and threadbare and variously patched. His coat, which had once been black, was gray with dirt and shiny from long wear and buttoned so closely about him as to give the familiar and pitiful appearance of having nothing underneath. A grimy, ragged collar about his neck was the only bit of linen in his costume. His hair was long and unkempt. In his hand he held a dusty, greasy, old felt hat, which he fingered nervously. And his face crowned right well this picture of fallen manhood and misery. Some mishap had terribly disfigured his face. Great livid scars ran down his cheek and neck until lost from sight under his rags. One of his eyes was fixed and white and sightless, and in the other, bloodshot and wild, and the bloated flesh about it were the marring signs of the dissipated manner of his life, only emphasized by his harsh little rough and breath-rebelling with the sickening odor of liquor.

And yet there was something, had any one taken the trouble to notice it, in the delicate structure of his hands, the queer proud little shake of the head and the timid courtesy with which he found his sitting, which might have made the close observer wonder whether these things were only phenomena in their companionship with dirt and meanness or the flickering rays of a bright light just going out. But nobody did take notice, unless it was to casually comment mentally that one of the city's great army of half-frozen vagabonds was taking advantage of a few moments' grace in the warmth of the church.

The service was about to begin. The charming, sacred notes of the "Nuncius" came softly from the organ. The deep and musical voice of the bishop arose from the altar side, reaching distinctly to the most distant member of the hushed congregation. Slowly the bishop uttered the opening words of the wedding service, concluding still more slowly and impressively with the sentence, "If any man can show just cause why they may not lawfully be joined together, let him now speak or else hereafter forever hold his peace." As the last words died away the pending political campaign, a few facts are beginning to stand out clear and distinct, and are the real issues our citizens will vote upon next Tuesday.The candidacy of General Guild for governor will be successful. That much is conceded even by the Democrats themselves, and the Republican management of the state for nearly half a century, will be thereby triumphantly vindicated. The lieutenant governorship is the crux of the contest this fall, and over this comparatively unimportant office grave questions of politics and morality are to be settled.Two issues will be decided by this battle, one of little value so far as practical results are concerned and yet about which the popular view has unreasonably centered. The other of grave importance and one which will have a very practical application at the Massachusetts state house.The election of the democratic candidate, Mr. Whitney, it is said, will attract attention to the demands of Massachusetts at Washington for tariff revision. Give this matter careful consideration. Remember that Congress is Republican for at least two years and that tariff revision must come from the party in power. Last year this district elected one of our own citizens, Captain Weeks, to represent us in Congress. He is known to favor tariff revision. Will the election of Mr. Whitney give Congressman Weeks any assistance before the Republican committee on Ways and Means,

when he urges tariff revision?Will the entire Republican delegation in Congress, all of whom are pledged to tariff revision be strengthened by the defeat of Mr. Draper who is also personally pledged to tariff reform? Will the election of a Democrat to an unimportant office in Massachusetts carry much weight at Washington, as a practical matter? On the other hand, would not the election of Mr. Whitney be a direct challenge to Congressman Weeks and his associates, that they were derelict in their duty to us; an implication that they should use greater efforts, and in Newton a censure of one of our own citizens before he has even taken his seat. We do not believe that for the sake of being nothing but a "voice"
the citizens of Newton will cast aspersions on Captain Weeks, in whom they have absolute confidence, and who is THE man and not Mr. Whitney to represent us on the tariff question.The second issue here is one of personal morality. In these days of graft exposure, of folk in Missouri sending the bribe taker and bribe giver to jail, of Jerome in New York and Weaver in Philadelphia, all working to clear the well-spring of political morality, can the citizens of Newton, proud of their record for good citizenship, afford to cast their votes for a man who admits using improper methods to secure legislation and is therefore a menace to good government. This matter is clear and distinct. The election of Mr. Whitney will mean two things. First that the citizens of Massachusetts are willing to be known to the country, as approving a lower moral tone in their state politics, and second that in approaching a practical question like the tariff, they prefer a course of "innocuous desuetude."In other words, in straining after the goal of tariff revision by electing a lieutenant governor of Massachusetts, they are swallowing the camel of political immorality.Good citizenship demands the defeat of Mr. Whitney. Vote for Guild and Draper, and the entire Republican ticket next Tuesday.Mayor Weed calls attention in his budget recommendation this fall to the provisions of the acts of 1895 requiring the city government to directly apply the water income towards the payment of sinking fund and interest charges on water bonds, the payment of metropolitan charges and assessments for water,
the cost of the water maintenance and the balance, if any, towards water mains extension. This statute, if applicable, as the mayor thinks to this city, will completely change our policy of paying for permanent improvements. Heretofore, we have paid the cost of construction work from money raised on thirty year bonds, which in our opinion is perfectlyproper, as it places on future tax payers, a charge for something which they will enjoy, and relieves the tax payers of any one year from an extraordinary burden. The cost of maintenance, being a charge for immediate consumption of water should be paid from the annual tax levy, the cost of sinking funds and interest is also a proper charge to the annual levy, as well as the metropolitan taxes and assessments. While not strictly complying with the 1895 statute
in the past the city has paid these charges out of the tax levy and credited that levy with the income received from water rates. There has never, until this year, been a balance on the right side of the ledger, but the payment of a large amount of water bonds last July, and the cessation of interest and sinking funds thereon, now places the water department on a paying basis. If the 1895 law is applicable, this credit balance must be used for main extensions, which hitherto have been paid from bond money, and the tax payer of 1906 will not therefore receive equal treatment with those of preceding years, as he will pay not only maintenance expenses but will also build and pay for future permanent improvements. In addition they will not receive the benefit to the tax levy of the income from annual water rates.We have intimated that the 1895 statute is not applicable and while we cannot question the legal ability of the mayor and city solicitor we would suggest that the law is solely intended to apply to those municipalities which take water from the metropolitan system, and Newton does not. The law quoted is Section 21 of Chapter 488 of 1895, and in our humble opinion should be read in connection with Section 20 of the same chapter. The act is entitled "An act to provide for a Metropolitan Water Supply" and Section 20, after placing the water works and mains in charge of the local water boards, etc., goes on to say
"Said water boards, water commissioners, or superintendents shall distribute and control the use of the water so furnished, and apply meters, and extend the pipes" etc. Note the phrase
"water so furnished." Section 21 says that "the income received in each city or town from the water rates * * * shall be applied to the payment of the expense of maintenance" etc as the Mayor indicates. If these two sections are read together it is at once apparent that the Legislature was directing its attention solely to those cities and towns, to which "water (was) so furnished." We believe this point of sufficient importance to give it publicity and let the legal minds in the community solve its value.The annual budget for 1906 submitted to the aldermen this week by Mayor Weed, carries a total appropriation of $1,168,692.82, a reduction of $12,424.83 from the amount appropriated for the present year and $33,901.50 less than the departments estimate.The figures of 1905 have been closely followed by Mayor Weed in almost every instance, the only exceptions noted
are in the Fire Dept. where about $3500 is added for new hose, and repairs on apparatus, in the Police department, where nearly $1150 is needed for one new man and the usual and regular increase of salary for years of service; in the Buildings Department where about $700 is divided among various small appropriations; and in the Schools where $12,000 is added, all but $1200 of which is for salary increases and the $1200 for a school for backward pupils. The great reduction of course comes in the Treasury department where over $29,000 less than 1905 will be required next year.
This saving comes principally in the reduction of interest on the water debt.
The mayor deserves commendation for placing some figures where they belong and not recommending an amount which is manifestly less than will be required as has been the case too often in the past. This is particularly noticeable in the item for interest on temporary loans,
which has for years been fixed at $16,000
altho over $20,000 has been usually expended.Only one department head receives an increase in salary, the mayor recommending $500 additional for the city Engineer. No one acquainted with the excellent work of Mr. Farnham in this office will cavil at the sum which the mayor recommends as the salary. Mr.
Farnham has repeatedly proved himself
the right man in the right place and is a most valuable man to the city.It is gratifying to learn that our city expenses can be reduced and if the aldermen give the same careful attentionto the budget as has been given by Mayor Weed, an excellent beginning will have been made towards that dollar reduction in the tax rate for which we are looking next year.Right in the climax of the state campaign, it becomes necessary to begin active work for the municipal election which takes place early next month.For mayor, the Republican leaders have agreed upon Representative Edgar W. Warren of Newton Highlands and while there is considerable dissatisfaction with this arrangement, it is probable that Mr. Warren will be imposed for the nomination. On the democratic side, nothing definite is known, although there were vague hints that if Mr. Warren is to be the republican nominee, the democrats will place a strong man in the field.While the democrats may be able to make a semblance of a fight for the mayoralty, they will be so hopelessly in the minority in the selection of aldermen except in one instance that the republican nominees will be virtually assured of election.In Ward One, the party will probably endorse Ward Alderman William J.
Doherty, who will be renominated by the democrats. Mr. Doherty has made a creditable record at City Hall and fully deserves the honor which is coming to him. Alderman at large Riley in this ward is being strongly urged to run for a second term. Mr. Riley is one of the best men in the board and will exert a powerful influence if he consents to return.In Ward two, Alderman Dennison, retires after a service of three years. As chairman of the Franchise committee for two years, Mr. Dennison has rendered valuable service to the city in many delicate and important matters.
Mr. Edward K. Hall of Grove Hill is mentioned as a successor to Alderman Dennison. Vice President Carter will again be a candidate, and will expect to be president of the new board.West Newton presents a peculiar mix-up in the matter of aldermen and the present situation is much unsettled. Alderman Hunt, who has served the city on many occasions, positively refuses to run again, and while this decision is regretted by every citizen, it is recognized that Mr. Hunt has done more than his share in serving the public, and is entitled to a rest if he wishes. Alderman Palmer is expected to return to the board, and continue to render excellent service to the city. Alderman Ellis who has still another year to serve is contemplating resigning, but it is hoped that he can be persuaded to serve out the term.Ward four will see quite a change as Alderman Brown, the senior member of the board, retires and will be succeeded by Mr. Howard P. Converse of Aubur-dale. Alderman Baker of the Lower Falls also retires after four years in the board and Dr. Fred S. Griffin is being mentioned for the place.Ward five will continue to honor itself by re-naming Alderman Thomas W.
White of the Upper Falls and Alderman Frederic W. Webster of Waban.In Ward six, Alderman Bowen will be a candidate to succeed himself and residents of Chestnut Hill will present the name of Mr. Allison Burr in place of President Saltonstall. The latter has been a strong member of the board in a quiet but convincing sort of way and has succeeded in establishing the fact at City Hall that Chestnut Hill is a live part of the city.Alderman Fensig of Ward seven will be followed by Mr. Charles A. Clarke of Hinnewell hill and Alderman Weston will undoubtedly be unanimously returned.For school committee, the terms of Chairman Robert S. Gorham of Ward 3,
Mr. W. A. Knowlton of Ward 4, Mr.
H. E. Wells of Ward 5 and Rev. R. K.
Smith of Ward 7 will expire and so far as heard from, with the exception of Rev. Mr. Smith, all of these gentlemen will be returned to the offices which they have so ably filled. Mr. Smith who makes his residence in Westfield, has done faithful and valuable work and will be greatly missed. Mr. Gorham as chairman of the committee has become so valuable a man for the city that the call for his return is imperative.It will thus be seen that the prospects for any public interest in the city election outside of the mayoralty is quite remote, and it is more than probable that it will be quite as tame as it has been for the past few years.

It pays the buyer to buy from an advertiser and to say he saw the article advertised in this or that paper. The man who mentions an advertisement when buying goods really gets the best possible service, even better than the regular customer when this is possible. Why? Simply because the advertiser pays good money for his advertisement and he is glad to hear from it. It is a compliment to his good business judgment.

Taste for Rank Cigars

The tobaccoist noddled in the direction of a prosperous looking man who was just leaving the shop with a box under his arm.

"There goes a tobacco pervert, or reverts; rather," said he. "He has reverted to stogies after smoking the best cigars going for twenty years and more."

"His taste in tobacco has undergone a gradual degeneration, perhaps because he has always smoked excessively. Now his tobacco palate has become so jangled that he wants something rank and acrid, and so he's become a stogie man."

"When he first began to deal with me he paid $18 a hundred for his smokes. After a few years he began to complain to me that his eighteen dollar cigars tasted mean to him—said they were too sweet and insipid and that he had ceased to get any fun out of 'em."

"He named a brand that he had smoked and liked while up the State on a fishing trip. That brand cost $8 a hundred. He began to smoke them at the rate of about twenty a day."

"After a while he began to tell me that his eight dollar cigars tasted gummy and gluey and that he could smell the wrapper paste in the smoke. Just for the sake of trying him out, I gave him one day a cigar that I sell for 50 cents apiece and asked him to let me know how he liked it."

He came back the next day and reproved me for my facetiousness in inducing him to smoke what he called a Putridor. Then I knew that his tobacco taste was gone, and that nothing but the rank goods was ever going to satisfy him again.

"I tried him on a perfectly common and ordinary brand of Wheeling stogie, and that stogie made an immediate hit with him. Said it was the toothsomest piece of tobacco he'd had in his face for years, and from then on he's been ordering his stogies from me by the thousand. He loves the rancid taste and smell of the stogies and fairly eats them."

"His is a square out-and-out case of degeneration in tobacco taste. His over-indulgence in tobacco for a long period, very much in the same manner that of years has twisted his tobacco appetite into gourmet and epicurean become, in time, addicted to mouldy cheese and abnormally high game."

"His case is by no means unusual. Many smokers succumb, in time, to what they term the superior joys of the rankest imaginable cigars."

"One of my customers for many years is the head of a brokerage concern who, ten years or so ago, used to pay $30 a hundred for about as fine a cigar as comes out of the Vuelta Abapo district. He, too, now smokes a stogie that smells like a fire in a bone fertilizer factory."

"A severe attack of illness, I have noticed, will often pervert a man's taste in tobacco. Typhoid fever seems to have this effect more than any other ailment. Several of my customers, after having got over attacks of typhoid fever, have complained to me that their regular brand of cigars tasted and smelled abominable to them."

"These have fiddled around in such cases with different brands, generally milder ones, but, in time, they've all descended to rank kinds of cigars, whereupon they've expressed their delight and told me that such cigars have brought back to them the old acute pleasure that they had taken in tobacco before falling ill."

"Senator Depew found his tobacco taste degenerating nearly twenty years ago. He had been a great smoker of cigars, consuming from fifteen to twenty of the best a day from his early manhood. Then he found that he wasn't getting any good out of his expensive cigars, and he was puzzled to find—he himself told me so—that he was beginning to extract keen enjoyment from the aroma of what he knew to be rank cigars smoked by other fellows."

"As an experiment he got a box of extremely rank cigars, and he discovered that he enjoyed them tremendously. But he made up his mind that he wasn't going to become an addiction to his friends and associates, and so he decided that rather than yield to what he knew to be a degenerate appetite, he would quit smoking altogether. And he did quit—suddenly, but for good and all."

"The fellows who are always making up their minds to give up smoking are an amusing lot, by the way. The very great majority of them are always making up their minds to quit, and that's all, they never get any further."

"One of my customers, now a testy old chap, to whom I've been selling cigars for nearly a quarter of a century, has been swearing every time he came in here for a box of his brand during all that time that it was positively to be his last box."

"When I smoke up this box I'll be through with the infernal weed forever," he always declares, whacking his cane down on the counter. "It's all blamed foolish, this smoking business, when you begin to analyze it, and I'm going to stop it. A man that can't control such an idiotic appetite as smoking hasn't got any right to live. I'd quit right now and not buy this box, but there are some fellows visiting at my house and, of course, I've got to smoke along with them."

"The fellows at his house" was only one of his thousand and one excuses. "Of the men who really do make the stab at quitting I should say that about one in ten really sticks it out. The nine others backslide sooner or later."

"When I quit," one of them said to me not long ago, "I bully and hector and abuse my wife and children, and impose upon my employees, and go up and down every day with a chip on my shoulder, waiting for somebody to step on my toes so's I can take a try at knocking his block off, and am a nuisance in general to myself and to everybody else. Gimme two boxes of my old brand, and gimme 'em quick!"

"I have actually had the wives of several of my periodical quitting customers drop in upon me here for the purpose of asking me to try to jolly their husbands into beginning to smoke again. They've told me that their men folks were unendurable around their homes without their smokes, and that there was no living with the tobaccoless ones."

"I've got one good customer, a man who smokes both cigars and pipes, who has got a costly little way of quitting every six months or so. He gets a bit of an attack of what is known as liver, when his tobacco doesn't taste right to him, and then, attributing it all to his smoking, he promptly proceeds to chuck all of his cigars and smoking tobacco and pipes into the garbage can."

"Now, that's a pretty costly work for him, for he pays $22 a hundred for his cigars, and he always buys them in 500 lots. Moreover, he always has seven fine pipes, none of them costing less than $10, in his rack, one of them for every day in the week—as all pipe smokers ought to have, by the way."

"Well, when the one smoke goes wrong, into the can the whole tobacco layout goes, and my good man bawls at his wife that he's through with the blasted imbecile habit of smoking for all time, in this life and the life to come. I've known him to last all of three days, during the past fifteen years or so, at these tremendous quitting stunts of his."

"During his quits he drops in upon me with heavy scowls and browbeats me for selling tobacco, which he calls a fiendish business that ought to be exterminated by the police. Then, when the hankering for obacco has got him reduced to a state of dish-rag wildness, he sort of crawls in upon me in a very humble kind of way and tries to tell me that he's had a heart-to-heart talk with his medical man, and that the physician has sternly forbidden him to give up smoking under any circumstances, and then he orders a complete tobacco layout, including his usual big stock of cigars, and another set of pipes and smoking tobacco."

"He watches me carefully out of the corner of his eye to see if I'm laughing at him, and at such times it would be as much as his custom is worth for me to crack even a semblance of a grin."

"Some men with the tobacco quitting hunch try to quit by tapering off, but that scheme isn't of much account. The man on a reduced tobacco allowance is just about as miserable as the fellow who's chucked smoking altogether, and the chap who finds that tobacco is really injuring him ought to adopt the only genuine way, and that is to quit absolutely, without any tapering off or fiddling around."

"As a matter of straight fact, however, a lot of fellows get these tobacco quitting hunches who are not being damaged by the tobacco habit at all. Their ill proceed from other causes, such as over-eating and bolting their food, especially their luncheons, and overdrinking, too; and when they begin to lose their edge from these or any other causes they promptly attribute all of their mean feeling to tobacco and work themselves into a hectic flush over the injuriousness of the weed."

Y. M. C. A.

J. M. Shepler will address the younger men's meeting Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Boys over 14 years invited.

The Women's Auxiliary at their Rainbow Sale on Oct. 28 cleared about $230 which will almost pay the pledge of $300 which was made last year toward the Boy's work. Mrs. Moses Clark was given full charge of the sale last Spring and it is due to her untiring efforts that it was such a great success. At the December meeting of the Auxiliary a Christmas sale will be held.

Next Saturday evening George E. Garretson of New York City will give the weekly entertainment at the Association Rooms. His specialties are clever juggling and playing all kinds of musical instruments. This will be gentlemen's night. No ladies admitted.

Next Sunday afternoon the Sunday Club begins its sessions. Young men who have a purpose in life and wish to make the most of it are invited.

There has been a steady increase in membership during October. The junior department with 167 in its membership is at high water mark.

Perhaps some who read these notes will be interested in the Mechanical Drawing class meeting each week on Monday and Friday evenings, or the First Aid to the Injured class meeting every Thursday evening, or the Orchestra meeting every Monday evening, or the Normal class meeting every Tuesday evening.

The new feature of the Boy's Department has been the organization of the "Cabinet" that is modified after that of the president's of the United States. Six of the fellows have been invited to assume the responsibility of the six branches of the department, namely, Robert Ringrose, chairman Religious Work committee; Harold Moore, chairman Membership committee; Sydney Hill, chairman Extension Work; Walter Secord, chairman Bible Clubs; Seth Wood, chairman Social committee and Walter Barrows, chairman Rooms and Games.

Believing that the period of work for boys has ceased and that work with boys is the platform for the future, this organization has been promoted. The boys themselves have within them the power and the brains to do for themselves, and the work of the association is to bring out and develop this power. The chairman of each department is responsible for its success and together with his committee and the boys' work director plans the work and sees that it is successfully carried out. By this means the boys themselves have a large share in the plans for the seasons activities.

The chairman of the Religious Work and his committee arrange for the Younger Men's Meeting, securing the speakers, getting special music, arranging the program, etc., attend to the advertising and in every way possible try to make those services a success. Their plan for this season is to have short, wide awake meetings with the best speakers possible to be obtained.

The Social Committee plan for, and arrange the various group socials. Meet the new members, cause them to feel at home; and promote in every way possible the social life of the department, and so on through all the branches of the work.

Of the 40 candidates who came out for the basketball team, the most promising men have been extracted and the squads now stand as follows: For first team, Frazer, capt., Noden, Limb, Bailey, Porter, Billings, Wharton, Gooding. Second team, Wilson, capt., Field, Ward, Hanson, Chant, Bartley. Comm. The first team is to be coached by LaRose, second team by G. C. Bradley, captain of last year's first team.

At the Churches.

A union vesper service will be held this next Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock at Channing church in the interests of Hampton Institute and its work. All who feel an interest in the solution of the vast race problems before the country should not fail to attend.

An address will be given by Dr. H. B. Frisell of Hampton on the work of the school, and short talks will be given by Charles Duxson an Indian graduate of the class of '80, and by a representative Negro graduate from Alabama. Some of those old Plantation Songs, many of which embody the struggles of the enslaved souls for freedom, and contain the history of the black race of former years, will be sung by the Hampton Quartet. It is the aim of these singers to render these melodies with the real old time flavor, as sung by their fathers and mothers in "de days befo' de wah."

A very cordial invitation is extended to the public generally to attend this meeting. A collection for Hampton will be received.

THE HALF-DOLLAR MUSIC SERIES

A unique edition and one that will be of interest to all music lovers, whether teachers or students, is the "Half-Dollar Music Series," published by the Oliver Ditson Company. It consists of twenty-six different books, each containing sixty or more pages of music of proven acceptability. Eleven volumes of this series are for piano solo, some being in the very easiest grades for beginners. "Waltzes and Two-steps for the Piano" and "Easy Salon Music," while of a popular order, are not in the same class with the "rag-time" variety, which we regret to say, is found in many homes where one would expect to find music more in keeping with a higher standard of intelligence. Three books of piano duets are among the number, and other volumes are for the violin, mandolin and other instruments. "Thirty Songs for Children" is a book that will furnish entertainment to the little ones for many a long winter evening.

One of the latest additions to the series and a collection that is sure to meet with favor is "Popular Church Organ Pieces," compiled and edited by Hans Lichter. This book comprises fourteen numbers, all of which are eminently suited to the church service. The registration in every number is clearly indicated and they may be played on two manual organs. Raff's "Cavatina," Chopin's "Nocturne in G Minor," "Consolation" and "Spring Song" by Mendelssohn and "Lovely Appear" from "The Redemption" are among the contents of this book. One organist writes: "I am much pleased with Popular Church Organ Pieces; the type is good, the form convenient and the pieces therein 'popular' in the best sense of the word."

The prices of the volumes of the series are uniformly 50 cents, as its title implies. This includes postage. A complete catalog of the Half-Dollar Music Series, giving description and the contents of each volume, will be sent free, postpaid, to any address by applying to the Oliver Ditson Company, 151 Tremont Street, Boston.

Vote for Charles W. Bartlett for Governor

He stands fairly and squarely upon a platform favoring the placing of HIDES, IRON, COAL, LUMBER, and WOOD PULP on the free list. He is also in favor of RECIPROCITY WITH CANADA AND OTHER COUNTRIES.

READ WHAT GOVERNOR DOUGLAS SAYS ABOUT THE TARIFF, RECIPROCITY AND OTHER ISSUES OF THIS CAMPAIGN.

First and foremost, I want to say a word relative to labor legislation. The Republican speakers make the statement that all the labor legislation on the statute books was placed there through the influence of the Republican party. Every labor man in the commonwealth knows that the Democratic party has been the first to advance the labor measures, and that members of our party persistently voted for these measures long before they were adopted by the Republican Legislature. Almost every labor measure that was proposed last year was defeated by a Legislature overwhelmingly Republican. Why were they afraid to allow those labor measures burdens upon our industries are almost unbearable.

I notice the Republican speakers have made statements attempting to frighten our working people, and warning them of the panic of 1893, saying: "We do not believe you want to go through with another panic like that. We believe that you at that time got all of the reduction in tariff that you wanted." This all sounds very nice to the people who do not know or remember what caused the panic in 1893. The real fact is that the tariff bill, which was passed by Congress in the spring of 1894, did not take effect until nearly a year after the panic began. Therefore, it seems to me that agriculture gives to those states where the manufacturing interest is not so well established. In density of manufacturing product we have three times as much on every square mile as the great manufacturing states of Pennsylvania and New York. We may, therefore, justly claim that the revision of the tariff is of greater moment to every citizen of Massachusetts than it is to the citizens of any other state, excepting Rhode Island and Connecticut.

The Democratic platform asks for a definite relief, which will enhance the prosperity of every section of the state, while the Republican platform asks for "present action" in such a confused muddle of words as to leave it uncertain whether the tariff is to be reformed upward or downward, and whether the relief is to come now or at some indefinite future time.

The Republican party of Massachusetts has retreated under the shelter of an ambiguous phrase from the high ground which it occupied last year. Either the leaders of the party were sincere last year or they are insincere this year. What does "present action" mean? Does it mean free hides, free coal, free iron, free wood pulp, free lumber? Does it mean reciprocity with Canada? Does it mean anything that the people of Massachusetts, irrespective of party affiliations, are so generally demanding? Those leaders who talk so vaguely of "present action" are in reality opposing tariff reform. Their action consists in adopting ambiguous phrases to deceive the people; in "standing pat" on the Dingley schedules; and in ringing the alarm bells of the trusts. Such is their action at present; and that is probably all they mean when they put the phrase "present action" into their platform. Compare this paltering and straddling with the plain and direct demands of the Democratic platform!

What We Really Need.

Our platform asserts that a sensible relief may be had, without any disturbance to the business of the country, by placing upon the free list a number of the raw materials demanded by our industries, such as coal, iron, lumber, hides and wood pulp. This is a definite policy stated in definite terms.

Do our people want these raw materials placed upon the free list? Do they think that such action will redound to the interests of Massachusetts labor and to the lasting interests of Massachusetts people? If so, I think they should vote as they think, and thereby give the Democratic ticket such a majority as will challenge the attention of thinking men everywhere. If our people really want free raw materials, they should vote for the men and the party that stand unalterably and unequivocally upon a platform demanding them.

Free Coal.

In my inaugural address last year I recommended a memorial to Congress asking a repeal of the duty on coal. In the hearings before the legislative committee on federal relations I am pleased to say that this recommendation was approved by many of our leading citizens, irrespective of party lines.

It is safe to say that nine-tenths of the people of Massachusetts want free coal. Free coal affects the interests of nearly all of our people and of all our industries. Why not ask the national legislature for that which the prosperity of our state demands?

The answer to this is a general one. It is asserted that the tariff on coal is a national question, and that as patriotic citizens we should suffer patiently in order that the greater number of our coal friends in other states may have reasonable protection. But is this so? Will free coal injure the coal interests of Ohio, Indiana, Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Illinois? Our coal fields are in the interior of the country. They are not situated in the coal fields of New England. The tariff law the manufacturers of New England are placed at the mercy of the great railroad and mining interests of the United States. These great interests can and do dictate the price of coal, to the detriment of all our citizens. In an ordinary year Canada buys from us nearly three times as much coal as we buy from her. American manufacturers prefer American coal, and with free coal from Cape Breton there would be little danger of injury to the coal industry of our country. We should still use American coal, but the railroad combine would lose its power to dictate prices. It is a notorious fact that the leading bituminous coal producers of the South and West are formulating a demand for the removal of the duty on coal between the United States and Canada. The balance of trade in coal would still be with the United States at the ratio of three to one. Our output of coal would be increased rather than reduced. As Canada has for 30 years fixed her coal duty at about the same rate fixed by the United States, it is probable that free coal in our schedules would result in free coal in Canadian schedules. Because of the duty of 67 cents per ton we are at present paying nearly a dollar a ton more for our coal than we ought to pay. This dollar does not help the national government at all, but goes to the pockets of the coal barons of the country. Free coal, then, would not reduce the revenues of the national government; it would add every interest in Massachusetts and New England, and would be of far-reaching advantage to the people at large. Only the coal trust would suffer. Good business sense and the highest patriotism unite in the demand for free coal.

Free Hides.

Of course, the duty on hides should come off. It is a tax on industry that benefits a very few people and injures every one who wears boots and shoes, or who is engaged in the manufacture of leather or leather goods.

The United States Leather Company, a corporation doing more than half the sole leather tanning of the country, through its vice-president, Lewis H. Lapham, testified before the industrial commission in 1901 that the tariff on hides was a serious handicap to the business. He also testified "that the tariff on hides increased the price of domestic hides by the amount of the duty." This duty is 15 per cent. As it does not go to the government, it must go to swell the profits of the beef trust.

It is probably true, as Mr. Lapham said, that the duty of 15 per cent. on hides does increase the profits of the leather trust and greatly increase those of the beef trust. It should not be forgotten, however, that the leather trust is protected by a duty of 20 per cent. on leather, and that it in turn holds up the manufacturers of shoes, harness and other leather consuming industries, and charges them all the tariff will permit. If, as reported, the beef trust has now obtained a controlling interest in the leather trust, there will be no more quarrelling as to which trust gets the lion's share of the profits; they will both work together to get every cent possible out of both the duties on hides and leather. The tariff screws are to be applied more mercilessly than before. The proposed change in discounts on sole leather, which adds about 2 cents to the cost of every pair of shoes, indicates what is in store for us, although I am reliably informed that this discount change has been held up until after the election.

If the sole leather trust is enabled to successfully change its plan of discounts so that it will cost my company 2 cents per pair more for sole leather, it will be but a short time until the combinations controlling the other materials that enter into the shoe will alter or amend or rearrange their prices so as to get an increase in price equal to that of the sole leather trust. When that day arrives, and it is not far distant, it will cost my company 6 cents per pair more to manufacture the grade of shoes we produce. Our worst enemies are the tariff and the tariff trusts.

The total value of the hides of cattle imported into the United States for the 12 months ending June 30, 1905, was $14,949,628, while the total of all hides and skins, other than furs, exported for the same period, was $1,051,641. We can produce only about three-fourths of the hides needed for the supply of our home manufacturers of leather, and must annually draw about 25 per cent of our supply from the United States. A tariff tax of $2,500,000 upon this fourth results in an entirely unnecessary and unwarranted increase of about 11 per cent. in the price of all sole leather used by American manufacturers. When we consider that Massachusetts produces but little sole leather, the magnitude of this burden upon our manufacturers and upon our people becomes apparent.

To put $2,500,000 into the treasury of the United States as the result of our duty upon hides, we put about $7,000,000 of unnecessary tariff profit in the hands of the beef and leather trusts. This puts an iniquitous tax upon the sole leather industry of about $10,000,000, and disables that industry in its fight for the markets of the world.

Boot and Shoe Industry Handicapped.

In the boot and shoe industry Massachusetts produces nearly one-half of the factory and custom product of the United States, and more than four times as much as any other state. In the manufacture of boots and shoes the annual product of Massachusetts is more than $150,000,000, while the annual product of the United States is $261,000,000. New York, the nearest competitor of Massachusetts, produces but $35,000,000. A tax of $2,250,000 upon the hides imported—involving a subsidy to the beef trust of about $7,000,000 on domestic hides, makes a heavy load for the principal industry of Massachusetts, and, coupled with the duty on leather, a still heavier burden upon the consumers of boots and shoes.

Of the total annual value, $1,400,000,000 in manufactured products for the state of Massachusetts, the boot and shoe industry creates a product annually of more than $150,000,000, or about one-ninth of the entire manufactured products of the state. To handicap an industry of this magnitude by an entire unnecessary tax upon its chief raw material is a ruinous policy which the people of the commonwealth should condemn unceasingly until it is corrected. It is not patriotic to fasten a burden of this kind upon the boot and shoe manufacturers of Massachusetts for the exclusive benefit of the beef and leather trusts. But that is what it amounts to. The most careful calculations fail to show that the American producer of cattle received one penny more for his cattle by reason of this duty on hides. The trusts that squeeze the boot and shoe manufacturers apply the screws with the same pertinacity to the cattle raiser; and with inextinguishable greed drive both to the wall.

We ask for free hides on high patriotic grounds. Such action will not injure the cattle producers; it will help the manufacturer of boots and shoes, and it will help the people at large. If it decreases the profits of two or three obnoxious trusts it will help to give a "square deal" to all.

How It Affects the Consumer.

Every year the factories of our state turn out about 140,000,000 pairs of shoes at a factory cost of something less than $1.20 a pair. Careful estimates show that the average tariff tax on each pair of shoes is about 9 cents, or nearly 7 per cent. of the value of the shoes. Allowing an average of three pairs of shoes per annum, the saving to the 3,100,000 souls of Massachusetts each year would exceed $900,000.

The Democratic platform demands the immediate enactment by Congress of a dual tariff law, having the present tariff for its maximum with liberal questioned me—and I have consented—to act as chairman of a committee, representing this great industry, to go to Washington some time during the month of November and present our appeal to President Roosevelt, urging him to bring before Congress our request for the removal of the 15 per cent. duty on hides. If the voters of this commonwealth on the 24th day of November will cast a plurality of their ballots for Charles W. Bartlett and his associates on the ticket, they will assist this committee greatly in its work and will give the President courage to make a strong appeal to Congress, and Congress, realizing that Massachusetts has spoken in no uncertain way on this great question, will be compelled to take some action that to come to me? Simply because a Democratic Governor has rarely been known to veto labor measures. Why did the Legislature the previous year pass all the labor measures that were introduced and send them to Gov. Bates? It was simply because they expected those measures to be vetoed, which they were. They merely shifted the responsibility from themselves to Gov. Bates. Is not this fact enough to show that the Republican members of the Legislature this year believed that if they did permit the overtime bill and various other labor measures to reach the Governor, he would unquestionably have appended his signature to such measures?

Massachusetts and the Tariff.

For 10 or 12 years the interests of Massachusetts have been injuriously affected by our national tariff law; and our people now demand and will continue to demand, until the law is changed, such a reform in it as will enable us to procure the raw materials used in our manufacturing industries free of duty, that we may compete successfully with other countries in the markets of the world. We cannot compete in those markets merely by building the Panama canal or securing possessions in the Pacific ocean or the Caribbean sea, or establishing the "open door" in China. So long as our tariff laws deprive us of the right to buy freely the materials which enter into our manufactures we will be so handicapped that we can do but little business in foreign markets.

Twenty or 30 years ago when our manufacturing establishments were few and small, when our supply of raw material was abundant, near at hand and cheap, and when our home market was poorly supplied with finished products, our manufacturers flourished under and in spite of high tariffs. But recent developments have changed all this. Great manufacturing enterprises have been built up, which cannot be supplied by our local resources. Vast quantities of coal are needed to supply power to operate our machinery. Vast quantities of leather and lumber are needed to supply our shoe factories and our paper mills and furniture factories. New England can now supply but a small part of the raw material needed. For example, we have in Massachusetts alone 645 establishments for the making of shoes, but very little sole leather is made in Massachusetts—indeed, very little leather of any kind. And hence we must buy leather from the leather trust, at whatever price it may fix.

Again, in these 645 factories we must use enormous quantities of coal. But New England produces no coal; therefore we must buy it from the coal trust. We cannot buy either coal or leather abroad, because there is a high tariff on both. The result is that we are obliged to pay 15 per cent. more for our leather than we ought to pay, and nearly $1 a ton more for the coal we use. Such great and unnecessary

About Town

The advent of the aldermen in Nantum last Saturday afternoon was quite an attraction for the children.

It is said that the Whitney vote in Newton will be quite heavy. Why men who are proud of their high standard in civic affairs should consent to lower it on such a candidate is one of the paradoxes of political life.

The ladies of Auburndale have taken up the cudgel in behalf of better ventilation in the Burr school house. Preserve the health of the children at any cost.

Newton Highlands is all stirred up over the matter of covering the station platforms.

City politics are being discussed in a languid sort of way.

From the present appearance of the 1906 budget there will be a welcome reduction in the tax rate next summer.

Much has been said and written about the need of a new city hall, additional schools and other public buildings. This is true but how about the Newton Free Library? Every available space is being utilized and something will have to be done in the near future to relieve the congested condition.

Lieutenant "Bob" Harrison has always been considered a fine looking man but in his new uniform he is positively handsome. Long life and many years of service is the wish of his host of friends.

It was an awe inspiring sight and no doubt made many citizens' breasts swell with pride at the fine appearance of the members of the august board of Aldermen as they rode about in automobiles last Saturday on an inspecting tour of the public buildings and of grade crossings on the South side. Mayor Weed was the host and many no doubt thought it a fine thing to be a city father. They might change their minds after attending one of the midnight sessions of the board and listen to the mass of dry uninteresting and often unnecessary things which come up especially at some of the hearings.

A Newton gentleman was describing a local musical organization the other day and its varied success in giving concerts. He was evidently in a humorous vein when he stated that the first concert was given with faith, the second with hope and if a third was ever given it would be with and probably for charity.

Newton Centre Woman's Club

The first monthly meeting of the Newton Centre Woman's Club is always an important social function in Newton Centre. This meeting was held in Bray small hall, Thursday afternoon, two-thirty, October twenty-sixth, opening with the business session. The hall looked very attractive with the autumn foliage decoration. The entertainment committee of the club had planned for a "home talent" afternoon and that their plans were most successfully carried out, the following papers proved to the audience.

A glimpse of Brussels on a Holiday, by Mrs. Abbott B. Rice read by Mrs. S. S. Widger.

An original story, entitled "Rosemary and Rue" by Miss Everts.

A paper on Vacation Echoes, in prose and verse, by Mrs. Walter C. Brooks.

An original story, entitled, "A Legend of the Dolomite Region" by Miss Grace Dickerson.

Mrs. Marie Kaula Stone sang two groups of songs; three in English, and six Bohemian folk songs in the Slav language.

The president Mrs. Frank E. Anderson, assisted by the officers of the club, Mrs. Edgar M. Strout, Mrs. Rufus J. Smith, Mrs. Samuel B. Ward and Mrs. Joshua Dill, received the new and old members.

A dainty collation was served, and after a very social half hour the meeting adjourned.

The work of the club this year will be somewhat different from former years. The regular meetings will be held fortnightly, instead of weekly as heretofore. Class work has been introduced and classes in Art needle work, Dante, French Conversation and Physical Culture are free to members of the Club, and to others for a small fee.

A class in Art, conducted by Prof. Powers, who needs no introduction, is open to members of the Club by the payment of $2.00 and to others for $4.00.

Later in the season the club will conduct a cooking class to which members and others will be admitted by payment of a fee.

At the regular fortnightly meetings, the members will have the privilege of listening to the best speakers and talent the Club has been able to procure.

Judging from the successful start, this year promises to be one of the most satisfactory in the Club's history.

West Newton Women's Educational Club

The W. N. Women's Educational Club held its annual reception at the home of Mrs. Walton, Chestnut street, West Newton, Friday afternoon, October twenty-seven.

The President, Mrs. Richard Rowe, received with the following ladies: Mrs. E. N. L. Walton, Miss Amelia Davis, Mrs. Jane Hastings, Mrs. G. G. Phillips and Mrs. Harriett Burrison. The reception was in charge of the Hospitality committee, Mrs. Lowry, chairman, assisted by the Reception committee, Mrs. H. H. Hunt, chairman. The house was most beautifully decorated with the barberry with its vivid red berry, and pure white snow drop. The decorations in the dining room were especially attractive, the table with a large bunch of the barberry and the mantle banked with the same and the beautiful white snow drops the contrasting colors forming an exquisite and striking combination. The ladies serving in the dining room were Mrs. Lillian Cate, tea, and Mrs. Marion Fleming, lemonade. A large number of ladies were present and a most informal and pleasant afternoon was enjoyed by all.

General Federation Meeting

The Federation Bulletin announces the following as the preliminary program for the Eighth Biennial:

The eighth biennial meeting of the General Federation of Women's Clubs will open in the People's Church, St. Paul, Minn., Thursday, May 31, 1906, 9:30 a. m., and close Thursday evening, June 7, for which occasion the Program Committee submits the following outline, namely:—

All morning sessions will open at 9:30, and adjourn at 1:30 p. m. Conferences will be held in the afternoon from 4 to 6. Each Standing Committee will be allowed one hour during a morning session, and an afternoon conference of one hour. By this plan but one Committee or one Conference will be in session at one time.

The State Presidents will make their reports at a special evening session, which, it is hoped, will be one of the best features of the program.

Delegates of all foreign clubs will make their reports at one of the morning sessions.

Sunday afternoon, June 3, at half past four a vesper service will be held.

One evening will be devoted to a brilliant reception to be tendered invited club women in the rotunda of the capitol, one afternoon to receptions in private houses, and one entire day to out-of-door excursions and visiting

Minneapolis, which will probably be called "Minneapolis Day."

Music will be confined to one fine musical evening.

The Household Economics and Pure Food Committee will have an exhibition in connection with its report.

The suggested evenings are: "Women in Professions," "Journalists, Our Collaborators," and a possible Business Session, with the last for The President's Evening.

The Executive Board Meeting will convene at 10 a. m., Wednesday, May 30, and the Council meeting at 3 p. m. of the same day.

The report of the Nominating Committee and the election will take place Wednesday forenoon, June 6.

The foregoing arrangement for long morning sessions and afternoon conferences makes it possible for State Presidents to hold State meetings in the afternoon. Ample provision for State headquarters is being made by the Local Biennial Board.

Ione V. H. Cowles,
Chairman Program Committee.

The Monday Club

The Monday Club of Newton Highlands held its first luncheon for the season at the home of Mrs. Jones, on October thirtieth. A large number were present and an enjoyable luncheon was served. After that, the Rev. Thomas Van Ness lectured on "The Augustan Era," which, as the club is studying Italy this year, was in the line of their work.

The next meeting of the club will be with Mrs. Kerr.

Social Science Club

The monthly business meeting of the Social Science Club was held on Wednesday morning at the Hunnewell club.

A tribute was paid to the memory of Mrs. Dr. Scott. At the close of the business Miss Anna Whiting told of her trip to Norway and Sweden during the past summer. As Miss Whiting and her party followed unusual paths her paper was most interesting. Mrs. A. W. Fuller told of a recent visit to California and exhibited numerous fine photographs.

Next week Mrs. James H. Wheeler, Jr., will discuss "The Evolution of the New Woman and Some of her Problems." Mrs. Wheeler's paper will be supplemented by a short talk by Miss Venila Harrington the Boston secretary of the Intermunicipal committee on Household Research. Guests may be invited.

Fall Meeting of the Newton Federation

The fall meeting of the Newton Federation of Women's Clubs was held at the New Church parlors, Newtonville, on Tuesday afternoon, October 31, the president, Mrs. C. G. Wetherbee, in the chair. After a series of songs by Mrs. Robert K. Truette of Newton Centre, the president introduced Miss Helen A. Whittier, the president of the Massachusetts State Federation of Clubs, who spoke upon the work of the Federation. The various committees of the Federation are working along lines suggested by the General Federation, so that the whole country is turning its attention to the same matters, such as pure foods, civil service reform, public health, forestry and others. The Arts and Crafts committee is seeking to make life in the country towns more pleasant, to encourage village industries, to make life more beautiful and to strive to keep the boys and girls in their country towns rather than for them to seek the city. The Civics committee is still studying the tramp problem, fostering the stamps savings and investigating the conditions of public health. The committee on Education is working jointly with committee from the Association of Collegiate Alumnae, looking into the conditions of the elementary schools. They are interested at present in the introduction of medical inspection into the schools and the formation of Mothers' and Teachers' Clubs. The Household Economics committee under the leadership of Miss Anna Barrows is considering such questions as the water supply, the food supply, the sanitation of the home and the school, sanitary and scientific cooking.

The Library Extension and Settlement Work committee was formerly known as the Education committee and has charge of the numerous Travelling Libraries that have been given by the clubs for circulation in the South and West where there are no public libraries. This committee also has charge of the Model School in Georgia and settlement work in Tennessee.

The Legislative committee is striving to keep the clubs in touch with matters that are coming before the legislature or cases where legislation is needed. Miss Whittier urged that all the clubs appoint such committees even if they consist of only one person. She said that the Federation is striving to get the women to study things as individuals rather than as a club and to cooperate. She said that Mrs. Decker, the president of the General Federation, tells her that all the other Federations are looking to Massachusetts for light and leading.

The other speaker of the afternoon was Miss Georgie A. Bacon, chairman of the Civil Service Reform committee. She said that Civil Service Reform was not politics though persons often thought so, but in order to understand just what is meant, one must be more or less familiar with political conditions and methods. She went on to define civil service. Those interested in the subject are urging the necessity that public offices should be public trusts and those holding such should do so from ability and not as a reward for service to some political boss. This committee is trying to arouse a more intelligent public opinion and in doing so the women can play an important part. Seventeen federations now have committees looking into this matter. They are trying to form study classes, to secure the introduction of the study into the public schools and colleges and have met with a fair amount of success. The League offers a prize medal for the best essay upon the subject. The medal is of bronze and is from the studio of St. Gaudens. A reproduction of it will appear in an early number of the Federation Bulletin. Miss Bacon also urged that the clubs cooperate by appointing committees for the study of this subject. She also stated that the committee hopes to sound the death knell of the Spanish War Veteran's preference bill this coming winter. After the close of the addresses the ladies present had opportunity to meet the guests socially.

CLUB NOTES

The second meeting of the West Newton Women's Educational Club will be held on Friday, November 10. The subject is "Vacation Reminiscences" which will be given by club members.

The Abundant Review Club met with Mrs. Waldo Cole on Vista Avenue on Tuesday, October 31. The club is studying Browning this winter. The tragedy, Luria, was read.

The young people of the West Newton Unitarian church have organized a society with Mr. Fred W. Freeman as President, Miss Marion I. Bullard and Mr. Clifton F. Leatherbee vice presidents, Mr. F. Rogers Thomas treasurer and these directors, Miss Eleanor Frost, Miss Margery Davis, Miss Helen Freeman, Mr. Maynard Hutchinson and Mr. Clarence G. Haskell. A name and by laws will be adopted at a meeting to be held this evening. The society intends to hold religious meetings on alternate Sunday evenings during the winter.

GIVE THE BABY REST.

Don't Shake and Toss and Jump and Excite an Infant.

What does the nervous mother ask herself in moments when nerves are strained by pain or overexcitement of any kind? "Rest!" she chafely demands. "Leave me! Let me have quiet, darkness, freedom from effort."

We accord the nervous mother exactly opposite treatment. We answer as if entranced: "Rock me! Toss me! Shake me! Sing to me, shout, jump at me! Show me a light anything to keep me awake and excited!" Tradition takes a strong hold in the nursery. It is voted cruel indifference "to let a baby cry," says Woman's Life. The very mother who best recognizes the value of "a good cry" in calming her own overwrought feelings can least make up her mind to allow the same relaxation to the baby for whose nervous condition she probably is entirely to blame. The tiny baby's fretfulness is, as a rule, purely physical and especially dependent on overexcited nerves. Any mother who will allow her baby to grow for at least six months of its life in a restful atmosphere, absolutely unmolested beyond its natural pace of development, will have food for thought in comparing her results with those of the more common training.

LUNCHEON.

How to Serve the Formal and the Informal Repast.

In the formal luncheon if the table is a handsome wood without scratch or bluish it may be left bare, using small doilies under the plates and dishes and a centerpiece. This gives an unusual opportunity to display rare embroidery, but the fine damask tablecloth is always in good taste.

When luncheon is announced the hostess asks her friends to follow her to the dining room without formality. The soup is served in two handled cups, the heavy roast is omitted generally and few vegetables are served. The hostess may serve the salad, the dessert and the coffee, although these are more often served from the side.

At the informal luncheon tea may be served by the hostess with the teapot, sugar bowl, cream jug and cups and saucers neatly arranged on a large tray under a cloth, or the tray may be omitted, using only the cloth. Two or more courses may be served, all of the dishes arranged on the table, and the second course, the sweets and cakes, placed on side tables.

HOME FURNISHINGS.

Some Good Suggestions About the Kind of Articles to Buy.

Bedroom rolls can be bought which are hollow, where the pillows can be stored during the day after being aired.

If the dining room is small get a pretty serving table with a drawer or so, if possible, instead of a cumbersome side-board.

Do not buy dining room chairs with spreading claw feet or with backs curving out sideways, for when the time comes that you want to entertain many around the table you will find that you cannot get many chairs around it.

A round dining table measuring four feet six is the best in size for general purposes. Around this table eight people can be nicely accommodated, while it is not too large for four. But only six can be comfortably seated at a round table measuring four feet in diameter.

When purchasing a china or glass closet see that there are grooves in the shelves. If they are not there the furniture dealer should make good the omission.

When purchasing a dressing table get one that is high enough from the floor in the middle to permit you to get your knees under when sitting at it; otherwise you will find yourself a considerable distance away from the glass.

When buying a couch buy a box couch. It makes an excellent storing place for portieres, blankets, etc.

Never buy a chair till it is tested as to its comfort, and remember that a chair seat which seems slightly high from the floor will be higher still when the casters are in.—Good Housekeeping.

BABY HAMMOCKS.

They Are Convenient and Comfortable Aids to the Nursery.

Baby hammocks, ready to hang from convenient posts or independently provided with supports, are among the greatest joys of the nursery. Some of them—for the littlest tots—have an attachment which makes it impossible for the baby to tip the hammock over. Those for real "hush-a-bys" have

THE NURSERY BABY HAMMOCK.

High sides, with an extra piece set in at each end; there's no chance left for crawling out at the ends. They are made short—not much over baby length—and more closely woven than the usual hammock. The frames are strong, but simple—the kind that can be made at home. The hammock swings with the cords at the ends drawn through two uprights, which on the inner sides have hooks. When the hammock is to be at rest the cords are fastened to the hooks, and except for a little rocking of the lower part the hammock is immovable.—Philadelphia North American.

Does Your Door Stick?

If your door or bureau drawer sticks, do you know how to "fix" it? The complaint man in a furniture store said the other day: "This is a trouble with much furniture, especially that which is new. What do we do in such cases? We simply tell the customers to wet the surface of a bar of common laundry soap and rub it firmly over the parts of the wood that stick. This makes the surface smooth and slippery and in nearly all cases the drawer will slide easily, especially after it has been opened and shut a few times. This also is valuable with doors which, in new flats, are likely to settle or are apt to scrape at the top. Just use soap on them and save the trouble of calling in a carpenter, who will plane off the varnish. China cabinet doors with curved glass cause us a lot of trouble, but most of the tightness can be remedied by the use of soap and a few applications of sandpaper."

Don't Neglect Neuralgia.

Nothing is so terrible as severe neuralgia, and beyond a doubt girls acquire it often enough by the conditions of school life. Headaches in a school-girl usually mean exhausted nerve power through overwork, overexcitement, overanxiety or bad air. Rest, a good laugh or a country walk will usually cure it readily enough to begin with, but to become subject to headaches is a very serious matter, and all such nervous diseases have a nasty tendency to recur, to become periodic, to be set up by the same causes, to become an organic habit of the body. For any woman to become liable to constant neuralgia is a most serious thing. It paralyzes the power to work; it deprives her of the power to enjoy anything; it tends toward irritability of temper; it tempts to the use of narcotics and stimulants.

The Value of the Home.

Home is the one place in all the world where hearts are sure of each other. It is the place of confidence; it is the place where we turn off that mask of guarded and suspicious coldness which this world forces us to wear in self defense and where we pour out the unreserved communications of full and kindling hearts, says Woman's Life. It is the spot where expressions of tenderness, such as without any sensation of awkwardness and without any dread of ridicule.

At the Theatres

Coming Attractions

Park Theatre—"The Lion and the Mouse" which now holds the stage at the Park Theatre, Boston, has proved the greatest dramatic success that the New England stage has known in a long time, and the large audiences which are attracted there are a tribute to the appreciation which the public always has for a dramatic work of the highest, most absorbing type when acted by a company of that unusually high standard of excellence which is maintained by the organization selected by Manager Henry B. Harris for the production of this play. "The Lion and the Mouse" makes a distinct innovation in the development of the American drama, for Charles Klein, the author, has taken up a phase of national life which has never before been utilized for stage treatment, and which proves of intense interest as a result. He has taken one of the money kings of the country, a type of the financiers who manipulate the destinies of the nation, and made him one of the central figures of the plot, stern in his attitude to all, even to his wife and children, and relentless towards his enemies. The other vital element is a young and beautiful daughter, of the judge who is being driven to the wall with impeachment and disgrace as the result of the righteous decision against the trusts. To save his honor and his life, the daughter enlists her services against this relentless financial giant, and the plot reveals the struggle of two keen brains for the mastery. Each night from six to ten curtain calls after the third act make a demonstration that the Park Theatre has never known in all its history, and prove a great tribute to the genius of Mr. Breese and Miss Elliston.

Castle Square Theatre—William Gillette's play of the Civil War, "Secret Service," is one of the most stirring dramas dealing with that crucial period in American history. It comes to the Castle Square Theatre next week, and its representation of the scenes of actual warfare, of the exciting moments in a spy's life, and of the softer emotions of love and human sympathy, will be as moving and convincing as they were when the play was first produced some eight years ago. "Secret Service" has always pleased Castle Square patrons, and its return for a brief engagement of only one week will therefore be more than welcome. The play will be carefully staged at the Castle Square, the audience being given glimpses of life in the South as it actually was during the Civil War period. The leading parts in "Secret Service" will be played by John Craig and Florence Kahn. It will be followed a week from Monday by "The Sword of the King."

Majestic Theatre—Rev. John Snyder's play, "As Ye Sow," which Messrs W. A. Brady and Joseph R. Grisser have produced so splendidly at the Majestic completes its first month in Boston this week and a remarkable month of crowded houses it has proven. The second month is announced to begin next Monday, and seats are now on sale and in great demand for performances several weeks ahead. "As Ye Sow" tells a good human story in a hearty way, as though the clergyman who wrote it enjoyed writing it with his whole soul. The story is full of pathos, sentiment with plenty of comedy for after all that is what an audience likes to have combined with its theatrical entertainment. Matinees are given on Wednesday and Saturday of each week.

Keith's Theatre—The management at Keith's have certainly outdone themselves in the matter of their vaudeville program announced for the week of Nov. 6. The two greatest European acts in their line ever seen in this country will be included on the bill and the program will be a notable one in every particular. The August Family, claimed to be the highest salaried European organization visiting this country, will give an amusing and skillful exhibition of juggling with which they scored a big hit at this theatre about four years ago, and the Seven Allisons, a family of marvellous acrobats, will execute the most amazing feats imaginable in their line. Included in the surrounding show, among other notable entertainers, will be Smith and Campbell, the popular crossover talking comedians; Fred Rae and Gussie Brosche, in a satirical exploitation of "A Woman of Few Words"; Jack Norworth, monologue comedian and parody singer; Maximilian Pilser, one of the best violin virtuosos ever seen in the varieties; Louise Dresser, singing comedienne; Naomi Edwards, a skilful equilibrist; Lambert and Pierce, singers and dancers; the LePages, novelty jumpers, and the Holman Brothers, comedy bar experts. Harry Howard's wonderful troupe of ponies and dogs will be the special attraction for the juveniles. In the kinetograph will be shown the newest and most up-to-date motion pictures.

Grand Opera House—What will no doubt prove to be the melodramatic record breaker of the season, will be "For His Brother's Crime," which is announced as next week's attraction at the Boston Grand Opera House, introducing the romantic star and modern Hercules, Mr. Robert Gaillard, assisted by an extensive register of artists. This piece, which is in four acts, is the latest effort of that brilliant and progressive young playwright, Mr. Charles E. Blaney, and may be described as a revolving picture of everyday life as we encounter it. Possessing as it does, a plot that is novel and plausible, its characters drawn from life, coupled with the scenic production that is most magnificent and stupendous, there is hardly any wonder it has met with such wondrous success wherever presented; success so great, that it has become the absorbing topic among theatrical folks. Matinees will be given as usual on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday.

Travelogues—Burton Holmes, whose travelogues are now considered an annual event in the amusement and educational life of this city, is soon to be awaited with keen interest by lovers of the beautiful.

Read Fund Lectures

The Trustees of the Read Fund offer this fall to the Newton public a course of lectures which should prove entertaining as well as instructive to both old and young. Professor Wm. H. Pickering of Harvard Observatory, who is to deliver these lectures, has achieved a reputation both as a scholar and a public speaker. His lectures will be illustrated by lantern slides, many of which are quite remarkable.

Professor Pickering has spent the summer in Hawaii studying the volcanic and other formations, because many astronomers believe them to resemble closely the conditions on the surface of our moon. Professor Pickering's lecture on the moon has alone given him first rank among those who know how to interest an audience and at the same time give them the solid facts of recent scientific discoveries.

The lectures are carefully planned so

Police Paragraphs.

On last Wednesday Chief Mitchell inaugurated a change in the police department, which, it is expected, will add considerably to its efficiency.

So many complaints have been received the past year for better protection that something had to be done, and while the new plan should have a larger force to obtain the best results, a beginning has been made towards metropolitan methods.

The change is what is known as the long and short shift, and will add three men to the present street force, by bringing about a change in the care of the police stations. The force is divided into three platoons, a day squad of 13 men who work from 8 a. m. to 6 p. m. with one hour for meals and two night platoons, one of 21 men, the other of 16 men, who will alternate in the matter of hours. The first squad goes on duty at 6 p. m. and works continuously till 1 a. m. without lunch. The second squad begins at 1 a. m. and works until about 8 a. m. The members of these night platoons will alternate, so that each man will work from 6 p. m. until 1 a. m. returning to duty the next morning at 1 a. m. and thus having a 24 hour interval. During this time he is expected to take his turn, estimated at once in seven days, in house duty in his division. On alternate days this patrolman will have the short day, when he quits duty at 8 a. m. and returns that night again at 6 o'clock.

The new plan gives every part of the city but rural communities continuous police protection during the entire 24 hours. Under the old plan, the thickly settled villages were without police after three o'clock in the morning, except in the business centres and the outlying districts had no protection at all.

There is considerable support among the citizens for an adequate police force and the efforts of the Chief to improve his department will be watched with interest.

heard here in a series of five new travelogues, as follows: "Port Arthur, the Siege and Surrender"; "The Passion Play of Oberammergau"; "The Tyrolean Alps, from Innsbruck to Italy"; "Switzerland, Part I (Eastern)"; and "Switzerland, Part II (Eastern)"; and "Passion Play" is practically a new travelogue, being entirely re-written and re-illustrated, with the play of this last summer, "The School of the Cross," and Mr. Holmes' visits to the castles and palaces of Ludwig and Bavaria being prominent features in the lecture. The other three topics are the result of Mr. Holmes' journeyings in the Tyrol and Switzerland this last summer. There are to be two parallel courses at Tremont Temple, on five successive Saturdays, beginning November 18th. Course "A" will be given on Saturday afternoons at 2:30, and Course "B" on Saturday evenings at 8:15. Sale of seats for the course begins Thursday, Nov. 9th, at the Box Office.

Literary Notes

The first number of a monthly magazine published in Boston, entitled "In Doors and Out" has recently come to our desk. This magazine is devoted to art and nature and of excellence of matter and appearance is any indication, it certainly deserves the maximum of success.

We are particularly interested in the first number as it contains the first of a series of articles on architecture in Newton, accompanied by several extremely fine half tone cuts. The article covers a general description of the city in a topographical way and calls attention to the architectural features of such places as John Hancock's, Ernest Sharp's, Geo. A. Field's, Mrs. Oliver H. Story's, William E. Jones', George R. Whitten's, Walter H. Holbrook's and Edward D. Hale's. The story is to be continued in the next issue of the magazine and will that pupils in our schools, especially those in our High School can, in five evenings, get a conception of the vast and interesting field explored by the astronomer of today. Those who attend will surely be repaid. All the lectures will be given in the Bigelow School Hall, Park Street, Newton. Admission will be free to all, as in former seasons. Full particulars regarding subjects and dates will be found in our advertising columns.

AN OUTING

Aldermen Inspect City Works and Buildings

An Interesting and Instructive Trip For City Fathers

By invitation of Mayor Weed, members of the board of aldermen last Saturday, visited the various public buildings and public work which is now under construction in the city.

The party met at City Hall at nine o'clock and included Mayor Weed, Aldermen Riley, Doherty, Cabot, Hunt, Palmer, Underwood, White, Day, Ensign and Weston. Automobiles in charge of Aldermen Riley, City Engineer Farnham, Street Commissioner Ross, Chief Randlett, Agent Stone of the Health Board, Assistant City Engineer Porter and George Darmody of the city stable were taken, and accompanied by Buildings Commissioner Elder, Overseer of the Poor Fowle and Water Commissioner Whitney, the party started about 9:30 o'clock.

The first stop was at the Waban School house where extensive repairs had been made by Commissioner Elder during the summer vacation. From here the interesting work of bridge building over the Charles river at Boylston street Upper Falls was inspected. About $40,000 is to be expended for this work of which the city pays $6,000.

The Ralph Waldo Emerson School was then seen, and Alderman White was warmly congratulated by the aldermen on the beautiful building in his district.

The sewer pump at the foot of Oak street was an interesting place and Mr. Farnham's plan by which a long and expensive main sewer had been avoided, came in for considerable praise.

Water Commissioner Whitney did the chief honors at the pumping station on Needham street and the immense pumping engine which is the heart of our water supply was greatly admired.

A quick trip through Needham street, where the speed law was not often observed, brought the party to the bridge in process of construction over the railroad tracks at Boylston street. Work here was found so far along that Mr. Farnham stated that a temporary bridge could be laid for the winter season.

The excellent work on Stearns brook, where a cement channel had been built from near Walnut street to below Dedham street was the subject of much favorable comment by the members of the board. The work had been done by the street department on account of grade crossings, and was creditable alike to the City Engineer and Street Commissioner.

From here another rapid flight through the country to the Almshouse on Winchester street raised considerable dust and broke the speed law as well. The Almshouse was thoroughly inspected and so much time was spent that a trip through the Oak Hill district had to be abandoned.

Instead the party returned to Newton Highlands square where the work around the railroad station and the raising of Lincoln and Walnut streets to the new grade was seen. A brief visit was also made at the new bridge to be thrown across the railroad at Rogers street.

The next stop was on Parker street where the work in progress on Paul brook was viewed. This brook is to be treated with a cement channel in a similar fashion as Stearns brook, although portions of Paul brook will be entirely underground.

The recently completed work on Hammond brook at Chesley road was then admired and contrasted with the old channel, which can be seen east of Chesley road. The brook has been widened and deepened and the walls on each side given a coping of cement.

The winding channel of this brook and the fact that it passes under houses and streets between Summer street and the Playground appealed to the more adventurous aldermen and under the leadership of Mr. Ross a few made the tunnel trip to the Playground, while the rest of the party waited at the Engine house.

At fire headquarters, Chief Randlett had the horses called out, and the delicate fire alarm apparatus upstairs was also seen. One alderman, and one only, was brave enough to slide down the brass pole to the floor below.

A brief visit was made to the new bridge to be located at the crossing of the railroad at Glen avenue, and then the autos were turned towards City Hall where a substantial lunch had been provided.

Alderman Stone, Ellis and Bosson and Chief Mitchell joined the party at this time and after thoroughly inspecting the police station and court rooms, the machines were taken and a visit made to the Fire station in West Newton. Here the horses were called out and the Chemical engine examined. A stop was then made at the Lower Falls bridge on Washington street where the Metropolitan park commission completed a new dam last year.

The bridge at Concord street was then seen and City Engineer Farnham pointed out the necessity for a new bridge. Through Weston to Riverside and hence to the Weston bridge at Norum bega Park took but a little time, and at this point the necessity for an enlarged roadway or some flanking sidewalks was pointed out.

A brief visit to Anburland station where an offer of a tract of land for a park had been received, and from thence the party went to the city stables on Anburland avenue. Everything here was found spick and span and the pipe yard at Newtonville was the next stopping place. From there, the grading work at the Allison pit was inspected. The advent of seven automobiles in Nonantum attracted a swarm of children. They came running from all directions and the playground was soon thick with kids of all sizes and conditions. After picking a way through the throng of children the machines were speeded to the Crafts street stable, where Mr. Ross proudly pointed out the splendid horses owned by the city. An inspection of the surrounding grounds and of the Newtonville drain which is in the neighborhood took considerable time and it was near dusk when the party reached the police station at Newton. This was given a brief inspection, congratulations offered to the new police lieutenant-to-be Harrison and sympathy extended to Aldermen Riley and Stone, on account of the necessity of using a police station for a voting place.

At the engine house in Nonantum square the horses were called out and the handsome team of three black horses on the engine were greatly admired. The last point viewed was the recently completed work on Hyde brook in the rear of Hyde avenue and the party separated about five o'clock with many words of praise to Mayor Weed on the success of the outing.

Up to the High Standard

In every way Hon. Eben S. Draper, the Republican candidate for lieutenant governor, comes up to the high standard which the Republican party of the state adheres to in its nominations. There is not the slightest reason why a Republican who would vote for Gen. Guild as a candidate for governor should not cast his preferences also for Mr. Draper as the lieutenant-governor. Does the Republican party want a business man for its lieutenant-governor? It has him in Mr. Draper. Is there a captain of industry wanted, a man who has made himself a force in the business affairs of the state and nation. The party has him in Mr. Draper. Does the party want a man who has endeared himself to his thousands of employees by his high regard for their best welfare and exemplified in their living conditions at Hopedale, the seat of the Draper mill interests? It has him in Mr. Draper. What more is wanted? The tariff situation? Is that the objection which some party men find to Mr. Draper? If it is, how consistent is it? Mr. Draper has announced again and again that he stands squarely on the platform of the Republican convention, and any Republican voting for that platform must by the same token endorse Mr. Draper. Any further than that a man who votes for Mr. Guild as the candidate for governor, must, to be logical, likewise vote for Mr. Draper, because Gen. Guild himself says that Mr. Draper's position on the tariff is identically the same as his own. How can a Republican take one of these candidates and omit the other from his support, and be consistent?

High Prices for Stamps

General Advance made by Dealers

The prices of old postage stamps have advanced greatly during the last two years, and the stamp catalogues for 1900, advance sheets of which are already in circulation, show a general increase of 10 per cent. for stamps sought by collectors, while in a number of instances stamps have increased in value 100 per cent. or more.

The most notable jump has taken place in the value of the stamp issues of Timor. This is a small island in Oceania, but quite large enough to have stamps of its own.

One denomination of this country has advanced from 12 cents, the price two years ago, to $22.50 for the coming year, while another denomination, which was sold two years ago for 20 cents, is now listed in the standard catalogues at $25, and is hard to get even at that price. The dealers and collectors do not seem to know the reason for its great scarcity, which was discovered only when an attempt was recently made to obtain a number of the stamps.

It is often the case that a stamp that has for years been rated as a common variety is catalogued at a low figure for the reason that there is no demand for it, when, as a matter of fact, there are very few to be had. A good example of this is the Dutch West Indies twelve and a half cent gray Queen's head stamp, issued by Holland. The catalogue sets down the value of this issue at eight cents. But not only would a collector have a hard time to get one at that price; he would find it very difficult to secure one at any figure.

The largest stamp firm in England, with a stamp supply valued at $800,000, is said to have just three specimens. The largest dealer in New York, with a stock of $1,000,000, owns a similar number, while the majority of the small dealers have not even one. Yet the stamp is still included among the common varieties.

One of these days a new catalogue will come out with this issue named among the great rarities and the price will be almost beyond the means of the ordinary collector. There are many other stamps which have made a quick and large advance in price, although, of course, not always in the same proportion as that made by the Timor issues.

It almost seems as if one can't pay too much for a rare stamp. The premium on stamps costing a thousand dollars or more has been known to double and treble in two or three years. Of course the scarcity of the issue is the real cause of the jump in value, but then this scarcity is due to the rapidly increasing number of collectors, of whom already there are estimated to be more than 700,000 in this country alone.

The probability is that many so-called common stamps which are now catalogued at a low figure will soon take an unexpected flight in price and cause stamp collectors much vexation at their failure to secure specimens while the prices were down. Stamp collectors as a rule have their eyes fastened on the prevailing rarities and do not pay much attention to the common varieties thinking that they can easily complete their collection at any time they may see fit.

But in this they are often mistaken. Many stamps are now rated at a low price, say, 10 or 15 cents, and yet many dealers have not a single one on hand, and indeed a collector would have some trouble in securing one from any source. The fact of the stamp's scarcity finally dawns upon the dealer, the price increases, and before one realizes it the price is soaring to the skies.

The tendency of prices seems always to be upward, rarely down. Many collectors who have been buying stamps for years have specimens for which they originally paid a few cents and which are now valued at a hundred dollars or more. Of course there are some cases where a certain issue has taken a big drop in value, but these are exceptions.

The collection of a well known New Yorker was sold in this city not long ago and the high prices brought astonished even the dealers themselves. The interesting feature of the sale was the difference between the prices originally paid by the owner when he bought the stamps years ago and the prices paid at the sale. He had made a practice of writing the purchase figures on the back of each stamp, and there were many instances in which stamps for which he had paid 10 or 15 cents brought sums ranging from $5 to $150.

Still the older collectors enjoyed superior advantages, mention of which will make the mouths of the latter day stamp enthusiasts water. The greatest windfall in the history of stamp collecting was that of the years 1884 and 1886, when the Government officials at Washington gave away hundred of complete sets of department stamps, such as those issued for the State, Agriculture, Executive and Justice Departments.

The use of these stamps had been abandoned, and as there were many sets of them left they were given away to any one who would take the trouble to come after them. Now many of these stamps command very high premiums. The Department of Agricultural issues given away at that time are worth $30. Those of the War and Executive departments have steadily advanced until they range from $40 to $45, while the State Department stamps are the rarest of all and at the present time bring $75. —N. Y. Sun.

Auto Cooking

A sensation was created the other day on the Pelham Bay road by a touring car that had a kitchen annex. While the machine was merrily bowling along at some thirty miles an hour a negro chef prepared luncheon over a little oil or possibly electric stove.

Spectators laughed and cheered; small boys ran after the auto. It seemed either the limit of human progress or the quintessence of American humor.

The car was light green, enclosed with glass as to front and sides. Three men and three women passengers sat on the side seats facing one another.

Between them a narrow folding table that had been lately used as a card table and a photograph stand was set with plates, cups, knives and forks. The table had racks like those used on ship-board to keep the dishes from jolting away.

The kitchen was a folding sort of box that hung over and projected from the tail of the car. It was just big enough to contain the small stove, and an array of long spoons, pots and pans of aluminum hung on hooks.

The negro chef, belted at the waist and securely strapped, stood on the threshold of the kitchen and manipulated the utensils. Just at the car came near the chef was heard to shout:

"Don't go so fast, boss! I done lost a lamb chop back on de road."

"Slow down a little," said a lavender veiled woman to the chauffeur.

"What's that? A lunch wagon?" inquired one of the spectators.

"I'll find the lamb chop, mister," eagerly cried a small boy.

The tourists did not seem to find anything funny in the situation. As the car slowed down they unfolded their napkins and prepared to attack the sizzling chops that were not lost by the wayside.

A rich boarding house aroma mingled with the smell of gasoline and the flowery effluence of country fields. A can of condensed coffee and a tall bottle marked "Rhine" showed that the luncheon would be complete.

When the car had passed on, the oldest inhabitant of Pelham Bay turned another spectator and said:

"I guess this is about the limit of what I'm going to see. Only two things more could happen—to have people born in them mobiles and to throw the corpses of the dead overboard like they do at sea."—N. Y. Sun.

Pres. Roosevelt on Political Integrity.

Above all we should treat with a peculiarly contemptuous abhorrence the man who, in a spirit of sheer cynicism, debauches either our business life or our political life.—President Roosevelt at Atlanta, Ga., Friday, Oct. 20, 1905.

"If I had been Governor of this Commonwealth, I would under the circumstances disclosed by the investigation, have vetoed that bill (the Henry M. For I hold that it is far more important to guard sacredly the purity of legislation and to rebuke the lobby than that any measure of merit should be hastened in its passage. I hold that one of the highest duties of the Governor of the Commonwealth is to protect its fair name from legislative scandal and to protect the people from the improper control of legislation by secret influences."

Street Railway Notes

The Boston Elevated Railway Company have recently put in additional tracks in Park Square, Boston, for the convenience of those who patronize the Boston and Worcester Trolley Air Line cars. The cars commenced this Tuesday afternoon to use the new tracks at their terminus. Heretofore cars of the Boston &amp; Worcester Trolley Air Line have been going around the loop, so-called, in Park Square, which surrounds the monument. Now the cars run through Park Square right up to Boylston Street, which makes the route about seven hundred feet longer and just so much nearer and convenient for persons wishing to take or leave the cars for the theatre and shopping district.

The new terminus will be much more convenient for the public and no doubt will be much appreciated. It is believed that the new terminus will influence passengers going to and from Boston to continue on the Boston &amp; Worcester Cars between Boylston Street and Chestnut Hill, rather than to change cars at Brookline Village, as has been largely done in the past.

Street Lights Needed

Probably no Business Portion of the city is so poorly lighted evenings as the old Post Office Square, Upper Falls.

The city furnishes one light on top of the Wheeler Building that lights up the top of the roof and casts a shadow of a few feet over into the street.

This lamp is one of the first ones invented and works automatically—lights up when in good order for 4 or 5 minutes then becomes exhausted and it takes several minutes to reoperate before it can shine again. If all the lights in the city were like this one to cents per night would be a great price to pay for them.

When the stores are all rented the lights from the windows furnish about all the illumination this locality receives.

This square is the junction of four streets all quite narrow and being in darkness makes it quite dangerous for pedestrians. All the surrounding property is heavily taxed, why should not the square be properly lighted by the city?

Mrs. Sawin

The many friends of Mrs. H. Chapin Sawin will be interested to learn that she is making her home this winter in Farmington, Maine, acting in the capacity of House Mother at the long established and well known Abbott School.

This position was brought to the attention of Mrs. Sawin late in the summer as presenting a unique and welcome opportunity for her to continue the work of character-building among young boys a work that was so dear to the heart of Mr. Sawin.

And so to her own surprise as well as to that of her many friends, the month of October finds her spending her days and evenings in the company and companionship of twenty bright, energetic, active boys. It is the capacity of home-maker that she is filling and already we are pleased to learn that she is not without friends in the Pine Tree State.

The school was originally founded in 1844 but a fire in 1900 terminated its existence for some two years and for the last three, it has been under entirely new management.

What Country Place?

Mr. Herman Ridder gave Mayor McClellan a private dinner at the Manhattan Club last night.

The other guests were John J. Delaney, Herman A. Metz, Patrick F. McGowan, William J. Amend, Herman Boerner, H. R. Hirsch, Otto Hubach, Clemens Huenewinkel, Norbert Kantor, Julius Krause, Henry H. Meyer, Franz Rackow, Franz Richter, Bernard H. Ridder, Henry Ridder, George Von Skal, S. Louis Schmitzer, Felix Senff, Casper Sturenburg, Max Wiederhold and George Zeydel.—New York Sun.

An automobile, containing its owner, F. L. Daggett of Newton, Mrs. Daggett and two friends, suddenly burst into flame while standing on the road in Winchester Sunday. The fire department, summoned almost at once, was just in time to save the machine from absolute wreck by the use of a 2-inch hose.

Mr. Daggett and his party were on their way home, about 5.30 P. M., when he decided to stop on the Mystic Valley parkway, near the Unitarian church, to light his lamps and get some water from the nearby river. As he alighted one of the ladies excitedly called Mr. Daggett's attention to a peculiar light beneath the auto, and he discovered at once that the interior of the machine was ablaze. In a moment flames burst from under every part of the body, streamed up the sides and glowed in the compartment under the seat upon which sat Mrs. Daggett and her friend.

Smoke enveloped the vehicle and the crackle of the woodwork told Mr. Daggett that the fire was beyond his control.

Though hampered by the buggy top, the women had succeeded in reaching the ground unscathed. A hose wagon summoned in the meanwhile soon had a stream on the flames and subdued them, the gathering crowd standing at a respectful distance, apprehensive of the explosion of the 10 gallons of gasoline that the tank contained.

You will be surprised at the kind and amount of work that can be done with a motor of this size, such as sharpening skates, scythes and all kinds of cutlery, polishing and grinding metals, splitting and cutting up stock for windows and door screens, etc.

The motors are cheap and cost of operation is very small. Let us help you in any matter pertaining to power.

The Registrars of Voters have made arrangements, if petitions for recount of the vote for lieutenant governor are filed to begin that task tomorrow afternoon at one o'clock. It will be a long, thankless, and useless job.

WHITNEY CARRIES CITY

Has a Plurality of 119 Over Draper

Guild Receives 1000 Plurality and Dana Has a Good Vote

Election day in Newton last Tuesday was very tame indeed, and with the exception of the very great interest manifested in the result of the vote for lieutenant governor, the returns were received with but little comment.

4066 ballots were cast, or about 76 per cent. of the total registration.

General Guild received a vote of 2704 which compares favorably with the Bates vote of 2866 of two years ago, the last off year and in which a trifle heavier total vote was cast. The Guild majority of an even 1000 therefore is about equal to that of 1190 obtained by Gov. Bates in 1903. Guild carried every ward in the city save Ward 1 where Bartlett had a plurality of 5.

The vote for lieutenant governor was a great surprise for the political prophets, for while Whitney was conceded a large vote in the city, a plurality in his favor was hardly expected. But such was the case and his vote of 2219 was 119 larger than that received by Mr. Draper. Whitney carried wards 1, 2 and 3 and received a good vote in all the others. His vote showed that at least 500 persons who voted for Guild must have voted for the democratic candidate for lieutenant governor.

Senator Dana received a fine vote altho not quite so large as in 1903 and of course considerable smaller than his vote in the presidential year of 1904. But 1788 majority in a vote of about 4300 isn't so very bad, when you come to think of it.

Messrs Lowell and Lothrop managed to pull out a victory with a lead of over 1800 votes over their nearest rival and their claim to the office seems fairly well founded. Mr. Murphy, with a vote of 1011 ran considerably ahead of his colleague who received but 876.

Mr. Chapin, state treasurer, received the highest vote cast for any one candidate, his total of 3091 being just 5 ahead of Senator Dana, who had second place. The democratic candidates below the office of lieutenant governor received the normal Democratic vote of about 1100.

The returns came into the City Clerk's office at City Hall in good time, as the ballot was short and easily counted. Precinct 2 of Ward 2 was received first at exactly five o'clock and Ward 7 as usual brought up the end about seven o'clock.

Thanks to the careful arrangements of the City Clerk, the election passed off without trouble and everything worked as smoothly as one could wish.

Election returns were received during the evening at the Newton and Hunnewell clubs, but without marked enthusiasm, and only languid interest was displayed by those present.

The detailed vote of Newton is as follows:

Twenty-Fifth Anniversary

The Monday Evening Club celebrated its silver anniversary last Monday evening at the Evans. Past and present members and their wives were invited. It was also ladies night and the wives of the members graced the affair adding beauty and variety to the occasion.

This club was organized Nov. 5th, 1880 and has borne out its role of membership from seventy five to one hundred. Nearly one quarter of these have died during the twenty-five years since the club was formed.

Many prominent citizens of Newton are and have been members and enjoyed the pleasures and companionships of its semi-monthly gatherings.

The reception at 7 was informal and at 7:30 the guests were ushered into the large, fine dining room where a bountiful supper was served.

Hon. Henry E. Cobb presided, and after a short, congratulatory, welcoming address, he called upon Mr. Thomas Weston, the historian of the club, who described its formation and gave a short history from its inception to the present time. His able and instructive address was intensely interesting and his admirable quotations from ancient and modern poets and writers showed his ripe scholarship and how conversant he was with them. He was heartily applauded at the close. Prof. H. H. Powers followed in a speech overflowing with anecdote and witicism, which was highly enjoyed by all.

Rev. C. H. Daniels, formerly of Newton and now of South Framingham, made a short address full of wit and humor and abounding with kindly feelings and memories, which was thoroughly appreciated.

Mr. H. C. Hardon, the veteran school-master, was the last speaker who referred to the great pleasure he had enjoyed as a member of the club. The exercises closed by the guests rising and singing "Auld Lang Syne."

It was a successful and interesting meeting and was greatly enjoyed by all present.

Reunion

A reunion of the N. H. S. class of 1872 was held Oct. 26 at the home of Mrs. Fisher, Webster st., West Newton. It was exactly a third of a century from the date of graduation. The members of the class present were Mrs. Clarence Wiswall (nee Harriet Boit) of Reading, Mrs. George Lentell (nee Abot) of Wilmarth, of Canton, Mrs. Henry Bacon (nee Ruth Fuller) of Newton, Mrs. Chas. Fisher (nee Elfreda Emerson) of West Newton, Miss Alice Rand (nee Nellie Butler) of West Newton, Mr. John Kent of Concord, N. H.,

High school-master, Mr. Lawrence Bond of West Newton, lawyer, Prof. of Music L. C. Stanton of Newton. The only surviving member not present was Gordon G. Gammons, lawyer, of Portland, Ore., Letters of regret were received from him and the three teachers living. E. B. Sampson of New York, Miss Carrie Spear of Newton and Miss Lydia Dodge of Scituate.

Mrs. Stanton, Mr. Bacon, Mr. Fisher, Mr. Wiswall, Mr. Lentell and Mr. Rand were present also as invited guests.

Prof. Stanton presided and remarks from him, Mr. Bond and Mr. Kent were much enjoyed. Mr. Bond contrasted the High School of today with that of 1872. Then there were 13 to graduate, in 1905 there were 58 in classical, 32 scientific and 54 in the general course. A great change was noted in the variety of courses provided and the fact that at that time very few girls fitted for college, while now the number of girls exceeds that of the boys. Of the class of 1872 Miss Ranlett had attended Wellesley.

An original poem "The Minute Man" was read by Miss Ranlett and the Class History was compiled by Mrs. Fisher, recalling that as given in 1872 and telling the interesting events in each life since then. Touching reference was made to Allan Lincoln, Frank Bacon and Nelson Parker, the members of the class whose life's history has closed.

The remainder of the evening was spent in delightful social intercourse while also enjoying the collation served by the hostesses by Mrs. Fisher and Miss Ranlett.

D. A. R.

On Wednesday afternoon at the Newton Club House, was held the second meeting of the Lucy Jackson Chapter, D. A. R. An informal reception was held at three o'clock by the hostesses, Mrs. John N. Rice, Mrs. Dexter Puffer, Miss B. A. Alexander, Mrs. Henry C. Thompson and Mrs. Arthur G. Hosmer; after which the Daughters and their guests were delightfully entertained by Mrs. Kate Upson Clark of Brooklyn, N. Y., who read a very bright paper, entitled "An Obscure Heroine of the Revolution."

At the conclusion of the reading, dainty refreshments were served.

SOMETHING THAT WILL INTEREST YOU.

Last spring I realized from the unprecedented advance in leather of all kinds that footwear this Fall would be much higher. I, therefore, contracted for the greatest amount of shoes that I ever ordered at one time, with the distinct understanding that the goods I bought were Not to be cheapened in the least. As long as my present enormous stock lasts, I shall sell at old prices, but I can not tell about the future.

If you need footwear, I certainly am prepared to cater to your wants at the very lowest cash prices that any one can quote.

I have a great array of styles, from the heavy work shoe for men to the dainty party shoe for ladies. My shoes for boys, misses and children are noted for their sturdy wearing qualities.

About Town

The city authorities have discovered and destroyed 197 nests of the gypsy moth on Waverley avenue. With such a number on one street the condition we will be in next year unless radical steps are taken by individuals as well as the city, can be imagined.

On Washington street near the Armory one day recently, three Italian children, a boy and two girls, who were hauling a small cart, were the victims of an unwarranted assault. A group of boys were standing on the corner and one of them rushed out and knocking the boy down kicked him several times. This affair in itself may not mean very much but it is becoming more evident daily that something must be done to stop the abuse to foreigners. We allow them to enter the country and we are duty bound to give them full protection.

A pretty sight the other day in West Newton was a man feeding a flock of pigeons. They were very tame and would light on his hand and on his shoulder. Quite a crowd gathered and seemed to enjoy the spectacle.

There seemed to be but little interest in Newton on election day and the polling places were almost deserted. Two candidates for the various offices at the municipal election would probably wake things up.

A certain citizen, the other day, was complaining of the high tax rate in Newton when his companion replied that it was worth more to reside in the Garden City and to his mind it was so desirable and attractive that it was like a bit of Heaven. The first speaker replied that he did not want any of that kind on earth for he feared he would not appreciate the one above as much when he got there.

At the Theatres

Coming Attractions

Tremont Theatre—The Tremont Theatre offers next Monday, for a limited engagement, George Ade's pungent comedy, "The County Chairman," with Maelyn Arbuckle in the title role. This play will be a welcome relief to lovers of that kind of stage entertainment which invites laughter without effort. Mr. Ade is a writer whose efforts have always been warmly received in Boston, and as "The County Chairman" comes for the second time with the original cast, it is safe to assume that crowded houses will greet the favorites who scored here so distinctly last season. Heading the list is the well-known comedian Maelyn Arbuckle, who has been measured to a nicety by the playwright in the role of Jim Hacker, and whose portrayal of the bluff, good-hearted politician has made it one of the few lasting impersonations of a decade. In act three, the great dramatic situation of the play is told in an interior representing the campaign headquarters, and the last act illustrates the reading of the election returns. Threaded through the woe of comedy is a tender love story which appeals to both sexes equally.

Majestic Theatre—The sixth week of the successful engagement of the rural drama, "As Ye Sow," will begin at the Majestic Theatre next Monday evening. Each performance is a succession of crowded houses and the large advance sale indicates that the engagement may be indefinitely prolonged. "As Ye Sow" entertains. Its plot is probable, its people real and its frank appeal to the auditor's love of a lover—and especially a suffering one—its frequent indulgence in impassioned praise of patriotism, virtue and home, and its wholesome folk-like comedy lend it qualities that find immediate liking at the public's hands. Nothing but praise is heard of the company. There is no bad acting and those especially worthy of mention are Miss Helen MacGregor, Frank Gilmore, Ben Cotton, little Olive Wright, Frank McGregory, Douglas Fairbanks, Frank Roberts, Marian Chapman and May Macabee.

Castle Square Theatre—With "The Sword of the King" next week, romantic drama will hold the stage for a series of afternoon and evening performances. The play has for its scene the England of William III's time, and its hero and heroine are involved in a political plot that forms one of the most exciting episodes of the play. The heroine is a high-bred aristocrat who is in love with a soldier and follower of the Prince of Orange, and their numerous adventures give opportunity for no little vigorous action and interesting scenes. The end is a happy one for everybody. The hero in "The Sword of the King" will be played by Charles Mackay, who returns to the Castle Square Company after an absence of several years. His welcome is sure to be hearty and spontaneous. Miss Lillian Kemble will act the heroine.

Keith's Theatre—The vaudeville program announced from Keith's theatre for the week of Nov. 13 promises to be an exceptionally strong bill in every department, and particularly so in comedy. Wilfred Clarke, the popular "legitimate" comedian, assisted by a competent company of three actors, will present the seemingly funny comedy sketch, "No More Trouble," which is an adaptation from the French dealing with a man who possesses a chemical which will freeze a human being without destroying life. The fun arises from the fact that he gives his stepmother the potion and then is informed by a friend, who has the antidote, that he must have left it in Australia. Another extremely funny and interesting comedy sketch on the program is "Managerial Troubles," offered by Nick Long and Idaline Cotton, prime favorites hereabouts, dealing with the troubles of a manager when sickness overtakes the leading comedian of the company. Included in the surrounding show will be Fred Ray and Juliet Wood, in a burlesque specialty, "Roman Satire"; Clifford and Burke, blackface comedians; Bert Levy, in an artistic idyll of the studio; the Majestic trio, "real coms" comedians, singers and dancers; Meeker-Baker trio, comedy acrobats; Clark and Florette, pleasing singers and dancers; Willie Gardner, novelty dancer on roller and ice skates, and the Chameroys, hand-to-hand balancers and equilibrists. The kinetograph will show the usual new list of comedy and interesting motion pictures.

Grand Opera House—Lillian Mortimer, the well known actress of emotional roles comes to the Boston Grand Opera House next week, in her latest play, "No Mother to Guide Her," supported by a company of unusual strength. In this new play, Miss Mortimer will make a radical departure from the line of parts she has been identified with in the past by essaying a character comedy role. "No Mother to Guide Her" has besides its absorbing theme many original situations, interspersed with bright comedy lines that reflect great credit on the authoress and star. A wealth of scenery is necessary in order to fitly give this play its proper atmosphere and which has been provided by Messrs. Decker and Veronee, the managers of this creditable attraction. Matinees will be given as usual on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday.

THE STATE ELECTION.

There is much food for reflection by the leaders of the Republican party in the figures of Tuesday's election. In Newton over 500 citizens who cast a vote for General Guild for governor, also voted for Mr. Whitney for lieutenant governor, while it is fair to say that quite a number who voted for Guild refused to cast any vote for lieutenant governor.

Many reasons have been advanced for such actions but the prime motive we believe in Newon was to voice a protest against Senator Lodge, and the sayings which have been credited to him during the campaign. We have but little sympathy with persons who endeavor to punish one person over the head of another.
It is the act of a political coward and indicates that the voter does not dare to come out in the open and fight like a man. It is also unfair to the candidate who is not loyally supported. Fairly and squarely nominated by the Republican party in convention assembled, it is the duty of every man who voted to send delegates to that convention to support
at the polls, the candidates nominated by his delegates. Newton will hold an unenviable place in the party council in the future, as a community which cannot be depended upon to support a ticket which it helps to name.

We are particularly disappointed in the vote of West Newton hill, whose high standard of political morality, as evidenced in the character of its representatives in the city government, has been greatly lowered in the support it has given Mr. Whitney.

Senator Dana receives a handsome vote, altho no greater than he deserves.
Newton's reputation at the State House is particularly good and the position taken by the Newton senator is largely responsible for that situation. Senator Dana will be re-elected as president of the senate and exert a beneficial influence on legislation of 1906.

Mr. Lowell who receives a most flattering vote, will as the probable chairman of the judiciary committee, be the titular leader of the House and in a commanding position to serve the city's interests. Mr. Lothrop, who was also given a fine endorsement, while new at legislative work, will also make a faithful and painstaking representative.

The political situation has cleared rapidly the past week, largely through the earnest efforts of Mr. Charles E. Hatfield, chairman of the Republican city committee. Mr. Hatfield has straightened out the West Newton aldermanic tangle in a most satisfactory manner, and Alderman B. S. Palmer has been prevailed upon to return to the board for two years, while Alderman Hunt has been persuaded to accept another year as ward alderman. Mr. Hatfield is entitled to great praise for his excellent work.

In Ward One, Alderman Riley, though strongly urged to return, has decided to retire after one term, and Mr.
Stephen W. Holmes has been asked to take his place. Mr. Holmes is vice president of the New England National Bank of Boston and will undoubtedly prove a valuable member of the board.
Other nominations have been made as indicated last week, the only addition being the name of Mr. Herbert Stebbins for school committee in Ward 7 in place of Rev. Mr. Smith who is to remove to Westfield. Mr. Stebbins will probably be opposed for the office as the ladies feel that they are entitled to another representative in the school board and Dr. Deborah Fawcett's name is being mentioned for the position.

The proposition will be submitted to the people at the city election, to authorize the pensioning of firemen who have reached the age of 65 years and have performed at least twenty years' service,
and to pension such firemen, under 65
years of age who have served at least twenty years and are incapacitated from further usefulness.

The petition to submit this act to the voters is signed by some of our prominent citizens, but we should be pleased to hear from the public at large on this subject and to publish the correspondence for the benefit of our readers.

Among Women.

At the meeting of the Social Science Club last Monday morning, Mrs. James H. Wheeler, Jr., read a paper on "The Evolution of the New Woman and Some of Her Problems."

Beginning with the creation of woman the speaker traced her history through the vicissitudes of the growth of civilization. Sappho the first woman poet was the founder of women's clubs and the recognition of the motherhood of woman was due to the universal reverence of Mary the mother of Christ and the spread of Christianity. Briefly passing in review the long list of distinguished English women also the German Hansfrau, to the women of the New World, the wives of the Pilgrim Fathers the speaker graphically described woman's growth up to the present day. How the growth of public sentiment has come to regard the Fatherhood of God, the motherhood of woman and brotherhood of man as well as to the higher education of women has become a fact. The speaker advised an all around education. That nearly all woman's short comings are due to the lack of education. Besides the three R's, there should be a conception of the three H's, head, heart and hands. Education should be preparation for life.

At the close of Mrs. Wheeler's comprehensive presentation of the subject, Miss Venila Burrington secretary of the Inter-Municipal League of Household Research supplemented the subject by telling how the league is trying to co-operate with women in the household problems.

Next Wednesday morning the Social Science Club will meet to discuss the topic "Athletics for Women and Girls."

The Pierian Club of Newton Upper Falls met on Wednesday, November 1, at the home of Mrs. Albert Temperley, Newton Centre. The general subject of the meeting was "Japan," and papers were read on "The Traditional History of Japan," "The Written History of Japan," "The New Era," and "Historical Character." Two selections were read by Mrs. William Gallison of Eliot.

A very successful social was held on October 25 by members of the club at the residence of Mrs. S. A. Thompson. The games were much enjoyed, one of them being original with a member of the entertainment committee. The following music was rendered: Piano solo, Mrs. Dresser; Contralto solo, Mrs. H. E. Child; Soprano solo, Mrs. Edith Cooper; Autoharp duet, Mrs. Child and Mrs. Willard.

It is the annual attack of the Ladies' Social Circle on the church debt and some suitable reward will be given to the soldier making the best record. Barber, Mrs. D. F. Barber, Mrs. F. O. Barber, Miss Mina Berry, Miss Helen Blackwell, Mrs. George S. Butters, Miss C. M. Cushman, Mrs. Ada Davidson, Edward Earle, Mrs. Charles Lawrence, Miss Grace B. There was a fair representation from the different sections of the ward and Mr. Frank D. Frisbie, the retiring president of the club, called the meeting to order. Dr. J. F. Frisbie was elected chairman and Fred W. Trowbridge Secretary. Remarks in the interest of the ward and the candidates, were made by Alderman Fred W. Stone and Messrs E. O. Childs, E. J. H. ## THE HALF-DOLLAR MUSIC SERIES

A unique edition and one that will be of interest to all music lovers, whether teachers or students, is the "Half-Dollar Music Series," published by the Oliver Ditson Company. It consists of twenty-six different books, each containing sixty or more pages of music of proven acceptability. Eleven volumes of this series are for piano solo, some being in the very easiest grades for beginners. "Waltzes and Two-steps for the Piano" and "Easy Salon Music," while of a popular order, are not in the same class with the "rag-time" variety, which, we regret to say, is found in many homes where one would expect to find music more in keeping with a higher standard of intelligence. Three books of piano duets are among the number, and other volumes are for the violin, mandolin and other instruments. "Thirty Songs for Children" is a book that will furnish entertainment to the little ones for many a long winter evening.

One of the latest additions to the series and a collection that is sure to meet with favor is "Popular Church Organ Pieces," compiled and edited by Hans Lichter. This book comprises fourteen numbers, all of which are eminently suited to the church service. The registration in every number is clearly indicated and they may be played on two manual organs. Ruff's "Cavatina," Chopin's "Nocturne in G Minor," "Consolation" and "Spring Song" by Mendelssohn and "Lovely Appeal" from "The Redemption" are among the contents of this book. One organist writes: "I am much pleased with Popular Church Organ Pieces; the type is good, the form convenient and the pieces therein 'popular' in the best sense of the word."

The price of the volumes of the series are uniformly 60 cents, as its title implies. This includes postage. A complete catalog of the Half-Dollar Music Series, giving description and the contents of each volume, will be sent free, postpaid, to any address by applying to the Oliver Ditson Company, 161 Tremont Street, Boston.

WHY THE MILLINER MUST BE A DIPLOMATIST

"Do I have troubles with women buying hats?" repeated the milliner with a shop near Fifth avenue, where afternoon tea is served between courses—or hats, to be exact—and everything is very Parisian. "I wish I had nothing to do but tell you about them."

"The latest has just happened. This morning one of my best girls came to me with a returned box in her hand."

"My heart sank when she held it out. I knew without the utterance of a single word that it had come from Mrs. Johnson, one of our best and most trying customers. With the hat was a note which read something like this:

"My Dear Miss Smith: I am so sorry to return this hat. It is the prettiest one I have ever had from your place. The word dream poorly expresses it, but I use that term in place of a better. I love it. My sister adores it. All my friends rave over it and hate me for seeing it first. But—Mr. Johnson, my husband, loathes it. So what can I do? I can't have a husband hate me, now, can I? I will drop it within the week and choose one in its place. Yours,

"The writer is so pretty that if I took an old pan and tied some strings over it and under her chin pans would immediately come in. But she is very hard to please."

"She tries on every hat, finds fault with each and suggests changes. Finally she selects one and says:

"Do you know, Miss Smith, this isn't so bad. If you will change the shape so that it is a little better suited to my face, put some mauve crushed flowers in place of the rose, and a black plume instead of the white, take off that buckle and use one I will send you of real stones, I think it will do."

"Then she picks out one or two more and with each she goes through the same performance. Then they are sent to her address. Then I invariably get a note like the above, and it is always that mysterious person, the husband, who objects. Of course, you can't dispute his decision; it's the man who pays for the bonnet and he has a right to sit opposite one he likes."

"Well, I was holding the returned hat and gazing at it with the look that a milliner puts on when she has lost a $20 sale when another woman comes in and I say to her, knowing that she is acquainted with Mrs. Johnson:

"What kind of a man is Mrs. Johnson's husband? Poor woman, he makes her life miserable so far as her hats are concerned. He must be very fastidious." "Is he?" she replies, coolly. "I have never met him. Mrs. Johnson and he have been separated for six years."

"What do you think of that? Of course, I cannot say anything, for I should simply lose custom, but that is one of the troubles we have."

The doors open and a matronly looking person with a soft white pompadour, pink cheeks—very pink, not the ordinary pink of New York—and a very girlish gait in spite of her 60 years, trips in and put out a lavender tinted glove to the milliner.

"Good morning! Isn't it a charming day? Now, dear Miss Smith, don't let that horrid sales girl—woman—lady wait on me this morning. Do you know what she did last time? Actually showed me a hat that was suited for my age! Did you ever hear of such a lack of tact? I want the most foolish hat you've got; now remember, a perfectly silly one, one that looks like me."

In a moment the looker-on has the privilege of seeing the new customer seated before the cheval glass trying on a ridiculous arrangement, consisting of an intoxicated looking rose resting on a small bed of crushed chiffon. The customer smiles at the reflection. The milliner smiles, two of the women smile, the looker-on smiles, in fact the foolish hat has accomplished its mission, for the smiles are not of ridicule, but of subtle feminine understanding. The hat is designed for some man's undoing. All know it and all are glad.

"What type of woman gives me the most trouble?" The interrogation, put when the elderly customer has departed, causes a long period of reflection to the milliner.

"There are two types that stand out. One of these is the girl of 18 to 20. That is the age when the average feminine person thinks most of what she wears and it is the time when she needs to think least of her clothes. Nearly anything will look well on a girl of that age."

"But she doesn't know it, and she will go on worrying over hats and crying if hers is not as pretty as some one else's, and envying the air that the woman of the world displays, when all the time the woman would give everything she possesses for the eighteen-year-old complexion and eyes and awkward manner of not knowing things."

"The woman who is known among her friends as being well dressed is, as a general thing, our best customer. She has made a complete study of herself; she knows every line in her face and head, every curve in her form, every shade that she can wear and every color that she cannot."

"You can't delude her at all; you can't make her buy a hat or even suggest. She orders and we obey, and it is a delight to obey, for we recognize that in comparison with her knowledge ours is crude, indeed."

"I will give you an example. Yesterday a woman of the class I describe came in. She was perfectly gowned in a plain tailor made walking suit of black broadcloth. Her hair was coiffured carefully in the way she prefers. Everything about her was perfectly plain, perfectly severe and perfectly studied."

"She had come for her winter's hats and she had prepared herself just as every other woman should do, but rarely does. She had no frills, because she knew that a hat that would be fairly becoming with that plain gown would be extremely becoming with more elaborate productions."

"The black was a part of the scheme. You cannot always tell about colors; they give the complexion a different tint; they do all sorts of things with you, and nine women out of ten don't stop to think of this; but this woman knew and wore black on that account."

"She knew just the light she wanted to sit in; she had the chair and glass arranged properly, and then she told exactly the shape, color and general effect of the hat she wanted. It took her just one half hour, and when she had finished she had two of the most stunning hats in the shop, had saved her time and ours and gained the admiration of everybody in the place."

"Speaking about arranging her own chair and mirror," the milliner went on, "there are tricks in every trade. It is natural for us to put a customer in the most favorable light, and if it happens to be a rose shaded light and she doesn't notice it so much the better."

"Electric light is the hardest thing in the world on a woman's complexion. It is, therefore, desirable to soften the glare with some tinted silk. The average woman recognizes this in her house, but often when she comes to try on a bonnet she wants a glaring electric light, because she imagines that she is being cheated if we shade the bulbs."

While the explanation is being made the looker-on notices that a very stunning young woman, trying on a bewildering combination of champagne colored fur felt with pink roses and blonde net before the mirror lighted as described, is on the fine edge of indecision. A signal passes between the manager and the salesgirl, and the latter, with a pretense of careless impulse, seizes a long feather boa conveniently near, throws it about the neck of the woman at the mirror, and in a moment indecision vanishes."

The soft fluff about the customer's throat has completely altered the picture, and the customer does not know the reason for it. The manager admits her art."

"There is something about the feather boa that softens the most trying face," she says, "and we keep one near at hand so that whenever it is needed all the girl has to do is to catch it up and act as if the woman's beauty was so striking it must be emphasized. You get the idea?"

"The second type of woman who gives us trouble is naturally the widow. There is no one more difficult to please, and the more grief stricken she is, the more one needs to be ready with patience if limitable. Mourning is hard on the face anyway."

"There was one woman in last week who hesitated a long time between a bonnet of crape with a heavy veil and a stunning little heliotrope toque. She looked like a fright in the black and ten years younger in the heliotrope."

"Finally, she drew out her handkerchief and dabbed her eyes."

"I want the black," she wailed. "It harmonizes perfectly with my feelings, but dear John did hate to see me in black. Even the slightest suspicion of it seemed to hurt him like a blow."

"She turned to her companion, a woman of her own age."

"What do you think, dear?"

"The friend did not respond to her cue. She was rather hard featured, and if I had to guess locality I should say she came from near the Maine woods. She spoke right up."

"Take the black one, of course; it's the only decent thing you can do."

"It's lucky she did not see the look that woman cast on her!"

"I suppose, rambled on the milliner, 'that the hat has stood in the way of more matrimonial proposals than any other article of furniture or personal apparel. One of my customers told a story illustrating this recently.'

"She was a very stylish girl and had been married only a little while, not long enough to wear out her trousseau. One evening she was at a party and a young man who had been paying a good deal of attention to one of her friends came and sat by her at the restaurant supper which followed."

"I've been admiring your stunning hat all evening," he began.

"She thought this was rather odd, as he had never complimented her before in any way, and the hat was rather an inconspicuous one, just a bit of lace and flower, but with the true French touch. His next remark was made in a very insinuating tone."

"Would you mind," he ventured, 'telling me how much a woman pays for a hat like that?'

"I paid twenty-five for this," she answered.

"For a moment she thought he was going to ask if she meant cents, then, after another careful appraising glance, he said, in a horror struck tone:

"Does a woman pay $25 for a little thing like that?" and in the tone she could see that the marriage altar was slipping away into a nebulous dream."

"However, he was very much in love and was determined that he would not give up without a struggle. Apparently, judging from his next remark, matrimony and hats had been connected in his mind for a long period."

"He referred to a function they had both attended a month before. She had on a very pretty hat then, and, with an attention to detail which would have done justice to a man milliner, he described color, shape and trimming."

"Was—he stammered a little—'that hat as expensive as this?'

"The hat in question she had made herself from odds and ends and the total cost had been 44 cents. She told him after a rapid arithmetical sum. His face flushed and his eyes sparkled."

"Forty-four cents," he repeated, and the glance of admiration he cast upon her more than repaid the economy she had practised in making the halo."

"Do you know, I have never seen you look better than you did that evening. Lots of people were talking about it. Only forty-four cents? You don't say! Women are wonderful creatures, aren't they?"

"It wasn't fifteen minutes after that the two heads, his and hers, were close together—probably talking over how beautiful the woman who told the story was—or something else."

"It isn't very much trouble," continued the milliner, "to sell to the feminine commuter. Usually she comes in with the whole family, and the funny thing about them is that they all want hats of the same kind."

"You'll see sometimes a mother and four daughters all hatted alike, just because there is always one in a family who has the lead, and even in matters of dress the others follow like sheep."

"A thing a woman should never do is to trust the cheap milliner of a friend. One of my customers was telling me her experience."

"Every once in a while the friend will display a natty looking little hat and announce that she has found the cleverest milliner, who works for almost nothing will use your old material and take no end of trouble."

"The second woman goes there and the hat that she gets would scare a scarecrow. The truth is that the first woman as a general thing insinuatingly remarks to the novice in the trade that if her trial hat is satisfactory she can bring the whole West Side there, with occasional personally conducted parties from Bronxville and Lawrence Park.

"Of course she gets a hat that the milliner really loses on—it is a sprat to catch a whale—and when the woman's friends come in and get the ordinary trade article they throw the hats back at the milliner's head and look up the friend to remonstrate with her."—N. Y. Sun.

RIVER CUTS NEW CHANNEL

Feature of Essex-Street Bridge Construction

Channel Is Being Moved Nearer to Brookline

This Is Part of Charles Basin Work

An interesting and yet simple engineering feat is at present being performed in the Charles River between Cottage Farm and Cambridge, where the new Essex Street Bridge is in course of construction. This is nothing less than the forcing of the river to work against its natural inclination and enlisting its powerful aid in cutting a new boat channel to the westward of the present one. Every day now, during the ebb of the tide, the river works as a laborer for the Metropolitan Park Commission, and hastens the completion of the great Charles River basin which is to give Boston the finest pleasure resort in the world.

The new Essex Street Bridge, which is to connect Brookline and Cambridge, is to be built without a draw in the center. Like the new Cambridge Bridge, which is soon to be opened, it will rise in a graceful and steady incline from either bank, reaching a maximum height over the middle of the river. And under this highest portion the new boat channel must run, so as to permit the passage of the largest vessels possible. The present boat channel is located considerably to the eastward of the middle of the river, near the Cambridge shore, which brings it under a lower portion of the new bridge. The problem thus placed before the engineers was the removal of this channel about a hundred feet to the westward. Dredging, of course, was the only method possible; it only remained to find the most economical way to dredge.

The river at this section flows between low, marshy banks, and has a soft muddy bed. This material is easily cut away, or it can be washed away. In fact the present channel is one that was naturally washed out from the soft bottom of the river, and not one that had been cleared by design. The engineers therefore decided to force the Charles River into their service, and make it partly construct its new channel. Were it not for the tides, which still rise and fall in this part of the river, the stream would have had to do all the work. As it is at present the river does about one-third, the balance being accomplished by powerful steam dredges.

At the commencement of this work a steam dredge was anchored off the Magazine Street Bathing Beach, about three hundred feet upstream from the site of the new bridge and directly in the middle of the old channel. Dredging was then started, and the soft mud was scooped from the bottom of the river bed and loaded into barges to be carried away. Gradually the dredge was moved down-stream in the direction which the new channel is to take, cutting slowly but surely away from the old channel. About three days' work sufficed to dig out a sort of pocket in the side of the former channel, a pocket deeper and wider than the original hollow that had been cut by the current. Into this enclosure the river rushed, dashing with all its force against the lower end and there being deflected sharply upward by the terminal wall of the undredged river bed. This resistance gave the water added force and it at once began to wash away the mud and gravel that impeded its progress, thus constantly deepening and extending the pocket in the direction of the new channel.

During the ebbing tide this work goes on uninterruptedly, the water gouging out mud and gravel much as the stream from a Western hydraulic "monitor" cuts away the dirt and earth in the placer mines. When the tide turns and runs against the river current, an eddy is formed that throws the mud and silt back into the new channel; and it is then that the big steam dredge has to work to keep the freshly excavated pocket clear. In time of slack water, too, before the river current is reinforced by the tide, the dredges are kept in operation, as then the water has not force enough to do any great amount of digging. Advantage is also taken of this slack-water period to square up the end of the new work and see that the excavation is proceeding in the proper line. But as soon as the ebb tide sets in earnest, steam is shut off in the dredges, and the Charles River takes up its work of improvement.

As soon as the new channel is completed the force of the river alone will be sufficient to keep it clear, as it will be several feet deeper than the present boat channel and will thus draw a greater amount of water through it. In time it is expected that the old channel will be entirely filled. In fact, the engineers are so sure of this that practically no consideration of the former course of the water has been taken in planning the new bridge.

The Essex Street Bridge, incidentally will have the distinction of passing over another bridge. It will cross the trestle over which the Grand Junction Railroad runs, so bringing two levels of traffic over the water. The Grand Junction bridge, built to accommodate the freight transfer traffic between the Boston & Maine and New York Central railroads, will pass under the new bridge near the Brookline shore. This bridge is now nearly completed, and will be used to replace the present railroad track as soon as the new boat channel is finished. It has a swinging draw to allow the passage of boats, and when this is in operation the old channel will be closed to traffic.—Boston Transcript.

Cambridge Prospect Union

During the winter months, the Prospect Union, of 744 Massachusetts Avenue, Cambridge, is to hold a series of interesting Sunday afternoon meetings. Each meeting will consist of an address by some eminent man on a vital topic, and vocal and instrumental music. The meetings will be held at four o'clock, the doors being open to the public at 3.30. Ladies are admitted, and the admission is free.

The first lecture is to be given on November 12, by Col. Thomas Wentworth Higginson. He was asked to give some of his personal experiences, and from the many topics afforded by his rich and varied life, he selected for his subject the stirring events of the fugitive slave days. The officers of the Union feel exceptional pleasure in being able to afford members and friends such an opportunity to see and hear Col. Higginson, who now appears so rarely in a public way. The second lecture, on November 19, will be given by Professor W. Z. Ripley on "Railroad Rate Regulation." As secretary of the Industrial Commission, professor at Harvard, and a thorough student, Professor Ripley has become one of the leading authorities on the railroad problem, now so pressing. Among those who testified before the Senate Committee last year, Professor Ripley was, perhaps, the most convincing advocate of government regulation of rates. He is a vivacious speaker, and his words on this question will possess unusual interest.

The third lecture will be given on November 26, by Mr. R. A. Woods, on "Industrial Education." Mr. Woods, as the head of the South End House, has become nationally known as a student of sociological problems. In his lecture he will treat as an expert, one of the most significant and valuable educational developments of our time. On December 3, Judge W. H. H. Emmons, head of the Boston Police Commission, will talk on "Police Work in Boston." He will describe, in his popular, individual style, how order is preserved in a great city, and will give a concrete idea of the nature of police work. On December 10, Mr. Frank K. Foster, the labor orator, will speak on the "Ideals of Trade Unionism." If the series proves popular, other lectures will be announced later. The music at all the meetings will be furnished by Harvard students.

The Communion service at the First church, Newton Centre, which was postponed owing to the main auditorium being closed, will be celebrated next Sunday.

A mission study class has been organized at the North church, Nonantum, under the direction of Mr. Franklin P. Lowry. The topic to be studied during the coming months will be, "Africa and its Needs."

The first meeting of the Young People's League was held Sunday evening at the New Church, Newtonville. The new plan of questions on the lesson, to be answered after some preparation by certain ones appointed, was tried.

The collection at Eliot church next Sunday will be for the benefit of the North Village church at Nonantum.

Rev. F. B. Matthews is giving a series of Sunday evening sermons at the Immanuel Baptist church on the general topic, "Proverbs of the People." The topics for the remainder of the series are as follows: Nov. 12, "No Rose Without a Thorn;" Nov. 19, "The Sun Shines for All;" Nov. 26, "Hunger is the Best Sauce;" Dec. 3, "Well Begun is Half Done."

Mr. C. Frank Hunting, the director of the choir of the Universalist church, is bringing that organization up to a high state of efficiency. The fine rendering of the musical program each Sunday is commented on most favorably.

An interesting meeting of the Little Gleaners was held Thursday afternoon at St. John's church, Newtonville.

A hospitality committee was recently appointed in connection with St. John's church, Newtonville, to greet strangers at the church. It consists of Mrs. D. B. Kyle, Mrs. W. H. Loring, Mrs. C. R. Hinkley and Miss Rebecca Mulholland.

The adjourned annual meeting of Eliot church for the election of officers will be held Friday evening Nov. 17th at 7.45 o'clock. The nominating committee have a full list of officers arranged.

The new parish register will be found at a table in the rear of the main auditorium of Channing church Sunday mornings in charge of Mr. Fred W. Stone for inspection and signatures. All persons in the parish over 16 years of age are invited to sign.

Literary Notes.

One hundred contributors of text and picture make the November National the most richly varied and picturesque report of the current life of America in the whole field of monthly periodicals. Nor does the National treat American life alone. Yone Noguchi's delightful intimate "With Rosetti in London" and Poundley Bigelow's "The First Lady of China" are papers that strike the note of universal interest. Captain Arthur McGraw reviews recent and current north polar expeditions. Charles Warren Stoddard, in "The Doom of a Prima Donna," tells the thrilling story of the strange life and the fearful death of a world-famous singer. Michael A. Lane ridicules "Boston peace advocates" in "The Good Thing Is In War." Joe Mitchell Chapple presents sixteen pages of fresh gossip, lavishly illustrated, about "Affairs at Washington." Frank Putnam discusses insurance revelations under the suggestive heading, "Is Thieving a Safe and Gentle Profession?" Hamilton Wright tells the complete story, with illustrations, of national irrigation works down to date. Farm life in our middle West, in the Philippines, in Manitoba and in our further West are treated with pen and camera. Three score helpful suggestions for home comfort and home happiness make up the unique Home department. Stories sentimental, tragic, humorous—all very human and attractive, with many strong, fine poems, uphold the high literary quality of the magazine. The negro problem, the new Methodist hymnal, the president's appeal to the people over the head of the senate, and the stage, are discussed by first class experts. The National unites the charm of homely, common-sense simplicity with the racy flavor of wild fruit. It does new things in new ways.

Washington Letter.

The President has left Washington and from all reports is making himself solid with wonderful effect among the warm hearted Southerners but his reputation right here in Washington among twenty thousand Government clerks more or less is in an awfully shaky condition. The Government clerks love him as little as did the politicians during the first months of his first term when he snubbed them right and left as they came to the White House asking soft places and promotions for their cousins, brothers, sons and nephews in the army, navy and civil service. "His upstart Accidency" denied the requests of influential senators in a loud voice, in full view of an audience and in a most unMcKinley-like way. The average Washington Government clerk has no use for a President or a boss who will make him work. About two years ago when Cabinet officers were making their annual reports and sending in their requests according to immemorial custom, for more clerks Roosevelt said: "Make the clerks that you have to do more work." Such an unheard of simple remedy came like a horrible revelation. It completely upset the Capital of the United States. There was a commingling of yells and wails, encouraged by the local press which is of course, largely dependent upon this clerical clientele. They would be too late for dinner if thirty minutes should be added to the days work; Those who lived in suburban places would not be able to catch their accustomed trains and would have no time to shop and other reasons as grave and potent were presented with futile impact. But the additional half hour was added and the poor Government clerk is compelled to work or to be more exact must be in or about his office for seven and a half hours a day. The dinner hour has been shoved down and the railway schedules tinkered to accommodate him and the bargain counters are still accessible to the over-worked civil employe. But this Pharaoh was not through with his oppressions for just before he started South he issued an order which though brief is of startling import, the order makes it possible for the President or any Cabinet Officer to dismiss peremptorily and without a hearing any Government clerk whose inefficiency may be brought to his attention.

When it is known that a large number, perhaps thirty percent of the Government clerks are conspicuously inefficient the far reaching potency of this order will be appreciated. Heretofore when the dismissal of a clerk was proposed charges were preferred against him and he was given time in which to show cause why he should not be dismissed. This gave him time to get his Senator and all his "influence" at the department and before the service was rid of him the question had become one of politics and National issue. It is not to be imagined by the most prejudiced that the Cabinet Officers are going to slay right and left. They have not delivered the order for the purpose of subverting the Civil Service rules, of which every one of them is a defendant; but merely taken to themselves the right that the most obscure employer enjoys to dismiss his employees when they are inefficient, or obstructive to the work for which they are employed. That the dismissed clerk or officer will not be given a hearing does not mean that he will not be allowed to know why he was dismissed. Hundreds of clerks who are howling against the new rule know that they should be dismissed now and also know why. The distressing part of it is that not one half of these will be reached. The small cases of petty theft from the time, services and supplies of the Government that nine tenths of the clerks engage in will never be heard of by the Cabinet Officers. Only the most flagrant cases of inefficiency and misconduct can possibly be acted upon. It may be supposed that a few pitifully superannuated clerks may have to give their places to younger and more capable persons. A man of seventy or eighty who is suffering from locomotor ataxia and senility, who comes to the office in a chair pushed by a servant, and who must be assisted in eating cannot be a very efficient servant of the Government and yet there are such cases in each department, retained there year after year because they have powerful "influence." For reasons of sentiment and pity it will be hard to displace these clerks but there is no room for pity in Government business for which the public furnishes the money, and the Government departments cannot be run as charitable institutions or hospitals. In many of the departments bureaus there are chief clerks who are notorious drunkards and who could not transact a month's work except for the assistance of other clerks who are afraid of losing their places or of missing a promotion if they fail to cover up the tracks of the inebriate.

The varieties of incompetence and dishonesty could not be enumerated or illustrated if this entire sheet were devoted to the subject and the few mentioned above are typical rather than exceptional in every department. It such as these are reached and their places filled by capable, industrious and conscientious men and women the bracing effect throughout the departments will make wholesale dismissal unnecessary. Literary and other work pursued with Government materials and in Government time will be discouraged. The petty but in the aggregate, costly theft of stationary, books, penknives, rubber bands and such Government supplies will be checked. The waste of time in receiving visitors, in sick leave falsely certified to by paid physicians, in vacations adroitly extended beyond their proper time and in tardiness will be reduced. The spirit of old clerks in using every means short of menace to prevent new ones from giving too much industry or fidelity to their work that a balance may be preserved throughout a bureau will disappear. Millennial conditions in Government work are still as distant as millennial conditions in the private office or in the kitchen but the public may look for an improvement in its civil service as a result of this one small but penetrating order, that will be scarcely less striking than the improvement that followed the adoption of the Civil Service examinations.

FANCY FUR COATS IN VOGUE

Were The Rage in Paris Last Season and Are a Luxury

"Oh, yes, we still make plain, practical fur coats, but—"

The speaker was one of the most fashionable furriers in New York, and the "but" expressed volumes.

He left his sentence hanging in the air and proceeded to demonstrate by displaying an assorted lot of fur coats, not "plain and practical," or at least not practical in the same sense as was the old time seal-skin, adapted to all occasions and all weather and warranted to be wearable year after year without other change save the repairing of worn spots.

There is little change in the ordinary sealskin or Persian lamb coat. It is still semi-fitting, ample, warm, fitted with storm collar or collarless and supplied with a cravat for use when a collar is needed. There are a few plain box coats, rather smarter for youthful wearers than the semi-fitted models, but at its best the plain fur coat is a thing for comfort rather than for fashion or beauty.

"But"—there are others.

Last season the furriers displayed a few coats embellished with beautiful embroideries, braiding, &c., and one heard much of the rage for such coats in Paris. This season furriers have gone over enthusiastically to the idea of the trimmed coat, and at the best establishments one may see scores of jaunty models.

In the first place, one must admit that the fancy fur coat is an extravagance, or at least a luxury. It is likely to go out of style in one season and need entire renovation the second year.

In many cases it is trimmed in a color scheme that will not consort amiably with all frocks and hats, and consequently limits the uses of the coat. It may perhaps have trimming that will be injured by rain or snow or be easily soiled.

It may possibly not be altogether comfortable, but it is chic, and, being chic, it will be worn. Some one will pay the bills, and the onlooker will have the pleasure of seeing winter street costumes of unusual charm. Why worry over the arguments against the gay little coats?

There are a host of handsome long coats and wraps in fur, some of them remarkably handsome and unusual, but it is of the short coat and wrap that we are talking today, or the bolero, the caraco, the short box coat, the tight fitting coat of any length less than half length.

The bolero in fur is not a new idea, and perhaps for that reason not so smart as the basque or shortskirted coats; but fur boleros are too pretty and becoming to lose favor readily, and incidentally one may obtain a stunning little bolero for less money than is asked for any other fur coat.

Given a deep girdle of velvet, and, perhaps undersleeves of velvet below elbow sleeves of fur, it does not take much fur to make a bolero. Women who have old fur coats recognize this fact, and furriers manufacture charming boleros out of the good parts of the old garment, adding embroidered velvet or cloth.

The remodeling is expensive, of course; but not half so expensive as buying a new coat equally attractive. One Fifth avenue furrier showed with honest pride a charming sealskin bolero which had been made out of an old small mink, a big, old fashioned seal collar and a man's seal cap, by adding a waistcoat, girdle and collar of brown velvet embroidered in gold.

The different forms of Persian lamb—broadtail, baby lamb, &c.—are the furs most often used for boleros and other fancy short coats, but chinchilla, ermine, mink, beaver and seal all appear in such guise. Caracal in all colorings has a considerable vogue, and some exceptionally pretty French models are shown in brown caracal.

A white caracal bolero was also a French importation and had a high waistcoat, collar and inset sleeve trimming of the black and white velvet striped silk which the French call "Pekin," and which is at present much in demand as trimming. This same silk enters into the trimming of some of the prettiest broadtail coats, being usually associated, as in the case of the white bolero, with large black velvet buttons.

The broadtail bolero, buttoning down in tabs upon a border of velvet and completed by a lace waistcoat and jabot, is an original little model, and in one shop were several good broadtail boleros embroidered very heavily in gold on silver right upon the fur, so that the nap of fur curls over the gold, making the outlines of the embroidery soft and indistinct.

The caraco, a box coat very short, reaching only just below the waist line, is practicable only in skins with the shortest pile, and even then will make any save a slender figure look lumpy. The longer box coat, however, if well cut, is becoming to the average figure and rather more comfortable than the tight fitting garments. The original box idea takes on many variations, and here are sketches of several attractive models of this class.

One, in broadtail, was a plain box coat; rather short and not meeting in front. The fronts fell straight and loose on either side of a black velvet waistcoat.

This waistcoat also hung straight, but was not quite so long as the coat, and was double—the effect being somewhat like that of a big, broad velvet scarf tied once at the throat, and with one end hanging shorter than the other. Each of the ends was heavily embroidered in gold and the coat had a flat turn down collar and wristbands of velvet embroidered in gold.

A second box coat of baby lamb was collarless but buttoned in double breasted fashion across the chest, and was cut away just at the bust line, to show below that a handsome fitted waistcoat of embroidered cloth. The double breasted fur across the chest could be thrown back, forming square revers and showing the waistcoat all the way to the throat.

Fine dark mink was the fur chosen for a third box coat, collarless and plain save for two bands of wide brown gimp edged by narrow brown and gold gimp, which were set over the shoulders and were finished with rounded ends on which handsome shaded gold and brown buttons were set. Similar bands were on the bottoms of the sleeves.

Close fitting and basqued coats are numerous, and in almost every instance ornamented by fancy waistcoats. Some of the French coats have leather collars and waistcoats embroidered in heavy gold thread, but cloth or velvet is usually preferred.

One of the jauntiest coats we have seen was a tight fitting model in broadtail, showing a very narrow waistcoat line of white braided in red, and trimmed, in little applied tabs of red velvet braided in lines of gold soutache. The red would make the coat impracticable for wear with many colors, but the coat as it stood was a fascinating one for any youthful woman willing to make her street clothes and hats conform to it.

A great deal of green is used in the coat trimmings, and is perhaps better than any other color, but the black and gold or black and silver effects are likely to give a more all around service than any other color scheme.

In neck pieces and muffs there are some decided novelties, though last year's cravats and stoles are not out of date. The illustrations show a few of the new things in ermine and chinchilla, the odd round collar of stole of ermine with velvet waistcoat and velvet choux being a particularly novel innovation.

Lace and velvet are freely combined with fur, but the handsomest furs, such as sable, are wisely left untrimmed and follow very nearly the lines seen last year.—N. Y. Sun.

Fifth Annual Shoot

Fifth Annual Shoot between the Clafin Guard Veteran Association and the Clafin Guard, Company C, 5th Regiment, M. V. M. for the "Loving Cup," now held by the Veterans, was shot at the range of the Waltham Rides, Company F, 5th Regiment, M. V. M. at Waltham on Saturday, Nov. 4th, 1905. The teams consisted of ten men each, firing ten shots at 200 yards with the Krag rifle. The weather was raw and windy and the scores were to some extent, affected by these conditions.

The Veteran team again showed its superiority by easily winning the match by 48 points, as shown by the following scores:

Just Mention It

It pays the buyer to buy from an advertiser and to say he saw the article advertised in this or that paper. The man who mentions an advertisement when buying goods really gets the best possible service,—even better than the regular customer when this is possible. Why? Simply because the advertiser pays good money for his advertisement and he is glad to hear from it. It is a compliment to his good business judgment.

MAN IN THE SERVANT HUNT

And May be He Will Manage The Housekeeping Soon

Women Called Failures as Housekeepers By a Social Science Expert

Husbands Can Hire Servants When Their Wives Can't

A man dropped into the office of a big educational concern the other morning to see the head manager, whose home is in the suburbs.

"Mr. Jones has not come in yet," said a clerk.

At 2 o'clock the man called again.

"Mr. Jones was here, but he is not in now," the clerk said.

The next morning the man tried again, with better luck. "Don't say a word," protested Jones, in answer to his friend's sarcastic remarks about hard worked managers. "It was a case of dire necessity. I was hunting up a servant girl."

"Why doesn't your wife attend to that?" inquired the other, who is a bachelor.

"Well, you see we have two children and only one other servant, and it is not easy for her to get away from home."

"I don't care if a woman has two hundred children," declared the bachelor, "it is her business to look after the household machinery. What's all this talk about the progress of women, anyway, if men have to look after the housekeeping now?"

Said Jones with a chuckle:

"Do come out and dine with us next Sunday and air some of your views in my wife's hearing."

"And rouse in her a desire to put something in my coffee? No, thank you."

"And serve him right, too, if she did," murmured a woman who, seated at the other side of the office, overheard the conversation.

In another quarter of the town the next day the head of an intelligence office gave to this woman some information relating to the hiring of servants by the man of the house instead of by his wife.

"The custom is getting to be quite common," she said. "A few years ago it was almost never that a man came in looking for a servant for a private family."

"In the big majority of cases the men who come in to hire a servant are suburbanites. A few attend to the matter to save their wife a trip to the city, but more admit that their wives are too discouraged by many failures to try again, and that they have taken up the problem in place of the women."

"For some reason or other a man generally has less difficulty than a woman in persuading a general housework girl, say, to try a place in the country. On such occasions a man is apt to assume his most polite and winning manners, and occasionally he forgets to tell the woman he is interviewing more than one-half the work which will be required of her. Or it may be that the average servant finds it less easy to say no to a man than to his wife, particularly if the man looks a little nervous and anxious."

"I will take you out with me this afternoon," he says, and seldom goes out of the office without finding some one to accept his offer.

"To be just, however, I must say that many men are far more businesslike when engaging a girl than the average woman. They tell her exactly how far it is to the nearest Catholic church and to the next neighbors, and how many there are in the family, on the square. Almost without exception a woman when engaging a servant glosses over these facts."

"But surely now that suburban dwellings have all the modern improvements and are easily reached from town servants have fewer objections than formerly to living out of New York?" broke in the seeker after information.

"They have more objections, if anything. To persuade a servant to take a job in a suburb is not a bit easier now than it was fifteen or twenty years ago, when I first went in business—I mean in cases where only one or two servants are kept. In houses which keep many servants, things are different. In such houses there is something doing all the time, even in the servant's quarters."

"In other cases, on the contrary, servants get lonely, depressed, homesick for the bustle of the city and a sight of the policeman on their own block."

"One day last week a lady who lives half an hour out from the Grand Central Station, on the Harlem Road, came in for a servant to do cooking and help with the laundry work. She keeps two servants."

"I went in to the servant's waiting room, put the matter before them and mentioned the wages, $20 per month. Not a girl moved. Two or three, by my wish, came out and talked with the lady, who eventually went away servantless."

"Two days later in came her husband. His wife had not yet secured a servant, he told me, and she had sent him to try his luck. He was a breezy, genial, inspiring sort of person, whereas his wife had a hopeless, it's-no-use sort of expression."

"Well in less than half an hour the man struck a bargain with a girl who had told me flatly the day before, 'Indeed I'd like to see myself living out of New York,' and he took her along with him that afternoon."

"No, a servant doesn't always stay in a place because a man hires her, but then it's something to get one even to try a place in the country. It is true, too, although to tell this seems rather hard on my own sex, that in cases I have known where a man gave most of the orders servants stayed along month after month quite contented."

"It is not because men are more considerate of servants than are women, either. In my opinion most men have little or no consideration for servants. They don't care a rap whether the roof of their bedroom leaks or their bed is comfortable, if they ever get an afternoon off or a Sunday out. Nevertheless men can get more work out of the average servant than women can."

"In one household I know of, whenever there are to be extra guests for dinner, which means more work for both maids, it is always the husband who spreads the news below stairs and talks over the menu with the cook. So sure as the wife does it—she told me this herself—the servants begin to sulk and talk about being overworked."

"I think many of us who have studied domestic science and given much time to social economics have foreseen for some years that the business of housekeeping—and it is a very serious business these days—will before long pass into the keeping of men," declared a lecturer and writer of domestic science topics. "Almost without exception the best hotels and boarding houses are managed by men, and private households where the master superintends the accounts and to some extent gives personal supervision to matters above and below stairs, are generally in a very prosperous condition."

"The latter day educated wife and mother has been tried and found wanting in the role of housekeeper, I think. This appertains more particularly to the modest home where one, two or three servants are kept, than to larger, more imposing establishments in which rules are more rigidly enforced and more system is observed."

"I am almost confident that in a big majority of the modest homes I know, were the husband to take command, the servant problem would cease to be a problem, and that almost any man of fair intelligence and ordinary knowledge of business methods can run a house better than a woman, if he gives his mind to it."

"Good housekeeping, for that matter, does not rest on high intelligence and intellectual attainments. Some of the most intellectual women I have known have been the poorest housekeepers, the least well equipped for handling servants. In fact, these women can't get a servant to stay with them longer than a month."

"System, order, strict attention to business are what count highest in housekeeping. I do not say that the business is beyond the capabilities of most women, but simply that woman is failing to distinguish herself in grappling with housekeeping problems. The modern American woman's success along this line is far from noteworthy."

"The reason? Who can tell?"

"To my mind it is a dislike, a fast growing dislike, for housekeeping; but whether it is the higher education or the strenuous life, or an anti-housekeeping microbe infesting the air which is responsible for this dislike I am not prepared to say."

"It is quite true that men of affairs leave their desks and places of business to hunt up a servant for their wife, and I should not be surprised if before long they will be obliged to manage these servants, that is, if they continue to keep house."—N. Y. Sun.

MAN AND WOMAN SHOPPING

A Jeweller Tells Why He Prefers the former as a Customer

"It is more common than it was formerly for a man to buy a ring which pleases him to give to his betrothed," said a jeweller, "and some of us jewellers are exceedingly pleased over it."

"Why? Because a man buys a ring in about fifteen minutes, whereas a woman takes something like fifteen hours."

"Not one hour ago a young man came in, looked over our trays of diamond rings—he didn't ask to see any other kind—selected one, laid down a $1,000 bill to pay for it and walked out with the ring in his pocket, the whole transaction taking about twenty minutes."

"Yesterday, in the forenoon, which is always our busiest time, a young woman strolled in, took up her position at the ring counter and spent hours, it seemed to me, inspecting and trying on rings of every conceivable color and design, after which she walked out, saying she would come in again."

"This morning she appeared accompanied by her fiance and again she went over the stock, finally selecting four rings to be sent to the house for her family to approve."

"In the course of time undoubtedly we shall sell that young woman a ring. But it will take time."—N. Y. Sun.

THE RIGHT CARE OF THE RUG

An Expert Tells How It Should Be Bought and Used

The room where the rug selector does business has a charm all its own. This charm is due to its hangings and its floor pieces and the squares and oblongs scattered here and there. There are rugs everywhere, heaped in corners, nailed against the seal colored walls, where the colors show vividly or modestly.

"Men do not like small rugs," says the selector. "The are irritated by them."

"When they buy they invariably select big rugs. I always enjoy selling to a man for he knows what he wants."

"When he comes in to look over my modest collection or to accompany me to some place whose rug glories are known to me as soon as he is told that he has really a bargain before him he orders it sent home. He never insults me by doubting my word or by the suspicion that I am trying to get the best of him."

"If he cannot afford what I select he tells me and names his limit, but women—"

Miss Holt shakes her head with a gesture sadly wise.

"Not all women, of course," she continues. "There are many who are broad-minded in their attitude toward life even in the matter of spending money, the final test. But a great many haggle and debate and waste time and strength over a few dollars, and occasionally imply that I am trying to get more than my legitimate commissions."

"I must tell you a funny story. The other day a woman came to me and asked my assistance in selection. She said that she had taken a new apartment and she wanted a handsome rug for a very good sized dining room."

"She wanted the rug large, and it must be Oriental; no homemade article need apply. She had heard that Oriental rugs were coming in."

"After a little chat with her on the subject of color, use, &c., I asked her what she wanted to pay, and she said: 'Not more than $4,' and she proceeded that statement by looking me over from head to foot to see if I could be trusted."

"At first I thought she was joking, and repeated it after her: 'Four dollars?' She seemed surprised, and said: 'Yes; can't I get one for that? I saw some in the window of a department store for less.'

"I really did not think it was worth while entering into details. I advised her to buy some denim, and did permit myself the privilege of saying that she would have to pay more than $4 for oilcloth."

"She was an exception, but as a general thing I may say that the average woman does not understand the significance of rugs. Time and time again a would-be purchaser has come to me after she has had all the wall and ceiling decorations done, after she had bought furniture and announced that she has a little money left to put in rugs, and asked what can I do for her."

"Properly selected, the rug represents as investment just as valuable as gold or diamonds, and the housekeeper who recognizes that fact has added a valuable truth to her store. Never will a time come when she cannot get full money for a genuine rug if she has bought wisely and preserved carefully."

"In furnishing one should begin with the floor and work up to the ceiling, never down, in the color scheme. As the most expensive article in a well appointed apartment the rug should have the place of honor, and the rest of the place should harmonize with it, never vice versa."

"How often I have heard a discouraged home maker say, lost in raptures over some beautiful bargain rug, 'Oh, if I had only bought the rug first. Now it is too late, too late for color and for price.' It is a good thing to remember that at very little expense the wall paper can be changed, but it is not so simple a matter to alter the tone of a rug."

"However, that can be done in some instances. A married woman came to me the other day in a state of mind. She had a rug and had grown attached to it, as one does with rugs more than any other article of household utility, and she had suddenly awakened to the fact that it was too pale."

"I remembered the rug perfectly, just as some one else with a different trend of mind might recall the complexion of a kitten. I had always felt the paleness she complained of, and whenever I entered her room great blotches of white seemed to start out and speak to me."

"For a long time I had been aware of the fact that unscrupulous dealers doctored rugs and that one of the ingredients used was coffee to turn the white into the varying cream shades that are so interesting in the antique specimens. All my rugs were to be made experiences on, but one day I confessed that hers was a cheap rug I suggested that she experiment and if the scheme failed she could wash the coffee off and the rug would be none the worse."

"She followed my advice, and the next time I went there the tone was all right, nothing staring or obtrusive. She had tested the strength of the coffee, and with a small brush had gone over the white blotches with good effect."

Miss Holt looks amused that any one should be ignorant of the fact that rugs are doctored.

"Doctored? Why it is done constantly," she says. "Have you never at the rug auctions heard a facile tongued dealer say?"

"Now, ladies and gentlemen, I ask you to take this rug to the window and look at it. Our goods are here for inspection. We don't wish to take advantage of you. Please examine your purchase in a strong light."

"In nine cases out of ten you may be sure that such articles have had a dose of something to brace them up. One of the favorite tonics is glycerine, which gives that lovely soft sheen you have no doubt admired when you have passed the window of a rug bazaar. The sheen will remain for a long time and can easily be renewed."

"Oxalic acid is used to change the scarlet to old rose, and lemon juice has its special use. Incidentally, the buyer of rugs should know the difference between mineral and vegetable dyes and bear in mind the fact that only the former are used in the real night."

"To give dealers due credit the fault does not lie entirely with them; they give the public what is demanded. Purchasers will throw aside beautiful rugs, some of them genuine antiques, of soft coloring and with every evidence of durability, for some cheap affair that can be procured for a few dollars less."

"Many a dealer has told me how he hated to see some of his rugs leave his hands, knowing their value and being aware that every year added to it. Yet such rugs are sometimes returned a day or so after the sale, with the request that they be exchanged for something that has no sign of age, a frayed thread perhaps being the cause."

"It is that fraying that distresses some women who ought to be glad of it, for when it signifies age and genuineness it is worth the expense and trouble of the remedy. I have just had an experience with a customer who objected to paying $112 for having seven rugs repaired."

"I finally persuaded her that the money would be well expended, and hardly had I finished with her when another woman asked my advice about having a strip cut off a gorgeous rug that had broken away, a process that would have entirely destroyed the design. It was only after an hour's eloquence that I convinced her of the wisdom of preserving her purchase, even at the sacrifice of a new gown."

"It is a great delight to me when a woman admires a fine rug even though she cannot afford to buy it. I have the pleasure of a connoisseur when I see her revel in the color, though she may understand nothing about the quality, but what breaks my heart is to have a woman pay two or three hundred dollars for a gown that will not last her through the season and then come to me and expect that I can purchase a handsome rug for twenty or thirty."

"A small rug may be bought for that, even a fine one sometimes, but not the average dining room rug, the 9 by 12 which is ordinarily demanded. When a woman wants that kind I advise a Celtic, a good durable Scotch make."

"I call myself a selector, which means everything or nothing, as you look at it. My first years in the business were given gladly to my friends and their friends and I believed the experience gained was recompense enough."

"Travel succeeded that phase, and for years I poked about odd corners of the Orient, studying in museums under the instruction of famous collectors and experts. Today I consider myself fully equipped for expert advice in a field that is by no means overrun and certainly offers a fair chance for one or more of the many women who are looking about for means of livelihood."

"We do not treat our rugs as the Orientals do. Rugs are almost sacred to them, and when they enter a mosque or house the sandals are removed, and in consequence the floors are kept in an immaculate condition."

"They adapt their rugs better than we do. They would not put a Persian rug in a Chinese corner, nor would they select a rug of fine weave and delicate texture for a dining room, which is the place where a rug gets the hardest wear."

"The rugs that the faithful have taken to Mecca and rested, prayed and slept on become valuable through force of association, and I find that Americans are not devoid of sentiment in this matter. Just at present I am in negotiation with a man who wants a rug of certain make and is willing to pay a fair price, about $1,500."

"I know that in a certain loft in the very city where he lives there is just such a rug as would suit him, but if I should suggest it he would scorn the idea, for unless a purchaser is sure that it comes either directly from the East or is stored away in New York he has not the same respect for it—it is a little inclined to doubt its make and antiquity. A rug collector wants that indefinable something that the rug more than any other article of house furnishing possesses when it is the genuine article."

"The speaker emphasizes her remarks by lifting a bit of wonderful color here and there."

"Just a look at these small saddle bags evokes dreams of the desert when you know rug lore and realize from coloring and design that they have made many a pilgrimage," she goes on.

"This strip that fits over the shoulders means that some small Mohammedan boy has used it to carry his school books. Both of these were picked up in Stamboul, in one of the kahns where Persian merchants come every year and sit until they sell their wares."

"When you once begin to study rugs you begin on an unending experience of romance and mystery. To the average buyer a rug is a mass of color, with a distinct utilitarian purpose. To the collector, the expert, the student that is only the obvious, commonplace meaning."

"All Oriental rugs have their special significance more or less hidden from the casual observer. It may be a tree, a strange stiff animal, a cabalistic mark—there is a meaning in each. On the Chinese rug, for example, the student knows that the dragon with five claws on each of his four feet is the exclusive emblem of the Emperor, and on an Indian rug a knot and flower design would mean divine bounty and power."

"I am constantly asked to go out with some searcher for a prayer rug, and when I inquire I learn that the desire comes from no intimate knowledge of what a prayer rug is, but just because the name sounds Oriental and the request might just as well be for a Kirman or a Kurdistan."

"The prayer rug was undoubtedly invented for the purpose of providing the worshipper with one absolutely clean place on which to say his prayers. For, unless the Moslem is sure of that, he considers himself polluted."

"From this beginning the prayer rug gradually showed in its weave all the religious emblems that the maker or designer could put in it. I have recently sold a small embroidered prayer rug that was certainly made 200 years ago, probably at Isbahan."

"On it is a small embroidered mark to show where the bit of earth from Mecca was to be placed, and in obedience to the law in the Koran this is touched by the forehead when the head is bowed to the ground. The Persian women who weave prayer rugs seldom weave any other kind."

"Usually the prayer rug has the mihrab or niche that suggests the place in the wall of the mosque showing the direction of Mecca. Some of the prayer rugs have a representation of the hands of Mohammed, and on them the suppliant places his own when he falls in prayer. In the corners of some are trees and some have pulpits. I have been surprised at the knowledge many of my customers have displayed at the meaning of these symbols."

"On some of the inscription rugs are strange characters, which can only be deciphered by the Oriental scholar. A very famous one is owned by one of the Rothschilds. The verses are worked in oval cartouches, and one I remember goes: 'May every act of thine prosper and may every year and every day be springtime.'"

"On a side table is what seems at first sight to be merely the usual collection of photographs of old masters picked up by the tourist. These pictures are described instead as tools of the rug selector's trade, for in each picture is the reason of its purchase, and that is the bit of rug painted therein, which helps the student by its faithful representation in classifying rugs of that period, a use to which the artist probably never dreamed his canvas would be put.—N. Y. Sun."

Printing Election Ballots

The following article for last week's issue of Practical Politics may be of interest, even if election day has passed:

This week the printing and shipping of ballots for the election has been going on, and clerks in the office of the secretary of state having the handling of the work have been occupying temporary headquarters at the office of the state printers.

The provisions of law require that five days before the election the secretary of the commonwealth shall send to the registrars of voters of each city and town, for posting, a certain number of lists of candidates to be voted for in each precinct, the so-called sample ballot, printed on different colored paper. The first work of printing is directed to this end. The lists are compared with a table showing the districts in which each precinct is situated, and each list is checked when compared and when mailed.

It is not so much the time demanded in printing the grand total, 1,475,000 official ballots, as that required properly to make and supervise the changes; the liability to err here is manifest when it is realized that there are more than 2,200 changes with the 1034 candidates running for office. The ballots are printed in combinations. For example, a combination on the press which will print a sheet containing eight ballots will be liable to have voting precincts requiring different numbers of ballots— one 1500, one 1200, one 1000 and one 1800. The presses are run for the smallest number, and the voting places demanding more ballots are made up in other combinations. In some instances a voting place will be in seven or eight combinations and the ballots do not come together until handled by the collectors.

In the folding department a large number of folders are at work, and, as the law will not permit the employment of women more than 58 hours per week, it becomes necessary to have one set for day and one for night.

The proper shipping of the ballots is a matter of the utmost importance. Several hundred packing cases have been required. The required number of ballots for each of the voting places in the state is sealed up with a transparent indorsement, so that the name of the town, etc., may be seen without opening the package, which must remain sealed until the opening of the polls on the morning of the election. The state seal is used in sealing the packages.

These are placed in cases, together with the specimen ballots, cards of instruction, etc., for posting about the ballot place. An error in the shipment might be disastrous. Two sets of ballots are sent about 12 hours apart, or by different routes. The express companies receive full directions and the penalty for wilful delay in delivery of ballots is $1000 fine, or one year's imprisonment.

Upon the delivery of the ballots to the city or town clerk, a receipt is signed by him and returned immediately to the secretary of the commonwealth, showing that the ballots have been properly received. The exceptional facilities which the printing company has for doing this work, and the intelligent interest taken not only by the heads of departments, but by all employed, makes it possible to accomplish the work with the chances of friction or error reduced to a minimum. Every possible precaution is taken to overcome unforeseen emergencies, as fire, breaking down of presses, etc.

This shipment of ballots is made up on a schedule figured out from a study of the distance of each voting place in the state. The first to go are the ballots destined to go into the hands of the voters on the island of Nantucket. Next in order come those for use in the towns of the island of Martha's Vineyard. Then the scene changes, to use a theatrical term, to the hills of Berkshire, when the towns that have to be reached by stage are the first to receive attention.

Gradually the circle draws near the state house until finally the last assortment, those for the Boston precincts, are sent out. Duplicate sets for every voting place in the state are kept on hand at the state printers all ready for shipment, if they are needed on short-notice.

Close track is kept of the express receipts signed by the city and town clerks when they receive the ballots, as the receipts come back to the secretary's office. As soon as it is discovered that there is an unusual delay in the return of one of these papers an inquiry is started. The object of this is to have on file in the secretary's office, several days before the election, receipts showing that responsibility for the ballots being on hand is off the secretary's shoulders.

Even as late in the game as that there have been cases where the third set of ballots retained by the state printer proved a godsend. This was in cases where a town hall had burned down just previous to the election and the ballots already receipted for had been destroyed. This was unusual, of course, but a simple telegram to the secretary of state started another lot of ballots by messenger and they were delivered in time for the use of the voters.

cations from W. H. Magne and Chas. E.
Hatfield, respectively chairmen of the Boston & Worcester St. Ry. Co. of order for crossover on Boylston street, and Light Co. for pole locations on Commonwealth ave., Fuller st. and Riverside

HEARINGS.

At a hearing on petition of N. F. Am-berson et al for removal of 3 trees on Chase street, Newton Centre, opposite estate of C. A. Butterworth, Mr. James D. Greene was the first speaker and presented plans and photographs showing location and description of the trees which the petitioners desire removed.

Mr. Frank A. Hovey said that the sidewalks and gutter were so run down that water ran upon the sidewalks and passers by had to take to the street in rainy weather. The walk here is so narrow on account of the trees that the snow plow in winter has to run on its side in order to get by.

Mr. Arthur C. Badger said that within 4 feet of one of these trees there was a bad excavation which made it exceedingly dangerous.

Mr. Charles E. Townsend said the trees were a nuisance and dangerous particularly in winter. They were also unsightly and in the way.

Mr. J. A. Hovey spoke in a similar vein.

Letters of remonstrance were read from Mr. C. A. Butterworth and at the close of the hearing the matter was referred to the Committee on Public Works.

At the hearing on petition of N. E.
Tel. & Tel. Co. for location for one pole on Vernon st., Mr. A. M. Leonard suggested that the Company might make use of an arm at present attached to a tree. A remonstrance was read from Mr.
B. F. Holmes.

No one appeared at the hearings upon petitions of the N. & W. Gas Light Co.
for attachments on corner Summer and Beacon sts. and on Washington street
Ward 7 and on petitions of N. E. Tel.
& Tel. Co. for attachment on Howard
st. and on Columbus st.

ELECTRIC POWER.

Every plumber, carpenter and hardware merchant ought to have a small electric motor, say one-half horse power.

You will be surprised at the kind and amount of work that can be done with a motor of this size, such as sharpening skates, scythes and all kinds of cutlery, polishing and grinding metals, splitting and cutting up stock for windows and door screens, etc.

The motors are cheap and cost of operation is very small. Let us help you in any matter pertaining to power.

MOTHER OF CHURCHES

Upper Falls Church Observes Anniversary

First Methodist Church in Newton is 73 Years of Age

The Methodist Episcopal Society of Newton Upper Falls, the mother of all the Methodist churches in this city, observed its seventy third anniversary last Sunday evening with a service intended to indicate the relations of the church to the different phases of life and a full and free opportunity was given the several speakers to say what they pleased. The church was well filled and the program was under the efficient direction of the pastor, Rev. O. W. Scott.

The speakers were Mayor Alonzo R. Weed, who spoke on the relation of the Church to the city; Prof. A. J. George, on its relation to the Schools; Mr. Sidney L. Burr on its relation to the Business World; Mr. Eugene Hough on its relation to the Laboring Man and Dr. C. A. Jacobs on its relation to the Professional World.

We are fortunate in being able to give to our readers the addresses of Mayor Weed, Professor George and Mr. Hough, as follows:

MAYOR WEED

It is the common and wisely accepted view that the church shall not meddle with politics. Nothing could be more deplorable than the attempt upon the part of the members of any church or religious sect to capture the offices of a better things, the real test is the every day value of their well wishing in dollars and cents, or in earnest thought and effort for such better things.

In the early days when towns were closely allied to the church, there seems to have been faith in the possibilities of a civic life beyond the meagre realities of their present. And guided by the same idealism one may still see by the eye of faith not merely the city which is but the city that may be and should be. To believe in the great possibilities of a noble civic life, to fix our thoughts and efforts upon them and to arouse ourselves with the enthusiasm of such hopes, should be the idealism, the civic religion of every citizen, whatever his creed.

And it does not seem beyond the proper limits of the functions of any church that it shall foster and teach a civic religion such as this.

MR. GEORGE.

Although my topic is the Church and the Schools it cannot be properly considered without the addition of one other—that of the Home. The Home, the Church, the School—these are the great sources of all that is beautiful and true in our American life today.

Methodist Episcopal Church, Newton Upper Falls.

city or to direct its policy. It would be equally deplorable to allow any of the public moneys to be used to provide for or aid any religious institution however worthy. For it is clear that all cannot be cared for and certainly there should be no discrimination. And yet the church may and should play an important part in the civic life of any community.

It is the duty of the church not merely to prepare men for the future, but to equip them with a spiritual capacity and a moral earnestness to cope with the present. And it cannot be too often emphasized that the question of good government is essentially a moral question and only incidentally a political one. And so in every well ordered community there must always be a large appeal to motives and principles which are distinctly religious.

Various remedies are offered from time to time for bettering municipal government. And not infrequently great stress is laid upon some change in system. But the best system ever devised can be misused by inefficient or dishonest men. Often an appeal is made to have the public business done on business principles. And nothing could be more desirable than adopting in the administration of public affairs the same system, economies and methods which are practiced in private affairs. But the business principle most frequently applied to public matters by even our best citizens seems to be to buy the benefits of good government in the cheapest market and to sell them in the dearest, or in other words to get as much as possible out of the city and to give as little as possible in return in sacrifice of money, time or personal advantage.

After all to have a well governed city it is necessary first of all and above all else to have good citizens. Burke said: "There never was long a corrupt government of a virtuous people." And wherever there exists a chronic state of bad government, it seems fair to assume that the community deserves no better fate. For while its citizens may wish for Those who are familiar with the history of these three great centres of influence are somewhat disturbed by the changes which are taking place in at least two of these in our country: the Home and the Church, and are prepared to affirm unhesitatingly that the School is at present the one supremely democratic institution in our land. From every quarter come warnings against the elements of modern life which are eating at the heart of the American home. These elements do not come from our emigrant population. They in the main reveal a higher ideal of the sanctity of the home than do the native-born. Race suicide, divorce, and luxury, these are the enemies of the home, and these, mirabile dictu, are the growth of our own soil. You all know of that splendid address of Pres. Roosevelt in Washington and his merciless scourging of certain tendencies in our modern life. You also remember Pres. Eliot's address of not long ago upon a similar subject when he said that the nearest approach to the ideal home was not in the backbay, but in a section of Boston inhabited by a certain type of foreigners.

Equally great changes, though fortunately not so discouraging on the ethical side, are the cause of some apprehension, are taking place in the church. We hear it said on all sides, by those who believe in the church, and have their interests at heart as well as by those who are ever ready to cast a slur upon her, that she is losing her hold upon the people. Alarm is felt at all this in the church itself, and the question uppermost with her is, How can she relate her activities, her ministrations to the needs of a changing intellectual and social condition? I have heard today that inspiring teacher and preacher the Rev. Hugh Black of Edinburgh, who has been invited to this country by one of our theological seminaries to arouse an interest among students in that noble profession, the Christian Ministry, so that its ranks may be recruited from its original sources the intellectual and high-minded young men from Christian families. The interests of these young men have become diverted into other channels, bringing greater returns, social and pecuniary. The fact that such a condition of things exists is naturally a cause for alarm. Nowhere is there more need of scholarly progressive and hence aggressive leadership than in the churches. But when shackles are put upon the feet of progress, and young men are told that they must limit their research, that truth will not always be welcome to their congregations, is there any wonder that they prefer other lines of activity, where freedom prevails? For illustration read the communication of Pres. Huntington, Dean Warren, and Prof. Perrin of Boston University in regard to the treatment of one of its leaders in scholarship, and reverence for truth—Prof. Mitchell.

Then too the problem of how to interest and hold the young is a pressing one, and the Church is anxious on this subject as she well may be. The activities of the modern college settlement houses, so many of which are unrelated to the church because the church has neglected its great opportunities is another cause of surprise. The church must arouse itself and cease to be as it too often is, a mere club, and begin to do the work for which it was destined, the widening of the bonds of Christian brotherhood. That it is thus arousing itself in many directions is an encouraging one.

The institution which relates itself to the home on the one hand and the church on the other is the school. Because of the very weakness of the church and the home of which I have spoken the school has assumed some of the functions of each. You have only to visit these schools in any of our cities to find evidences of this. Taking a single illustration from my own department, that of English literature, is it not true that in every school where this subject is taught as it should be its influence is powerful along those lines in which the home life is often only negative? The school thus supplements in a splendid manner ideals which the church is continually holding up to the young. In the single matter of reading, how much has the school to overcome in the atmosphere of the home where only illustrated newspapers and periodicals form the staple. In holding to the noble ideals of great literature, ancient, mediæval, and modern, we are insisting that to teach the youth, what to love, and what to hate, whom to honor and whom to despise we are uniting our efforts with the best efforts of the parent and the pastor in what is fundamental in all human training.

The business of the school is along these lines of activity, physical, intellectual, moral, and if it fails in any one of these it fails utterly, for physical health, intellectual strength, and moral soundness are the three unities in that trinity of noble manhood. And with recent vents in our commercial, political, and social life full in mind can we doubt that there is need for such manhood. That our homes our schools and our churches have such loyal self-sacrificing and heroic defenders and exponents as Pres. Roosevelt, Dist. Attorney Jerome and Mayor Weaver, is a cause for thankfulness. In closing let me urge the parents and the pastors—the home and the Church—to insist that the schools combine the physical the intellectual, and the moral in proper harmony; and that the teacher of the youth shall illustrate this happy harmony of physical health, intellectual strength and moral sanity in their own lives; then the schools will not mistake information for inspiration, acquirement for culture, costume for character, appearances for realities; and the Church, School and Home will have worked together for the making of man. Sen. Hoar once said: "No race or nation will ever be great, or long maintain greatness, unless it hold fast to the faith, in a loving God, in a beneficent Providence, and in a personal immortality. Where this faith lives are found Courage, Manhood, Power; where this faith dies Courage, Manhood, Power die with it." The preservation of these is the salvation of society.

MR. HOUGH.

Mr. Eugene Hough, president of the Newton Socialist Club, spoke as follows on the relations of "The Church and the Laboring Man."

It is usual to say that all of us are workers. I am unable to speak for all. But for those whose hands, like mine, have been soiled and calloused by hard labor ever since they can remember, I can speak. I know their hopes, their aspirations, their strength, their limitation, their treatment and their condition. I know their unvoiced attitude toward the church and the much voiced attitude of the church toward them. Of these things I can speak advisedly.

We who work, we who create all that is demanded to satisfy the requirements of society have, for many generations, looked to the church with a yearning hope for a recognition of our aspirations, hoping that it would aid us in securing just treatment and righteous conditions. We have looked and hoped and prayed in vain.

The church has for centuries been the mainstay of the exploiting class, aiding in all ways that class to absorb and take from us the greater portion of the product of our labor. We are men; sons of God and joint heirs with Christ. We know it. We will no longer be chloroformed into silence with alms and promises of future rewards. We want and will have right here and now our equity as heirs of God. We spurn charity, in the sense to which the church has belittled that noble word.

It is useless to longer tell us that the church can not deal with the things of this world. We know that it can. We know that it must. It is of this world, a part of the social organism—its soul in fact. It does deal with the things of this world; the schools, the making of laws and the administration of laws. It can and must aid us in the attainment of our rightful inheritance.

Our rightful inheritance is this: An equal access to, and an equal opportunity to use and employ all natural and social resource, be it in whatsoever form. To create and develop according to the best there is in each of us, for the greater individual and collective good. With such inheritance granted, mark you, "granted," as if human rights were a matter of grant, we know would come the abolition of the greatest immorality of all time, the sale of human beings. Against the abolition of this greatest of immoralities the church stands a mighty bulwark. For its abolition we struggle and suffer and sacrifice. The church stands today as an upholder and sustainer of a condition which makes of labor an economic commodity. Labor cannot be segregated from the laborer. When one sells his labor he sells himself. Men women and little children compete with each other for an opportunity to sell themselves, and the church stands by and applauds the system, stirring itself only in a benevolent way to relieve some individual who was more easily broken than his brothers. Again I say that we spurn charity. We want justice, not charity, and demand of the church that it forego the pleasure of almsgiving and aid us in securing justice. We know that were we accorded just treatment we would no longer be a commodity. Think of it, the skill of a human hand, the energy of a human brain, fashioned after God and moved by Divine impulse, set up in the market place and sold like dumb cattle and stone paving blocks. Is it not the greatest of immoralities? Is it not unrighteous? Is it not alone the duty but the God-given privilege of the church to aid us in the abolition of this stupendous crime against man and against God?

If at times we are bitter and cry out against the church it is not that we lust for sin. It is then that we are freest from sin, and come closest to our Father and Him that we know as our elder brother. We sigh for fellowship. We yearn for the love that is denied us by our brothers and reject the charity that is offered us in its stead.

This yearning for fellowship, this desire for righteous conditions has crystallized into an industrial faith with us: a social philosophy; an economic and political science. We have labeled this science with the one word "Socialism." This science conveys in itself the complete tale of social wrongs and how to right them. The student of this science, (Continued on 3d page) and the most of us are such in a degree, is led direct to the everlasting laws of God. He sees clearly where and how and by whom these laws are disobeyed. He sees that there is an economic basis for all things social, political and religious. He sees that the church changes with economic mutation. This knowledge inspires him with hope. Hope begets faith, and he straightway foretells the time when the church shall be with him, and he in full fellowship with the Eternal. This hope and faith makes of him a better man and a better citizen, right here and now. It gives him a for a gleam of the Golden Age—to come not past—when there shall be no classes, no slaves, no exploiters. When each shall be recognized as a son of God and accorded his rightful inheritance. When he shall have an opportunity to develop the best there is in him, producing his very best, with the knowledge that none of such product shall be taken from him, neither by force nor by the subtle methods of rent, interest or profits. When he shall be forever relieved of want and the haunting spectre, the fear of want. All this and much more he sees and foretells. It is such foreseeing that makes him yearn for the aid of the church that this Golden Age may the sooner be attained. For nineteen centuries we have prayed to "Our Father" that His will may be done "on earth." By the study of socialism we are led to see the near approaching answer to our prayers. It is the high privilege of the church to aid us in clearing the way for its approach. It is the solemn duty of the church to point out clearly the things that cumber and obstruct the way. If such pointing out of obstacles and clearing of the way entails unusual effort and sacrifice on the part of individuals, what matter? Other great souls have endured and sacrificed. You will not be alone.

No one will question this: The mission of the church is to make men better. The question is: How can it be done? Bunyan tells us of a man trying to put out a fire by pouring water on it. As the more water was poured on the fire the fiercer it seemed to burn, Christian was much perplexed, until he passed to the other side and he saw a man there pouring oil on it. Manifestly the way to put out the fire was to stop pouring on the oil. So the church can best perform its holy mission of making men better by passing to the other side and stopping the stream of unrighteous exploiting of man by his fellow man. Know this Profit is robbery. Interest is an iniquity and Rent is an abomination. All customs and systems that permit, under whatsoever guise, one to take from another without returning an equivalent, are in themselves little crimes against God and tend to make men bad.

We the producers of all useful things, from whom is taken four-fifths of all that we do produce, with but a mere pretense of an equivalent, cry aloud against such unjust system. We beseech of the church that it shall aid us in its destruction and the upbuilding of a more righteous one. Stay your alms-giving, that but relieves the individual, and help us to put an end to the system that places the individual where he needs alms. Help us, and your mission of salvation shall sweep the whole round earth, even as our gospel is now preached in every language and in every country on earth.

The Methodist Church of Upper Falls has had a long and honorable record. In 1826 a Methodist class was formed in the then thriving village by Rev. Joel Steele but after a short existence was dissolved on account of removal of its members. Mr. Marshall S. Rice, in 1828 succeeded in forming a class consisting of Mary Rice, Nathan Rice, Gardner Rice, Sarah Livermore, Eliza Eager, Dorcas Smith, Mary A. Morse, Mary Childs, Ann Winslow, Mary Fogg, Mary Boynton, Sarah Willis, Rebecca Garfield, Jeremiah Trull, Susan Taverner and Sarah Brackett. On November 11, 1832, the church was organized with 53 members and probationers, and occupied its present building on Chestnut and Summer streets, with Rev. Chas. K. True as pastor.

This edifice had been erected in 1827 for a Unitarian Society which led a precarious life for five years and was then glad to offer its building for every other Sabbath to the Methodists. The structure was built on land of the Elliott Manufacturing Company and was owned by that Company and Mr. Rufus Ellis. It contained 48 pews and cost $1300. In 1833 the property was offered for sale for $2600 and was purchased by Mr. Marshall S. Rice. In doing this he was obliged to mortgage his entire property and his action and the support given him by his loyal wife, in taking this important step indicate a high degree of Christian faith and courage. In 1836 the building was cut in two, one portion being moved back and twenty pews added, the entire cost of the building and improvements being about $1500. Mr. Rice then made a gift of the building to the new Society and at the end of the deed making the transfer he added these words: "May I meet thousands of happy souls in glory, born new in this house." The Society has placed a tablet in the church to the memory of Mr. Rice and the portraits of Mr. and Mrs. Rice adorn the vestry.

The original members included representatives of such families as the Winslows, Stackpoles, Beards, Hammonds, Mills, Greenwoods, Fullers and Fogg and later came such men as Noah Perrin, Wm. B. Locke, Joseph F. Brown and Nathan Longfellow.

The first bell became cracked and in 1861 Mr. Rice presented the Society with another, upon which was inscribed "O, come let us worship and bow down, let us kneel before the Lord our Maker." The clock was given by Mr. Joseph C. Everett in 1847, the vestry was added in 1855, the organ in 1863 and the parsonage purchased in 1865. The two rock maps in front of the church were brought from New Ipswich, N. H., by Mr. Rice when they were but six inches high and planted by him.

The pastors of the church have been Reverends Charles K. True, John Parker, N. B. Spaulding, C. S. MacCreed, Edward Othman, N. S. Spaulding, James Mudge, E. Kibby, J. A. Merrill, J. A. Dennison, Z. A. Mudge, J. Sanborn, M. P. Webster, Clinton Field, Simon Putnam, D. V. Bannister, J. Paulson, J. W. Lewis, Wm. Pentecost, J. F. Bailey, J. W. Mowry, J. W. Bailey, R. W. Allen, W. B. Touthin, W. J. Promfret, F. Furber, C. T. Johnson, A. F. Herrick, J. Peterson, J. H. Emerson, N. Fellows, F. J. McConnell, W. A. Mayo, Julius P. West, R. B. Miller and O. W. Scott.

The present officers of the Society, which at present consists of about 90 members, are: Trustees, Lewis P. Everett, Hosea C. Hoyt, H. E. Locke, J. W. Howe, Walter Chesley, C. R. Brown, I. W. Sweet, William Warren; Stewards, H. C. Hoyt, John Arnold, H. E. Locke, Wm. Warren, O. E. Nutter, Giles Dyson, Walter Chesley, Wilbur Halliday, Treasurer, Chas. R. Brown; S. S. Supt. O. E. ## Communication.

Newton, Nov. 14th, 1905.
Editor of the GRAPHIC:

Dear Sir:
Surely it was a beautiful and enduring monument that Miss Lucy Burr erected to the memory of her brother Charles Walcott Burr when she presented to the City the little park in Auburn-dale.

Monuments of stone may be defaced or will crumble and even fall in time; libraries will burn or may fall into disuse, but for all time the name of Charles Walcott Burr will be kept in memory by this act of his devoted sister. What more suitable monument could be erected for anyone?

Are there not others who will follow Miss Burr's example giving beauty spots to the city in the name of some loved one who is departed?

So long as the City of Newton shall remain the name of John S. Farlow, for instance, will be kept alive.

If such presentation is not possible now, let it be provided for in the will.
Yours very truly,
Forester.

Death of Miss Chaffin.

Miss Mary Adelia Chaffin, daughter of the late Edwin Chaffin, died at the Hollis on Saturday after a long illness. She was a native of St. Louis where she was born 60 years ago and she had made Newton her home for 50 years. Miss Chaffin was a member of Eliot church and the Social Science Club and was a woman of most charitable disposition. She is survived by one sister and two brothers. The funeral, which was largely attended by relatives and friends, was held from the home of her sister, Mrs. Edwin O. Childs, on Richardson street, Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Rev. Dr. Wolcott Calkins was the officiating clergyman and the Albion quartette rendered, "Gathering Home," "Eternal Goodness," and "Passing Out of the Shadow." The floral tributes were numerous and beautiful. The interment was in the family lot in Newton Cemetery.

in the reading matter, or $1.00 per inch in the advertising columns.The citizens of Newton outside of denominational lines have two reasons to regret the acceptance by Rev. Robert Keating Smith, of the rectorship of the Westfield Episcopal Church.Mr. Smith has served the city with great earnestness and ability as a member of the School Committee since the resignation of Mr. George C. Travis two years ago. As a friend of young people
Mr. Smith has had remarkable success, both within and without his church and he was therefore peculiarly well fitted for duty on the school committee. His re-election for another term would have been gladly given him, had he continued to reside in the city. The loss of his services in the school department is the first reason for regret, and the second is like unto it.Mr. Smith's resignation was publicly known but a few days before the closing of the lists for the Republican primaries, and the selection of his successor on the school board was therefore but hastily considered. Mr. Herbert Stebbins, who was asked to accept the vacancy is a good business man, with children in the schools and would be expected to take a deep interest in their management. But the coterie of friends whose choice fell on Mr. Stebbins failed to take into account the well known sentiment of Ward Seven in favor of giving the women another representative on the school board. They did not remember or ignore the fact that so well known a gentleman as Mr. Travis, backed by the united Republican party,
had not walked over in the election of 1902, and that the women's organizations would surely demand recognition
when the next vacancy occurred.And that is exactly what has taken place. Although the ladies were not so promptly advised of the coming vacancy, and are not so well posted on our complicated election laws, they got into the game as early as possible but too late to file nominations for the city primaries to be held next week. Whether or not their committee was hoodwinked
as to the things to be done to obtain the Republican nomination, it is safe to say that little practical experience was given them and the time limit expired before their candidate was selected.They propose, therefore, to carry the fight to the polls, and Dr. Deborah Fawcett who is their nominee will make a canvass for the position at the city election Dec. 12.An epidemic of moving buildings has recently struck the city and the possible eviction of our building ordinances by this indirect method is worthy of consideration.Our building laws call for certain fixed specifications in the matter of fire protection and of structures used for business purposes. They are well enforced when new buildings are erected.
When old buildings are moved to new locations, we believe they should be held to the same requirements as if they were new, and ample opportunity given the owners on the new location to express themselves. The hurry up method of granting such petitions on the statement of city officials merely as to injury to trees or wires is often an injustice to residents, who are compelled to have old and patched buildings placed near their property. A full hearing should be given on all such matters and great care exercised in granting them.A letter from Lincoln, the Washington correspondent of the Boston Transcript, printed elsewhere in this issue, shows clearly, how much consideration
the views of Massachusetts on the tariff question will have on Congress. As a Pennsylvania Republican said to us the other day, when discussing the matter:
"You Massachusetts people are hogs.
You want your manufactured products protected by the tariff, and insist at the same time that you shall have free raw materials." Massachusetts cannot have both, and in all fairness to the rest of the country, it ought not to have both.
It is for our representatives in Congress to obtain the best possible bargain. We hope the ridiculousness of the effect the election of a Democratic lieutenant governor might have on such a situation, will now be appreciated by our mugwump friends.Governor Herrick, of Ohio, though a defeated candidate, and whose words
therefore should be viewed in that light, has nevertheless, in our opinion, struck the right note in a recent interview, from which we quote the following:"The greatest danger now confronting the American people is the readiness in response to some sudden whim or pretext, to desert party principles and follow some individual who claims, sometimes with sincerity, often with hypocrisy, to express a cause that is higher than party fealty. We have had too many instances of that spirit which is ready to defame and destroy in order to profit by the noise."Massachusetts Republicans should take these words to heart.The Newton Highlands Improvement Society intends to take the bull by the horns in the matter of a path around the southerly shore of Crystal Lake, by asking the city to take the land needed for an outlet, for park purposes. The policy of the city is so well established in this regard that all our South Side friends have to do is to show half the necessary cost and their wishes will probably be granted.It is pleasant to learn that our custom of appointing election officers for merit instead of political influence is vindicated in the result of the recent recount of votes for lieutenant governor.
The returns from nine of the fifteen precincts of the city are proved absolutely correct by the Registrars of Voters and the changes in the other six are but trifling.The Upper Falls Methodist Church rejoices in the proud title of mother of all the churches of that denomination in the city. In view of the spirit of self sacrifice shown by its founder, the late Marshall S. Rice, the Society may be equally elated with both its ancestry and posterity.

Another Fatality.

Another fatal automobile accident in which Newton residents are interested took place last Sunday afternoon in Belmont, when the brake on Mr. Wesley J. Furbush's car, gave out while going down a steep grade on Concord avenue.Mr. Furbush was unable to stop the car which rounded the turn into Pleasant street and while endeavoring to avoid a carriage coming towards him, crashed through a fence and fell some distance into the land adjoining. The car contained Mr. and Mrs. Furbush and Dudley Cate, aged 15 years, all of Watertown street, West Newton. Mr.
Furbush escaped uninjured. Mrs. Fur-bush received a fracture of the right ankle and a severe nervous shock, while the Cate boy had four broken ribs and a punctured wound in the back. Mrs.
Furbush and Cate were made as comfortable as possible and later taken to the Newton Hospital in the ambulance, where Mr. Cate died on Tuesday. He was the son of Rev. and Mrs. George H. Cate and was an excellent musician.
Turn rule.Funeral services were held from the Cate residence on Watertown street yesterday afternoon at two o'clock. Rev.
T. P. Prudden and Rev. H. J. Patrick

ELLISON HALL, NEWTON HOSPITAL

THE GIFT OF MR. AND MRS. FRANK A. DAY.

Any one visiting the Newton Hospital will find that during the summer months quite extensive building operations have been in progress. Ellison Hall, the new nurses' home, is now practically finished, while the Administration building to make room for the new Kitchen has been moved and enlarged.

Ellison Hall is a fine large brick building, built in a most substantial but simple manner, costing $30,000. It is erected next to and connected with the present nurses' home. This new building provides accommodations for thirty to forty additional nurses who will find it admirably suited for their requirements and comfort.

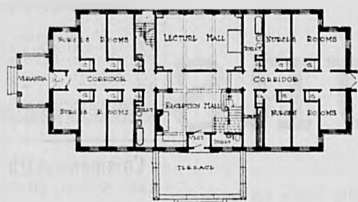

This increased staff of nurses, made possible by Ellison Hall, will enable the hospital to enlarge and improve its service in various ways. If it is desired, the work of the District Nursing Association can now be taken up and carried on with the other regular work of the hospital. A part of the proposed plan is to give the citizens of Newton an opportunity to secure the service of pupil nurses at reduced prices, in homes of moderate means or where a graduate trained nurse is not required. The hospital itself can be better served, and will be in a better position to give special nurses to its private patients.

The growth of the hospital has certainly been beyond the expectation of any of its founders. Twenty years ago it consisted of two buildings, the present Administration building and Thayer Ward. Ellison Hall makes the sixteenth in the present group of buildings, and the new kitchen will increase the number to seventeen.

Ellison Hall is given in memory of Hon. W. P. Ellison, ex-mayor of Newton, and there could be erected no more appropriate monument to his memory. He was a charter member of the Newton Hospital Corporation and for thirteen years its honored vice-president. His was always a life of service and of special service to the citizens of Newton. Ellison Hall will stand as a splendid testimony to the man and to his work for his fellowmen.

At the Theatres

Coming Attractions

Majestic Theatre—"As Ye Sow" a comedy drama, filled with abundant action and such interesting elements as a deserted wife, missing child, marching soldiers, brother rival to brother, a cheery spinster, an emotional heroine, a manly minister and a host of other characters is drawing the same enthusiastic capacity testing audiences at the Majestic theatre as during the first month of its presentation. The fifth presentation in Boston of Rev. John Snyder's "As Ye Sow" was marked last Monday night by the presentation to each lady in the audience with a beautiful souvenir in the form of a silver seasoning set. The seventh week of its stay commences with next Monday evening's performance and seats are on sale for four weeks in advance indicating a continuance of this successful engagement.

Keith's Theatre—The vaudeville program announced from Keith's theatre for the week of Nov. 20 will undoubtedly prove an attractive bill to amusement seekers of all tastes. Two of the specially imported acts of the Keith circuit of theatres will be included in the program and many of the most prominent variety entertainers of this country. The principal entertainers on the bill will be Louis Simon and Grace Gardner, assisted by a competent company, in the screamingly funny farce, "The New Coachman," which has scored the big laughing hit of every bill in which it was included this season. The piece tells the ordinary enough story of a young man getting the wrong room at a hotel, but the real laugh comes as the complication progresses. The surrounding bill is of exceptional strength and well balanced throughout. Included in the list of entertainers will be found Mr. and Mrs. Howard Truesdell, in the comedy sketch, "Ann Louise's Advice"; the wonderful Dollar troupe, of acrobats; the four Welsons, European ring experts; Cartmell and Harris, in a great dancing specialty; Will Rogers, a typical western cowboy, in a marvellous exhibition of lasso throwing and rope manipulation; O. K. Sato, skilful comedy juggler; Thomas and Payne, "real con" comedians, singers and dancers; Cherry and Bates, comedy and trick bicyclists; The Hurleys, acrobats and equilibrists; and Lillian LeRoy, "the little girl with the big voice." Cabaret's dogs, specially imported from Europe and one of the prettiest canine acts ever seen in the varieties, will be the strong attraction for the juveniles and the usual new list of comedy and interesting motion pictures will be exhibited in the kinetograph.

Tremont Theatre—The many people on the stage during the performances of George Ade's notable comedy drama, "The County Chairman," which commenced a three weeks engagement at the Tremont Theatre last Monday with Maelyn Arlucke in the title role, do not merely form a background. They each represent a distinct village type, and many of them have important parts. George Ade was able to write a great play like "The County Chairman" because he was brought up in a little Middle Western village himself and knew just what he was talking about. "The County Chairman" ran for 312 performances in New York and 113 performances in Chicago, 5 weeks in Philadelphia, and 5 weeks here in Boston, where it was the hit of the season, and has been pronounced by the press generally as the greatest American play of modern times. The cast, which is the original has been showered with praise, and the production is the most notable ever effected for an American comedy. "The County Chairman" plays to packed houses every night. It has but two more weeks to run.

Colonial Theatre—Charles Frohman who has recently added America's premier comedian Nat C. Goodwin to his list of stars, will present him at the Colonial Theatre, Boston, for two weeks, beginning Monday evening next, in the new play made from Alfred Henry Lewis' famous "Wolfville" stories, by Clyde Fitch and Willis Steel. Wolfville is said to be as breezy as the winds which sweep over the Western plains and mountains in which the scenes are laid; and to breathe the very spirit of the wildest days of the pioneer country in its earliest contact with eastern civilization.

And in its leading role we have an actor who has endeared himself to us for years by his personality, gifts and acquisitions. Mr. Frohman has surrounded Mr. Goodwin with what might consistently be called an "all star cast" as the following names make apparent, Katherine Grey, Jessie Busby, Josephine Sherwood, Phyllis Rankin, Guy Standing, Sam Edwards, Neil O'Brien, Rapley Holmes, William Lamp, Charles Butler, and a score of others. The mounting of the play is said to be of the usual Frohman excellence. Seats are now on sale at the Box Office.

Castle Square Theatre—The production of "Diplomacy" at the Castle Square Theatre next week brings another Sardou play before the Boston public. "Diplomacy" is a highly exciting drama of love and political intrigue, and its successive scenes develop a plot that keeps the audience in a constant state of suspense. The central character is a gifted adventuress in the service of the Russian Government, and it requires the united action of almost the entire dramatis personae to thwart her evil purposes. Miss Kemble will appear as the heroine, Mrs. Miss Florence Kahn as the Countess Zicka, and Mr. Craig, Mr. Mackay, Mr. Waldron, and Mr. McVay in the leading masculine roles.

Jordan Hall—The Pirates of Penzance will be given in Jordan Hall, Boston, for the benefit of the library fund of Radcliffe College, on Nov. 29 and Dec. 1st and on the afternoon of Dec. 2nd. The cast will be the same as in the Mikado last March.

Travelogues—On Saturday afternoon and evening at Tremont Temple, Mr. Burton Holmes will begin his series of finely illustrated travelogues, with "Part Arthur," the Siege and Surrender" as his opening topic. This travelogue has already been given in Chicago, St. Louis, Milwaukee and other Western cities, and in every instance has called forth the most extensive and enthusiastic praise from the press and public. It is really a marvellous "scene-transference," bringing to his audience in vivid and life-like motion pictures and colored views of actual fighting, taken during the siege by expert photographers actually on the spot—a splendid page of history upon which the ink is scarcely dry. Among the motion pictures will be shown the blowing up of Erhlingshan Fort (next to 203 Metre Hill); a battery of eleven inch guns throwing five hundred pound shells into the doomed city; 1000 Japanese hauling an eleven inch gun to its place in the trenches; Togo's flagship "The Mikasa" at 20 knot speed; manoeuvres of warships and torpedo boats showing the projecting of torpedoes and the results; a number of motion pictures by an expert attached to Kuropatkin's headquarters in Siberia and Manchuria, showing the Russian troops in camp and on the march; a splendid series of life portraits taken by another expert who was with Nogi, showing the Japanese leaders on the field and in camp and ending with the actual entry of the victorious Japanese into Port Arthur itself. There will also be shown some splendid life-portraits in motion of the Czar and the Grand Duke Sergius and other members of the Grand Ducal Autocracy of Russia. Besides the motion pictures there will be shown some splendid colored views.

THE HALF-DOLLAR MUSIC SERIES

A unique edition and one that will be of interest to all music-lovers, whether teachers or students, is the "Half-Dollar Music Series," published by the Oliver Ditson Company. It consists of twenty-six different books, each containing sixty or more pages of music of proven acceptability. Eleven volumes of this series are for piano solo, some being in the very easiest grades for beginners. "Waltzes and Two-steps for the Piano" and "Easy Salon Music," while of a popular order, are not in the same class with the "rag-time" variety, which, we regret to say, is found in many homes where one would expect to find music more in keeping with a higher standard of intelligence. Three books of piano duets are among the number, and other volumes are for the violin, mandolin and other instruments. "Thirty Songs for Children" is a book that will furnish entertainment to the little ones for many a long winter evening.

One of the latest additions to the series and a collection that is sure to meet with favor is "Popular Church Organ Pieces," compiled and edited by Hans Richter. This book comprises fourteen numbers, all of which are eminently suited to the church service. The registration in every number is clearly indicated and they may be played on two manual organs. Half's "Cavatina," Chopin's "Nocturne in G Minor," "Consolation" and "Spring Song" by Mendelssohn and "Lovely Apparition" from "The Redemption" are among the contents of this book. One organist writes: "I am much pleased with Popular Church Organ Pieces; the type is good, the form convenient and the pieces therein 'popular' in the best sense of the word."

The prices of the volumes of the series are uniformly 50 cents as its title implies. This includes postage. A complete catalog of the Half-Dollar Music Series, giving description and the contents of each volume, will be sent free, postpaid, to any address by applying to the Oliver Ditson Company, 151 Tremont Street, Boston.

The Newtonville Women's Guild met on Tuesday, November 7. Mr. Pietro Isola lectured upon "Old Pictures in Florence." Browning's poem of the same name and his "Fra Lippo Lippi" were read by Mrs. O. E. Hunt. Delightful music was rendered by Mrs. Royal Pulsifer. The afternoon was greatly enjoyed by an unusually large number.

The West Newton Women's Educational Club held its first regular meeting on Friday, November 10. The "Vacation Reminiscences" were interesting and took the members to various parts of the country. Mrs. Walton told of a day spent in Rochester and related an incident in the life of Miss Susan B. Anthony, when she voted the presidential ticket, claiming that she was a citizen as much as any of the men. Mrs. Walton told also of a day spent among the mountains of New Hampshire at Ossipee Park. Mrs. H. K. Burrison gave some original verses telling experiences in the Lynn Woods. Miss Grace M. Burt described a trip into the mountains to North Chatham, N. H., with the Rural Free Delivery Mail man. Miss Amelia Davis took the members for a two weeks' sojourn at Nantucket, while Mrs. G. G. Phipps gave an incident of her vacation at Provincetown. Several piano solos by Master Dudley Cate, the son of Mrs. G. H. Cate the chairman of the music committee, were much appreciated. At the next meeting, November 24, Hon. Alden P. White of Salem will speak upon "Hiawatha."

The gentlemen were the guests of the Newton Mother's Club on Wednesday evening, November 8, when Mrs. Kate Upson Clark spoke on "Making Boys into Good Citizens."

The Newton Equal Suffrage League will meet at the residence of James P. Tolman, West Newton, on Thursday evening, November 23. Mr. Edgar O. Achorn of Newton Highlands will speak upon "Ibsen at Home."

The annual meeting of the Association of Collegiate Alumnae will be held in Atlanta, Georgia, November 22 to 25. An important feature of the program will be a discussion upon opportunities for co-operation in educational methods between club and college women.

A meeting of the Conference of Presidents will be held Saturday December 2, 2 P. M. at Hotel Vendome, Boston, to which all presidents of Federated Clubs in Massachusetts and all members of Standing Committees of the Federation are invited.

The Pure Food Committee of the Massachusetts Federation has sent out a circular letter asking that each Massachusetts Federated Club should hold a meeting on pure food in or before the first week in December, 1905.

The Committee hopes that at these meetings, resolutions will be passed urging that a national pure food bill, regulating the traffic in adulterated and misbranded foods and drugs, be speedily enacted, and begs that copies of such resolutions may be forwarded to Senators H. C. Lodge and W. M. Crane.

The question of the food supply of the country, both economically and from a sanitary point of view, peculiarly concerns women.

Many experts regard the economic waste of adulterated food as its worst feature, but Dr. Wiley says that thousands of lives are shortened by injurious ingredients. These are inserted either to give a more pleasing appearance to food not fresh enough to be otherwise salable, or to prevent the necessity of strict cleanliness or to preserve it and allow it to be carried great distances, or to cheapen its cost to the producer, though not to the consumer.

What we get in this world depends largely on what we demand, and if we demand pure and wholesome food, produced under cleanly conditions, we shall get it.

"DON'TS" FOR CLUB WOMEN.

Don't shop after five o'clock.
Don't shop on Saturday afternoons.
Don't leave your Christmas shopping until the week before Christmas.
Don't give your address carelessly to salespeople.

Attention is called to the course of lectures which is being given in Bray's Circular Hall under the auspices of the Newton Centre Woman's Club on Friday mornings at ten o'clock by Prof. H. H. Powers on "Great Epochs in Italian Art." Single admission fifty cents, open to the public.

At the meeting this week of the Monday Club of Newton Highlands papers were read on "Vesuvius and Hericulaeum," "Sorrento and Capri," and "Pompeii." The next meeting will be with Mrs. Emma L. Davis of Lincoln Street.

"Browning and Florence" was the subject considered by the Auburndale Review Club on Tuesday, November 14. Mrs. R. S. Douglass, chairman of the morning, gave a delightful paper on "Florence," Miss Margaret Haskell read "Old Pictures in Florence," "Fra Lippo Lippi" and "Andrea del Sarto," illustrating her reading with pictures of different things referred to in the poems. Mrs. Henry Thornlike read "One Word More" and Mrs. William Fuller "The Statue and the Bust." Miss Ella Smith also showed pictures of different artists and scenes mentioned which she had recently brought home.

Owing to exigent circumstances the paper on Athletics for Women and Girls which was to have been given at the Social Science Club on Wednesday morning had to be omitted and Mrs. Henry C. Haddon kindly filled the gap at the last minute by giving some account of her trip abroad last winter. She spoke particularly of her visit to Sicily and Italy. Among other pleasant and interesting experiences her party had an audience with Pope Pius X. He passed through the room where they had been ushered and as he left it he blessed them and all the things they had with them. They were rather disappointed in the climate for the most part as everywhere throughout Italy they found cold weather and even in Sicily. They were considerably inconvenienced in Italy by a railroad strike. Upon asking what it was all about they were told that the employees had once or twice gained something by striking, but at that particular time no one seemed to know what they were doing it for. Their homeward trip was up through France to Normandy and across to England. She spoke particularly of many out of the way places that they visited and showed many interesting pictures.

At the meeting next week the club will be addressed by Dr. Albert E. Leach of the State Board of Health upon "Pure Food Laws." Guests may be invited.

The annual meeting of the Newton Equal Suffrage League will be held Thursday evening Nov. 23d at 7:30 at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. James P. Tolman, 84 Highland street, West Newton. Mr. Edgar O. Achorn will make an address on, "Ibsen at Home." A discussion will follow.

Mr Stocking Installed

At the Central Congregational church Newtonville, Tuesday evening occurred the installation services of the new pastor Rev. Jay T. Stocking. In the afternoon at 3 the council was held at which the various Congregational churches in the vicinity sent delegates. Rev. Dr. T. P. Prudden of West Newton was selected as moderator and Rev. Daniel R. Kennedy of Needham, scribe.

Instead of a formal statement of belief Rev. Mr. Stocking made an address on, "The Message of the Preacher to Our Day." After some questioning the council voted unanimously to install and the exercises were held in the evening before a large and representative audience. The program was as follows: Prelude.

Hill-Reis.

The marriage of Mr. H. Frederick Hill of Newton and Miss Laura Irene Reis of Brooklyn, New York, took place at The Dutch Reformed Church on Flatbush avenue, Wednesday evening last. The best man was Dr. Nathan P. Thayer of Boston and the ushers were Mr. Alfred E. Fuller, Mr. Robert Henderson, Mr. Walter Masters and Mr. George Ohnewald. The bride was attended by Miss Gertrude Hill and Miss Louise Haley gown in corn color crepe de chine and carrying chrysanthemums. A little nephew of the bride acted as ring bearer the double ring ceremony being used. The bride was lovely in a gown of white satin and duchess lace with bridal veil, and carried a shower bouquet of orange blossoms and valley lilies. The church decorations were chrysanthemums and autumn foliage and palms. The reception immediately following was at the bride's home, 505 Ocean avenue. Many prominent New York and Brooklyn people were in attendance. The gifts were many and beautiful. After a trip through the South the young couple will occupy their new home in Central Park South, Brooklyn.

Channing Fair.

Channing church was the mecca for a large number of people on Wednesday and Thursday afternoons and evenings the object of interest being a fair which was held for the benefit of the church and for the work of the Women's Alliance. The decorations of the various tables were the products of the harvest time and with the potted plants, banked on the stage, made a most artistic effect.

Wayback & Co. with its bountiful stock of general merchandise, did a rushing business while the other departments were well patronized, the ladies on the committees keeping busy waiting on their patrons. Mr. J. J. Enneking's group of paintings were admired by all and the shooting gallery and dining room were popular gathering places for young and old. Miss Florence Katharine Johnson of Brookline was the palmist and Miss Clifford told fortunes. The success of the affair was largely due to the efforts of the officers who were:

Mrs. S. L. Powers, president; Miss Caroline S. Coppins, secretary; Mrs. Henry E. Bothfeld, treasurer and Mrs. A. R. Bailey, Mrs. A. L. Hudson, Mrs. H. W. Kendall, Mrs. F. E. Stanley and Mrs. F. W. Stone, executive committee.

They were ably assisted by the ladies and gentlemen in the departments which with the chairmen were as follows:

apron, Miss Jennie E. Jones; art, Mrs. C. S. Fannons, basket, Mrs. G. Fred Simpson; candy and ice cream, Miss Myra A. Southworth; cushion and bag, Mrs. Justin Whittier; fancy, Mrs. C. W. Mandell; lemonade, Miss Louise Emerson; palmistry, Miss Grace M. Burt; post office, Miss Helen Wells; supper, Miss Carolyn B. Brown; tulip bed, Miss Harriet W. Stevens; useful, Mrs. Henry W. Kendall; shooting gallery, Mr. Bancroft L. Goodwin; program, Mr. W. F. Garcelon.

Accident.

Several of the boys of the Working Boy's Industrial Training school on Winchester street, Newton Highlands, were more or less injured and many had narrow escapes, on the playground Friday afternoon, by the explosion of a premature blast. Benjamin Proven, (colored), 11 years old the drum major of the school's brass band, received a fractured ankle, scalp wound and contusions. Dr. McQueen had him removed to the Newton Hospital. John Buckley, John Ryan, Arthur Simpson and William McKyn were slightly injured.

The blasting was being done through a ledge from the street to the institution to make way for a sewer. About 2 o'clock the boys were playing football about 100 feet distant. The premature blast, supposed to have been caused by the short circuiting of the wires, hurled a large quantity of rock in the midst of the football players. Benjamin's ankle was broken by a piece, and the other boys named were struck by fragments of the rock. Several workmen were also slightly injured.

Washington Letter.

Two national associations of hard-ware men have held their conventions in Washington this week and finished their business today with an endorsement of President Roosevelt's position on the rate question. It was a big gathering one convention representing all the big manufacturing firms of the country and the other of the jobbers represented by the men who sell the manufacturers' products to the trade and to the public. It was an important meeting in a way and brought together 1,000 of the biggest men in the business. Just what was the internal business of the two meetings must remain more or less of a mystery as both were in executive session and dealt chiefly with the trade arrangements which are supposed to be no business of the public. Two things came to light however which were of general interest, one the adoption of a resolution, almost an identical resolution by both bodies for a reform of the consular service "on business lines," and the other the endorsement of the President on rate legislation as aforesaid.

Now it may seem like impertinence for an outsider to criticize the action of such a body of men who unquestionably know how to run their own particular trade, because they have made a success of it and are all of them prosperous citizens. But their two resolutions were a fair sample of the action of the trade conventions which more and more make the capital city a meeting place. The railroad rate resolution of the manufacturers was passed only after a severe fight. It came near not being passed at all. Reduced to its real meaning, it was simply an assertion that there ought to be something done in the rate line and that lacking any better information, the association thought it wisest to endorse the President and let it go at that. Now of course the President and the attorney general have given their best thought to the matter and their conclusions so far as they have reached concrete form are probably wise. But there was a large body of representative men who have to deal continually with the rate question, and there was not a single suggestion from any of them as to the practical points that such legislation ought to cover, nothing to indicate how they were affected or why any reforms were necessary or desirable. It was a body that apparently could have given the administration valuable advice of what is confessedly a knotty problem. But no. The resolution was as blank of practical suggestion as an iceberg is of herbage.

The two resolutions on the extension of American trade were equally childish. They simply stated that it was desirable that the consular service should be reorganized on business lines with a view to extending the foreign markets of the United States. Now Secretary Root has gone into the State Department with the avowed wish to reorganize the consular service and he has the endorsement of Secretary Taft, just returned from an extensive trip through the Orient, that such reorganization is desirable. But the very men who ought to have had ideas as to foreign trade and whose suggestions would have been most thankfully received at the State Department at this juncture, passed up the whole matter with the badly over-worked phrase of "reorganization on business lines" which no man has yet been able to fathom the meaning of. There was not a single concrete suggestion in the resolution and there was no attempt to appoint a committee to get into touch with the State Department and offer advice on what is one of the most important topics of the day. Decidedly the two conventions missed a very brilliant opportunity.

The rumor is afloat that Japan and the United States are to exchange compliments by raising their diplomatic representatives at Washington and Tokyo to the rank of ambassadors. Assistant Secretary Bacon of the State Department says that nothing has been done in the matter so far. But Washington is becoming more and more a first class diplomatic post and there are now as many ambassadors in the diplomatic list as there are ministers. In fact all of the first class powers now have ambassadors in the United States and it is the custom sanctioned by law that when any foreign power wishes to raise its diplomatic representative in Washington to the ranks of an ambassador that the United States will do the same with its representative abroad. Now that Japan has stepped into the family of nations as a first class power, it is only natural that she should no longer be satisfied with a minister in Washington. This government is not yearning for the additional expense that an ambassador at Tokyo would entail, but if Japan wishes to do us that compliment it is more than probable that her wishes will be met and that Mr. Griscom will be given a step in rank.

PANNED OYSTERS.—Put the oysters into a saucepan without water, and shake them over a moderate fire until they look plump and their edges are curled. Fry twenty-five oysters add two tablespoonfuls butter, salt and pepper, stirring the seasoning in well. Serve in hot dish if desired, on slices of toast.—GRAPHIC Cook Book.

Communication.

Those of us who are accustomed to read the Bible, will recall that very early in the recorded history of the children of Israel, the Lord said to that peculiar people, "If there arise among you a prophet or a dreamer of dreams and giveth thee a sign or a wonder, and the sign or wonder comes to pass, whosoever he speaks unto thee, saying, Let us go after other Gods which thou hast not known, and let us serve them; thou shalt not hearken unto the words of that prophet or that dreamer of dreams."

The election of 1905 has taken place and the readers of this paper should not forget the lessons of that event. The voters have not to listen back more than a week in order to be in the midst of the State election and its unprecedented events. It will be a long time before some people will forget what transpired on Tuesday, the seventh day of November, in the year of our Lord nineteen hundred and five. It was the day in the calendar when the voters arrived on top, and the candidate took a convenient seat by the door, through which he could unobtrusively disappear in case the bulletin said "exit."

By a law, the wisdom of which has never been questioned, all drinking places were closed in order that the voters might exercise sober judgment and prevent the candidate from saying after election, "they were drunk or I should have been elected." It is astonishing what powerful weapons a sober man and the Australian ballot may become when combined on the day of election.

The campaign was vigorously conducted upon both sides, each confident of a success, and each sure that the other fellow would meet his Waterloo. By common consent, the real issues of a State campaign were laid aside, and the hides of both candidates for Lieutenant Governor were tanned with the rawhide of Reciprocity, as though the Lieutenant Governor of Massachusetts cut up all the leather used in the shoe shops of the Commonwealth. Whitney laid bare his heart, and about $100,000, as he went up and down the State, and Draper "stood pat" as beautifully as a maiden of twenty-five listens to what she fears may be her last proposal. It was a singular coincidence that both candidates missed the boom which might have settled the entire matter if it had been properly presented to the voters. An opportunity hung over the heads of each suspended only by a single thread which if made available at the proper time would have put the other fellow to sleep, from which there would have been no recount; perhaps some rainy day, in some future campaign, somebody with an eye to the windward, will blow the dust from ancient records and say, if Draper or Whitney had only fired that gun in the campaign of 1905, the fires in the other camp would have gone out.

Curtis Guild has demonstrated the wisdom of making haste slowly, and in his own peculiar way made the office seek the man, while at the same time the office did not go out of its way for a moment, as it has in the majority of contest going on in Boston now, where Judge Dewey has reluctantly bowed to the behests of the office in a dress suit loaned by Martin Lomasney for the occasion. It is said that Martin took that way to kill off Dewey's chances, which were never over and above bright.

It may be said on the whole, that the net results of the recent campaign are about six of one and half a dozen of the other. The tide has neglected to rise on the Reciprocity shore, and the Protection moon ceased to exercise any influence over the waters. The great contest in the future is to be fought by Elben S. Draper for the high chair in the State House, the real issue that enfolded the heart of the Hopedale man as he paid for the nomination in the recent State Convention.

Probably the most marvelous event that ever occurred in political circles as near being a political Napoleon as ever planned a campaign in Massachusetts. With both parties against him in nomination, and combined upon the present incumbent; all the newspapers ignoring him, until a day or two before election; without a political backer and without financial aid, this lonely man roamed the political woods, a regular John the Baptist, with his raiment of camel's hair, a leather girdle about his loins; his meat, locust and wild honey, and his recreation a seat at Keith's. Like John, he cried, day and night to the lawyers and bosses in both parties, "O, generation of vipers, who hath warned you to flee from the wrath to come!" and the people took heed to this lonely man in the wilderness and they said, "We will leave the bosses and will elect him and see what he will do." When they gathered up the votes after election, Moran had twelve baskets full. The lawyers and bosses will answer every other question, but when they are asked, "How about Moran?" the question comes back without even an echo. Seriously considered, it was probably a mistake for the Democrats to have tried out the case upon the issue of Tariff Revision and Reciprocity this year. With such conditions as are provided upon every hand, and such uncontrollable arguments as were at the disposal of the Republicans, General Guild hit the nail on the head every time he opened his mouth during the campaign, and day after day courteously and effectively spiked the guns of the opposition at every point.

With the flood gates of prosperity flung wide open, and the country marching forward to greater prosperity, which is infinitely better than reciprocity, the cry of "We need the change" fell upon ears that preferred not to hear, and the rank and file of the voters demonstrated a week ago that they would have no change. Last week ten steamers sailed from the Port of Boston for foreign ports, laden with 50,000 tons of American merchandise; 10,000 tons of flour await shipment at the wharves and on the cars of the Boston & Maine Railroad, and this line alone has shipped more than 50,000 bales of cotton in the last six weeks. There has been shipped from the Boston port during the last week, about 80,000 bushels of grain. Never in the history of the iron and steel trade is production as large as it is at the present time, and at the same time never has the crush on the steel mills been so great.

In the midst of such conditions, it seems almost like tempting a good Providence to contend that the tariff must be revised and that it must have closer trade relations with Canada, when, comparatively speaking, a hundred Canadas are stretching out their hands to the United States for the wherewithal with which to feed, clothe and satisfy their demands.

Whist.

Of all the topics that the whist writer may undertake to elucidate there is not one which requires more careful treatment than that included in the term finesse.

It is not finesse in its larger meaning that alone is so difficult to treat. It is the simple play which consists either in passing the card led by one's partner or by one's opponent on the chance that by so doing one may capture from one's right-hand adversary a higher card that is missing, or in playing, third-in-hand, a card which may win the trick, without parting with the master card of the suit or one of several cards higher than the one played, that conservative writers hesitate to discuss.

There is a certain glamour or fascinating attractiveness about the play that leads the unwary into many pitfalls. Not only are beginners subject to this influence, but also are writers of certain schools of whist more or less susceptible to its allurements. The former, as they graduate from class to class, are reasonably certain to tighten the self-imposed curb on their inclinations in this direction. The latter do much harm before their pupils arrive at the age of discretion in whist knowledge and begin to unlearn, if we may use the expression, the unsound methods such writers are prone to advocate.

The beginner might well rest content, for the time being, when he has reached that stage in his career where he finds that he possesses a fair degree of knowledge of the two or three most elementary kinds of finesses such as the finesse against the turned trump, the finesse of queen from ace, queen in one's suit, a similar finesse in partner's suit, when holding not over three cards of that suit, etc. Possibly the general rules upon which the "finesse obligatory" is based should be included, as these latter certainly have been much too long neglected by many players.

Aside from those players of "supporting" card and short-suit tendencies, who avoid opening tenace suits and play what has been styled the "tenace and finesse game," most players do less and less finessing in plain suits as their knowledge of the game increases. They find that a finesse which is as likely to lose a trick as it is to gain one, somehow does not pan out, in a number of trials, the net gains in their favor that might naturally be expected.

If one attempts to lay down rules for the guidance of the beginner or the player of a higher grade he is almost inclined to abandon his purpose and write, under the heading, "Finesse," don't.

There are so many things to be considered in deciding whether or not a finesse is warranted or advisable that a rule which might seem to apply to a particular case in hand, as a matter of fact, might lead the player into an irreparable loss if followed as a dependable guide. A finesse that might be justifiable late in the hand often is quite the reverse at the second or third trick. One taken in the face of a trump call by opponent might cost nothing if the position of the lead, in case the finesse lost, would put the "calling" hand more or less at the mercy of the finesser, from the fact that he also was strong in trumps. With a weak trump hand, to finesse after the "call" had developed would indeed be rash. Opponent's discards may serve as guides, but such discards more often than not are likely to prove carefully contrived schemes to tempt a finesse.

Before taking a finesse a player should first decide whether or not his holding justifies the risk. He should then review the development up to that point, taking account of stock, so to speak, of the various holdings, especially the holding of the player behind him—the one who will be in the lead if the finesse is not successful. The state of the score should also enter into the question. This may all be done without it being made evident that a finesse is contemplated.

In the games under the Howell system for pair play as at present conducted in many of the clubs, with each deal a match, a player should always bear in mind the fact that a finesse may cost the loss of the deal, or two points. If the development has already been in his favor he would be foolish to risk the loss of a trick simply on the chance of gaining one. Whereas, if his partner's opening or his own has proved unfortunate, or his opponents have brought about a condition of affairs which is evidently tending to win the deal for them, a finesse might be taken which, under reverse conditions, would be refused. In a team match the same rule applies. If one's opponents have secured considerable of a lead, more frequent and deeper finesses might be resorted to than would perhaps be sound were the scores closer. Having secured a decided advantage over one's adversaries, a finesse which, at the most could lose but one trick should not be taken. One of the members of a certain team in the preliminary round of the Hamilton Club trophy contest at the Niagara Falls meeting, seemingly forgot, for a moment, that his team was in a fair way to defeat the strong Minneapolis four, judging by a finesse which he took in the last round of the match—a finesse which enabled his opponents to gain four or five tricks, and, thereby, enter the finals.

A finesse on the second round of a suit may, at times, be warranted when to make the play on the first round would be to run too great a risk. It is in conformity with this generally recognized principle that king is played, second-in-hand, to the first round of a suit, from the ace, king, knave combination, the knave finesse being made on the second round if it develops that the opening was from a long suit. In like manner a finesse on the first round of partner's suit should usually be declined, and the question of the advisability of the finesse be left for him to decide on the second round of the suit.

A finesse which would perhaps be highly questionable in a plain suit is, often, quite the reverse when made in the trump suit. If a beginner were to watch a first-class player during an important contest he would see a number of finesses made apparently off-hand, on the returns of trump leads. With precisely the same combinations in plain suits, the player would refuse to finesse, or, if he made the play, it would be found, later, that he was guided by considerations which had been carefully taken into account as affording a probable offset to the loss which might ensue if the finesse itself failed in its immediate object.

A mistake that many players make when the opportunity for a finesse is presented is to allow the possibility of a false card to enter too largely into their calculations. Especially is this true of finesses in the trump suit. In most cases if a finesse is under consideration, the possibility or probability that one's opponent has false-carded should be given little weight as compared with the cues one's partner may have furnished as to his wishes in the matter, or the warrant that exists for the play as determined by one's holding and the previous development. The same rule should be followed, in such cases, as that which South bore in mind at Trick No. 7 of the illustration which follows. He was not called upon to decide the question of a finesse in its true sense, although some players might consider his play a finesse against two cards, nor was there any question of a false-card. The point for South to decide was the same, however, as if he simply were finessing against the second best card of his suit, and his play hinged largely upon his partner's evident desire as shown in the diagram. Spades four turned West. Leader North.

North-South 11, East-West 2. Trick No. 3. As it was an even chance that East and not South would develop a shortness in the club suit, North proceeded to exhaust trumps, hoping to have opportunities to discard his two losing clubs later.

Tricks Nos. 5 and 6. It was evident to South that North had gotten rid of the singleton ace of hearts, so he was a forerunner to the Deschamps coup. From the fact that South had had no opportunity to declare his suit, North's holding was all the more clearly marked. Had North been in a position to continue the heart suit he would have led one of his remaining trumps to get a discard from South. Without the trump lead it was apparent that North was trying to make a reentry for South, on the chance that he held the hearts, for had North held the king, queen and other diamonds, with trumps exhausted, he would have led a low diamond before giving up the ace of hearts.

Trick No. 7. South made no effort to win the trick as he felt confident North had a third diamond to lead to him, and the only way to bring in the suit was to pass the second round.

Tricks Nos. 10 and 11. North's hopes were realized.

Notable Facts.

The Washington correspondent of the Boston Transcript has stated some sound truths in a recent letter published in that paper. It is worthy of careful study by the men who are opposing Senator Lodge.

Massachusetts Republicans in public life here are not a little discouraged over the party outlook at home. It is not so much the dwindling Republican pluralities which resemble the tendency of the latter eighties, when their gradual shrinkage finally culminated in three Russell victories, significant as this may be, as in the state of mind now noticeable on the part of the Massachusetts voters. They are, in plain English, asking for tariff changes which they are not likely to get. It is a common prediction here that the Republican party would be in better shape in Massachusetts next year if Congress makes no revision of the tariff than if this great task be accomplished and a new law written into the statute books. No Massachusetts revision of the tariff can be secured, nor any Massachusetts scheme of reciprocity with Canada or any other country. The seat of political power in this country has moved West, and the Mississippi Valley and the Rocky Mountains will write the new tariff act, when one is written; Massachusetts will have to make the best of it industrially, and her voters will have to accept such a tariff as the Republican party gives them, rather than such as they would make themselves.

It is hardly too much to say that the Massachusetts demand for free hides is ridiculed by the protectionists of other sections, aside from the special industries affected unfavorably by it in Milwaukee and elsewhere. The Washington Post, which is reasonably cosmopolitan, took up the other day a point raised against the duty on hides by Senator Lodge that it yielded so small an amount of revenue as to be not worth while. The Post showed a half-score of veritable keystones of the protective arcade which are yielding still less; on the score of its income there is nothing to be said logically against the existing duty. Senator Warren of Wyoming once told the writer that the discussion of free hides made him too weary for utterance; that if Massachusetts with her numberless schedules on manufactured articles, was willing to deprive Wyoming of her little advantage in wool and hides, he should favor throwing the whole protective system overboard. The Iowa tariff revisionists, who started the now famous "Iowa Idea," are exceedingly shy on free hides.

Ex-Mayor Pickard of Newton, and other good Massachusetts Republicans, come here during the session and explain that the tariff on hides is not real protection, and not consistent with true protective doctrine. This is doubtless true. But the only board for testing the purity of the protective faith, once delivered to the saints, is the Congress of the United States, and so long as certain States and sections think there is advantage for them in a duty on hides, that schedule is likely to stand. People often think a tariff does them good when it does not, but with mental conditions Congress cannot deal. It is what the Mississippi Valley public think it wants that controls the situation. The growth of the power of the Senate steadily decreases the influence of the small States, and this gives the Rocky Mountain region an inordinate strength. It is unlikely that any new tariff would be so satisfactory to the Massachusetts point of view as the present one.

What disquiets Massachusetts Republicans here is the fear that when the leaders of Massachusetts industries awake to a realization that they must choose between high protection, as Ohio and Wyoming understand it, or an opposition policy, they will be even more inclined to the opposition than now, while the idea still prevails that protection as Massachusetts understands it, may be obtainable. The protective system is in no danger in this country. It was never less seriously challenged than today. The development of industries in the South is bringing that section to protection; its old-line leaders who opposed protection in theory are passing away, and the present generation of Southerners regard the tariff much as they do an appropriation for free seeds or rural delivery routes—something which will be distributed in any event, and of which they should have their share. No Democratic Administration could get along without a stiff revenue tariff, and this would unavoidably carry a great deal of protection. The only tariff question before the country in the future is which of two rival combinations of duties any State or individual may prefer. There can be Eastern tariff, and Western tariffs; raw material tariffs and finished product tariffs, and other variants. The Republicans will make up one combination, when next they get it, and the Democrats will promise to make up another.

It is by no means sure that Massachusetts will always prefer the Republican combination, Republicans here feel, although it has stood steadfastly by the Republican party in all its tariff fights of the past. It is noticeable that the Democrats are now recovering their strength much more rapidly in Massachusetts, and Rhode Island, and Connecticut, than are Indiana and Nebraska.

Revival of the Door Knocker.

"To be sure in these days," said a dealer in builders' hardware, "electric door bells are found everywhere, but at the same time we are now selling, again, old fashioned door knockers."

"We had always sold a few door knockers, but the revival came about fifteen years ago, with the revival of Colonial architecture. On all such houses the door knocker was appropriate."

"Boston is perhaps the centre of the greatest development of this revival, but New England has no monopoly of it. Under like conditions of use you will find door knockers now all through the country; we sell them not only in the East, but in the West and South as well."

"We are making door knockers now in seventy-five or more designs, to which number we occasionally add, and we make others to order from designs of the architect. They are made of bronze, brass and iron, with various styles of finish of the metal."

"The great majority are of Colonial designs, in which we reproduce not only the type but the Colonial periods. They range in price from $1.50 for some of the simpler but perhaps quaint old forms, such as once were familiar on every door, up to $30 or $40 for the larger and more massive and elaborate."

"In this modern revival some door knockers have been attached to doors here in the city for use or for ornament or for purposes of sheer utility. In this last described class would be put the door knocker now to be seen on fire-houses here in New York."

"This might seem an odd place to put a door knocker, but really it serves here a very useful purpose. In the house various gongs and bells used for fire alarms, and the addition of another bell might be confusing to horses if not to men. So they put now on the smaller entrance door of the house a knocker."

"A door knocker is now placed in some cases on the smaller door at the front aside from the main entrance of American basement houses, the door for servants and for the delivery of merchandise, and a door knocker is sometimes placed on a port-cochere."—N. Y. Sun.

Literary Notes.

While certain members of the squirrel tribe store their winter's supply of food in hollow trees, I think most of them hide it on the ground, under old roots, brush piles, and even beneath heaps of dead leaves. Their tracks in the winter woods seem to bear this out. While it may be that this frequency of the tracks indicate a scarcity of food, and the travelling about a desire to find a supply, I believe in the main, that these outings of the squirrels have a definite destination, because when you see them skip across the snow, stop short, and scratch a hole down to the ground, bringing up a supply of nuts or cones placed there in the months of plenty, you are apt to attribute their luck more to a good memory than to any haphazard speculation. Of the squirrel family, the most prominent in winter are the blacks. He seems to be flowing over all the time with pent up energy, which keeps him in constant motion, and you sometimes feel that you would like him to be able to talk and tell you how pleasant it is to have the joy which flows from a glad heart. Now watch him jump from limb to limb, rush headlong down the trunk, and course across the snow in long graceful bounds, with no apparent purpose but to exhibit the happiness within him. His red cousin once in a while may be seen at the entrance to his home in the heights of some tree, but in him is no sign of exultation. He looks around as if he were looking and wishing for spring to come, and clear away the snow, and no amount of coaxing will cause him to utter a note of scolding or alarm. Not all the red squirrels, however, keep to the trees. Many of them, through want of food have to take to the earth, and their track in the deep snow is a heavy floundering of labored bounds as they go from tree to tree in search of the scanty provisions hidden beneath the surface. Here and there we find the gummy scales of the pine cones, the shells of the acorn, the seed cones of the birch and cedar scattered about on the snow, showing the food on which they subsist. In greater contrast to the delicacies just named, often one will find during long and severe winters that the squirrels have attacked the hemlock trees by stripping them of their bitter seeds. When one finds this, it is evidence of great want, and a merciful act would be to bring some food and scatter it about to assuage the pangs of hunger which these little fellows are enduring.

You will be surprised at the kind and amount of work that can be done with a motor of this size, such as sharpening skates, scythes and all kinds of cutlery, polishing and grinding metals, splitting and cutting up stock for windows and door screens, etc.

The motors are cheap and cost of operation is very small. Let us help you in any matter pertaining to power.

BOARD OF ALDERMEN

1906 Budget Adopted With Little Debate

Over One Million Dollars Needed to Run The City Next Year

The regular meeting of the board was held Monday evening. President Saltonstall calling to order at 7:45 P. M.

Present, Aldermen Baker, Bishop, Bosson, Bowen, Brown, Cabot, Carter, Day, Dennison, Doherty, Ensign, Hunt, Palmer, Riley, Stone, Underwood, Webster, Weston and White. Absent Alderman Ellis.

Communication from Buildings Commissioner Elder relative to petitions to move buildings by Hans L. Tange, H. S. Angus & Co., H. G. Chesley, J. H. Bombard and Chas. A. Cole was read and filed.

HEARINGS.

At the hearing on petition of the N. E. Tel. & Tel. Co. to locate 3 poles on Carleton street, Col. Robert B. Edes said that with lines of poles on Hoyd and Pearl streets on either side of Carleton street there was no necessity for poles on the latter, which was an extremely narrow street.

Mr. Greene for the company said that they desired to reach a new subscriber at 18 Carleton street and were unable to obtain rights over private property from the adjoining streets.

Col. Edes immediately said that the subscriber in question had his telephone in use at the present time, and Mr. Greene stated that, if such was the case, the rights they had over private property were of a temporary nature.

A protest was received from E. E. Barnes et al against poles on this street and the hearing closed.

At the hearings on the following matters no one appeared and after they were closed all papers were referred to the Committee on Public Franchises, etc.

1906 BUDGET.

Alderman Brown chairman of the Finance Committee then presented the report of that committee on the estimates submitted by the Mayor for receipts and expenses for 1906.

Alderman Brown briefly explained that the Committee had but few changes in the amounts as submitted by the Mayor. The item of incidentals for Board of Aldermen had been reduced $200 to $900 as the printed proceedings of the aldermen were to be discontinued next year. The salary of the Clerk of Committees had been increased a net amount of $250 to $1000: three new policemen were recommended by the committee increasing the expense some $1556. In the School department the committee had deducted the estimated dog tax of about $3400, and had added $1000 for special school furnishings. In the Street Department, $5000 had been added to the appropriation for Special street repairs making a total of $25,000 and $300 to the Street Light Department with a total of $55,000. The appropriation of $3500 for Trimming trees and for mott work had been divided with $1000 for Trimming trees and $2500 for Mott work. In accordance with the recommendation of the Mayor the committee had taken from the budget all items relating to expense of water bonds, interest, sinking funds and maintenance and submitted an additional order of $118,043. for the same. The receipts of $131,000 from water rates had also been taken from the general list of estimated receipts and included in the list of specific receipts. As recommended by the committee the budget with a total appropriation of $1,055,156.82 and an additional item of $118,043 for water department was read twice and adopted. The estimated receipts of $154,535 were also read twice and adopted and an order fixing the rate of interest on unpaid taxes of 1906 at 6 per cent was passed.

At 9:37 P. M. the board adjourned.

PRIMARIES

A Light Vote With No Contests

Mr. Edgar W. Warren Nominated for Mayor

In complete contrast to the recent heated campaign for mayoralty nominations in Boston, the primaries held in Newton last Tuesday from 12 o'clock Noon to nine in the evening, were deadly uninteresting.

If the Ward Five republicans had not turned out as a matter of pride in the naming of one of their own number for mayor, the result would have been ludicrous. As it is it is a farce, 415 ballots were cast for Republican candidates and 64 for the Democratic. Of the Republican ballots 205 were thrown in Ward 5, Ward 6 with 53 coming second and Ward 1 with 13 being the smallest. Without opposition the candidates named some two weeks ago were selected as the party nominees.

Representative Warren receives 402 Republican votes for Mayor and the Democrats have also given him the nomination by 5 votes without opposition. Dr. Deborah Fawcett who will run as an independent candidate for School Committee from Ward 7, received 9 votes while Mr. Herbert Stebbins who had been regularly named as a candidate had 317.

A peculiar incident of the Democratic vote is the fact that by receiving a few scattering votes, Deborah Fawcett is nominated for Alderman at large in Ward 6, for alderman at large ward 7, for school committee in Wards, 4, 5 and 7. The intelligence and carefulness of the Newton voter is not flattered by the tabulated figures.

The Republican nominees with their total vote, are as follows:

Mayor, Edgar W. Warren, 402.
Alderman at large for 2 years,
Ward 1, Stephen W. Holmes, 345.
Ward 2, Albert P. Carter, 349.
Ward 3, Benjamin S. Palmer, 346.
Ward 4, Howard P. Converse, 342.
Ward 5, Thomas P. White, 343.
Ward 6, Edward B. Bowen, 346.
Ward 7, Charles A. Clarke, 336.

For School Committee, for three years,
Ward 3, Robert S. Gorham, 322.
Ward 4, William A. Knowlton, 323.
Ward 5, Herbert E. Wells, 341.
Ward 7, Herbert Stebbins, 317.

For Alderman by ward,
Ward 1, Wm. J. Doherty, 12.
Ward 2, Edward K. Hall, 35.
Ward 3, Henry H. Hunt, 35.
Ward 4, Adam E. M. Beck, 21.
Ward 5, Frederick W. Webster, 143.
Ward 6, Allston Burr, 48.
Ward 7, Thomas Weston, Jr., 39.

For Ward Committees,
Ward 1, Paul Champagne, Oliver M. Fisher, D. Fletcher Barber, Edwin O. Childs, William Hanson.

Ward 2, Albert P. Carter, Edward P. Hatch, Herbert K. Hallett, Edward K. Hall, Elsie L. Avery.

Ward 3, Arthur G. Hosmer, John A. Potter, Daniel G. Wing, Henry M. Davis, Chas. E. Hatfield.

Ward 4, Horace M. Bunker, Frederick W. Jones, David W. Morton, J. Franklin Ryder, Howard P. Converse.

Ward 5, Frank R. Moore, Albert S. Hutchinson, Chas. F. Johnson Jr., Thos. J. Sullivan, H. Stewart Bosson.

Ward 6, Alfred E. Alvord, Elias B. Bishop, Geo. W. Pratt, Walter L. Sanborn, Frederic G. Melcher.

Ward 7, Madison Bunker, Alfred H. Wing, Arnold Scott, Chauncey B. Allen, Wm. F. Garcelon.

The democrats named William J. Doherty for ward alderman, Ward 1, Henry H. Hunt, ward alderman, Ward 3, Wm. M. Buffum, ward alderman, Ward 5, and Deborah Fawcett, school committee, ward 7.

The ward and city committee are Ward 1, Wm. J. Doherty, Wm. P. Sweeney, Cornelius W. Keefe.

Ward 2, Timothy S. Sullivan, Cornelius F. Dalton, Thos. F. Farrell.

At the Churches

The strange and unexpected revelations of the card reader at the fair, as related in 'The Masquerader,' were not more startling than some of the experiences of the patrons of the gypsy booth at the Channing Church Fair, presided over by Miss L. Inez Clifford, of Arlington Heights.

A union thanksgiving service will be held by the churches of Newtonville at the Congregational church on Wednesday evening at 7:45. All the ministers will take part in the service. The discourse will be given by Rev. John Goddard, of the New Jerusalem Church, upon 'The Reasons for Thanksgiving.'

The School Board Candidates

A Statement by the Ward 7 Republican Committee.

The Republican Ward Committee of Ward 7 having been by implication, at least, criticised in the columns of a paper in Newton with reference to the nomination for the School Board, desires to present a few facts.

The fact that a vacancy would occur was known a few days before Nov. 6th, when papers for the Republican nomination were issued. Some of those interested in the schools and in good government generally looked over the list of voters and decided that Mr. Herbert Stebbins would be a valuable member of the Board, if he would serve. He was interviewed and expressed a willingness if he was considered the best available man. Nomination papers were circulated and were presented with 35 or more signatures on the last day for filing with the City Committee, namely, Thursday, November 9th.

On that same day, a letter was received from Miss Whiting, a copy of which is given herewith. The Committee at once made inquiries about Miss Dr. Fawcett.

They found that she had lived in Newton about two years.

They found that only a small proportion of the residents of Ward 7 knew her.

They learned that she was not registered.

They questioned many citizens of Ward 7 and looked up the records of voting for members of the School Board in 1902 and 1903.

In the former year, the contest was in our own ward. Miss Burt, a long-time resident of the ward, highly respected, who had had experience with children, and who is a thoroughly capable woman, received 88 votes in the ward while Mr. Travis received 227.

In 1903 when the candidate came from Ward 5, Ward 7 registered 259 votes for the man and 164 votes for the woman, although active club women worked energetically for their candidate and no special effort was made in the men's behalf. 26 women voted in 1902 and 30 in 1903.

Considering the facts with reference to Dr. Fawcett and the clearly expressed sentiment of the ward, the reply, as given below, was sent to Miss Whiting.

The Committee later learned that Dr. Fawcett was not a naturalized citizen, which, in itself, was a bar to her name being placed on the regular Republican nomination paper, which, as before the ward has been carried out in the standard that since that date she has been naturalized, namely, on Saturday, Nov. 11th.

The Committee desires to be understood as not reflecting in any way upon Dr. Fawcett's character and ability. It simply emphasizes the fact that the desire of the great majority of citizens of the ward had been carried out in the nomination of Mr. Stebbins.

Benj. S. Rich, Chairman Ward 7 Republican Ward and City Committee.

11 Washington St., Newton, Nov. 9. Mr. Benj. S. Rich, Chairman Ward VII Committee

Dear Sir:—The women of the School Suffrage Committee of the Newton Federation of Women's Clubs (representing 1100 women) have been active since they learned a few days ago that Rev. Mr. Smith member of School Committee from Ward VII was the city.

They secured Dr. Deborah Fawcett now living in Evans Apartment House, Newton, as a candidate for school committee from Ward VII.

Dr. Fawcett seems to have all the qualifications necessary to render her a most efficient member of the school board, and we believe her candidacy would have commended itself to your ward committee. Finding however that your committee has asked another candidate to serve and it being too late for the names of other Republican nominees to be sent in through nomination papers, the women will be obliged to send in independent nomination papers, unless you can suggest some way by which your candidate, Mr. Stebbins, will withdraw.

We dislike to work against any party—our interest is entirely for the good of the schools, and the large influence which the Federation can wield will be cheerfully given with the Republicans, if some way can be suggested to that end.

Kindly reply at once, if you think it will do to ask Mr. Stebbins to withdraw, we would then stop our independent nomination.

Of course, there is no feeling against Mr. Stebbins, only we believe that other things being equal there should be a larger representation of women on the school board. Always remember that the women wish to work in harmony, and can often give satisfactory advice and save you much trouble if consulted in time.

Susan A. Whiting, Sec. Sch. Suff. Com. of Newton Federation.

Newton, Mass., November 11, 1905. Miss Susan A. Whiting, 11 Washington Street, Newton, Mass.

Dear Madam:—

Your letter with reference to the nomination for School Committee is received. You state therein that unless the Republican Ward Committee secures the withdrawal of Mr. Stebbins as a candidate for the School Board, that you will see that a woman is nominated as an independent candidate against him.

Your letter speaking in high terms of Mr. Stebbins, I assume that you believe as we do that in character and ability he is well fitted for the duties of the School Board.

Mr. Smith's announcement came out and was published in the NEWTON GRAPHIC the 6th of November, on which date the Republican nomination papers were given out in accordance with the notices previously published in the papers. It was necessary to secure 35 signatures to the papers of the candidates for School Committee at large and file them on Thursday the 9th.

The Ward Committee has endeavored for the past six or seven years to get the very best candidates possible for both the Board of Aldermen and the School Board. In looking over those who possibly would serve on the School Board, it was thought best to secure a candidate who would have a personal interest in the schools because he had children in attendance and who could, because of his experience with children, understand definitely their needs. Mr. Stebbins is such a candidate. The suggestion that he serve came to him entirely unsought and he reluctantly consented to run when it was urged upon him that he should do his share in the work of good government. His candidacy, we find upon inquiry, met the approval of a large number of the voters of our Ward.

Your letter to me is dated Nov. 9th and was received by me Nov. 9th, after the hour set by law for filing nomination papers. To comply with your demand that Mr. Stebbins withdraw at this late hour would place the Ward Committee, who are endeavoring to send the Ward's best representatives to the City Government, in a very embarrassing position and would, we think, place Mr. Stebbins in an uncomfortable position. We, therefore, think that Mr. Stebbins should be nominated by the Republicans and elected.

We find upon inquiry that Miss Fawcett whom you now suggest is not now registered as a voter and therefore was not eligible for nomination by either party. She cannot run even as independent candidate unless she registers herself as a voter.

It should be and we believe it is the spirit of a Ward Committee in a Republican Ward like Ward 7 to seek to nominate and elect the best citizens of the Ward to represent it in the City Government and elsewhere. For a number of years there has been no seeking after office by anyone in the Ward. The Ward Committee, with the assistance of other public-spirited citizens, have looked over the list of available men and have impressed them into service many times against their will. By getting men like Mr. Frank A. Day, Mr. George C. Travis and Mr. Henry E. Bothfield to serve us, we feel that great service has been done to the Ward and to the city. If such men as Mr. Travis and Mr. Stebbins, whom you admit to be excellent men, are to be opposed at the Polls, not because of inefficiency but simply because a proportion of the community believes that a woman should be on the Board, the result will be that it will be very difficult for a Ward Committee to get our best men to accept office.

I would suggest that a conference with those interested and the members of the Ward Committee—not at the last moment after it is too late to secure a regular nomination, but some time before the vacancy it to occur—would probably result in an arrangement being made as to the representation of the Ward, satisfactory to all interested in our schools.

The dates and places of giving out and filing nomination papers are always published in the Newton papers in ample season and all members of the Ward Committee are ready and willing to explain the very simple procedure necessary to nominate a candidate.

Under all the circumstances of this case, we think Mr. Stebbins should be nominated and elected.

Yours truly, Benj. S. Rich, Chairman Ward 7, Ward and City Committee.

In the letter to Miss Whiting a mistake in dates was made. It should have stated that Mr. Smith's announcement was made in the Graphic of Nov. 3rd and that nomination papers were issued on Nov. 6th.

Resolutions.

The following resolutions were adopted by the Newton Federation of Women's Clubs in 1904 and are interesting as showing that the present movement to elect a woman on the School Committee is not a passing whim:

THE HALF-DOLLAR MUSIC SERIES

A unique edition and one that will be of interest to all music lovers, whether teachers or students, is the "Half-Dollar Music Series," published by the Oliver Ditson Company. It consists of twenty-six different books, each containing sixty or more pages of music of proven acceptability. Eleven volumes of this series are for piano solo, some being in the very easiest grades for beginners. "Waltzes and Two-steps for the Piano" and "Easy Salon Music," while of a popular order, are not in the same class with the "rag-time" variety, which, we regret to say, is found in many homes where one would expect to find music more in keeping with a higher standard of intelligence. Three books of piano duets are among the number, and other volumes are for the violin, mandolin and other instruments. "Thirty Songs for Children" is a book that will furnish entertainment to the little ones for many a long winter evening.

One of the latest additions to the series and a collection that is sure to meet with favor is "Popular Church Organ Pieces," compiled and edited by Hans Richter. This book comprises fourteen numbers, all of which are eminently suited to the church service. The registration in every number is clearly indicated and they may be played on two manual organs. "Hallelujah Chorus," "Chorus," "Nativity in G Minor," "Consolation" and "Spring Song" by Mendelssohn and "Lovely Appeal" from "The Redemption" are among the contents of this book. One organist writes: "I am much pleased with Popular Church Organ Pieces; the type is good, the form convenient and the pieces therein popular in the best sense of the word."

The prices of the volumes of the series are uniformly 50 cents, as its title implies. The includes postage. A complete catalogue of the Half-Dollar Music Series, giving description and the contents of each volume, will be sent free, postpaid, to any address by applying to the Oliver Ditson Company, 151 Tremont Street, Boston.

It is with regret that we feel compelled to comment upon the recent agitation in Newton Centre over a few cases of diphtheria and the lengths to which certain citizens have gone in their zeal for the public welfare. We do not doubt the good intentions of the gentlemen who are pushing the present matter, but we have grave fears that in tilting at a windmill they may needlessly alarm the community.

The editor of the GRAPHIC has served the city for the period of four years as Agent of the Board of Health. He has a fair acquaintance with the duties of that office, and with the attitude it should assume towards the citizens of Newton. In addition he has children attending the public schools and is consequently deeply interested in all matters affecting their health.

The charges as outlined at the recent hearing before the Health Board embraced such serious matters as the negligence, discourtesy, insolence and untruthfulness of the Agent. Charges which if sustained would demand the suspension or dismissal of that officer from the employ of the city. No opportunity was given the Agent to defend himself from those charges. He was not given a copy of them before the hearing and was not allowed either to testify or to examine the persons who complained of his actions. The public therefore can analyze the one sided testimony as given to the Board, but should withhold its judgment until the Agent has been heard.

Let us examine carefully the testimony at the hearing. On the charge of negligence, the evidence shows that Agent Stone was asked on Monday morning if he intended to disinfect the Mason School house and stated that he was not, as it was not necessary. On Saturday, after another case had been reported from that school district the room was disinfected. Charges are made that only the class room and not the coat room was so disinfected. This is the sum total of the negligence charge unless the request to disinfect or destroy the pens, pencils and books, is separated from the general disinfection of the room. We believe Dr. Curtis, chairman of the Board of Health, has fully assigned the charge of delay in his letter to Mr. Burnham, from which we quote the following:

"In ordinary cases the Board does not consider it necessary to disinfect the school room after receiving the report of a case, and it seemed even more unnecessary than usual in this case, for as I have said the history made it very doubtful if the boy had had diphtheria
while at school."

After referring to the later or Dudley case, Dr. Curtis says: "Personally I do not believe she contracted it from the school, the chances of indirect contagion in that way, being, in my opinion, very slight." In deference however, to the feeling in the community, the board on Saturday disinfected the school room, after the report of the Dudley case.

In the face of the above opinion of the Chairman, however, charges are brought that the Agent of the Board has been negligent of his full duty in this instance. And the only reason for those charges, is, that the master of the school and certain parents thought it ought to have been done. Mr. Burnham in his speech before the board said that he did not know Agent Stone and had never heard of him until this controversy arose. Possibly Mr. Burnham would not have been so free with his charges of negligence if he had known of Mr.
Stone's efficient work as Agent for six years. He was probably unaware that in 1901 Mr. Stone, in the strict performance of his full duty towards the citizens of Newton, found it necessary to carry small pox patients in his arms from sick rooms to the ambulance and accompany them to the Hospital. A man who can face death in its most repulsive form
in the performance of his public duty should not be lightly charged with negligence because a layman thinks he knows it all. We are not posing as the champion of Mr. Stone, but believe in justice to him that these facts should be known.

Mr. Stone is also charged with insolence, and the evidence as given before the board could only show one sentence which he was alleged to have spoken "You Newton Centre people are a set of alarmists." While possible exception might be taken to the reasonableness of this statement if Mr. Stone did say it, there might be considerable doubt as to the amount of insolence which it contains. Neither Prof. Ripley nor Mr. Burnham could testify as to any other remarks of Mr. Stone and the opinion of Mrs. Chapin as repeated to the board also failed to be definite. By all rules of evidence therefore the charges of insolence are not sustained. In the matter of untruthfulness, the only evidence is the statement of Mr. Burnham as to what Agent Stone said, and before passing judgment Mr. Stone should have an equal opportunity to testify, as to what he did say.

Discourtesy is also charged to Mr.
Stone. Here again in the absence of definite evidence it is impossible to pass judgment, but the experience of the writer suggests that the duties of the Agent of the Board of Health are not unusually of a pleasant nature. To hear constant complaints on disagreeable subjects, to listen to neighborhood rows, to compel people to do the things which they do not wish to do is not pleasant and it is not strange that human nature refuses to be invariably courteous under such trying conditions. When citizens telephone the Health Agent usually with some complaint or criticism they are unaware of the conditions to which he has been subjected during the day, and resents any sharpness of tone or brusqueness of manner without sufficient consideration for his official burdens. The writer believes that the position of Agent is the meanest office in the gift of the city and that if all that official's trials and tribulations were known, a mantle of charity would be drawn about the personality, of an efficient and faithful agent.

We sincerely trust that the present unwise agitation will not affect the public confidence in the administration of the Health department of this city. The board is composed of two well known physicians, and three business men of high standing, and the Agent is in daily consultation with the Chairman of the Board and the City Physician.
These latter gentlemen have had years of experience in this kind of work and Dr. Curtis has been the efficient chairman for eleven years. The policy of the Board has always been to not only do all that is necessary in every case but,
more than is necessary and the Mason
School affair is simply one of those rare instances where the professional knowledge of the officers of the Board did not happen to coincide with the ideas of certain citizens.

We can speak with some personal knowledge of the work of the Board and its standing among the Boards of Health in the State and as a parent and citizen can assure the Newton public that its welfare is in the hands of efficient and faithful officials.

The Read Fund lectures this season are furnishing strong reasons for the erection of an adequate hall in the Newton district.

Y. M. C. A.

A beautiful cup to be known as the "Waitt Trophy" has been presented to the Young Men's Christian Association of Newton by A. H. Waitt.

The cup is a beauty, valued at $80 and stands 13 inches high. It is plain except for a line of beaded work running around the cup just below the handles.

The winner of this splendid trophy must be the all around champion in the following events for three years or in other words he must have his name engraved on the cup three times before it becomes his property.

The events are 150 yard dash, 1000 yard run, running high jump, three standing broad jumps, 12 pound shot put, parallel bars, and side horse.

Mr. Waitt, by his generous gift, will certainly arouse a great interest in gymnastic and athletic work.

The cup is on exhibition at the Association Rooms.

The first and second basket ball teams of the Bowdoin A. A. played against Newton's first and second teams on Wednesday evening. Everything came Newton's way the first team winning by 39-2, the second 48-2. Both teams play at Malden Saturday evening the first league game and on next Wednesday, Nov. 29, Somerville Y. M. C. A. plays at Newton.

This is the first league game at home and you will have to come early if you wish reserved seats. The game begins at 8.15.

The class in "First Aid to the Injured" conducted by Dr. Gleason is arousing much interest. About 15 men meet every Thursday night at 7.30.

The opening series of the Ping Pong tournament for the members of the boys' dept. has been played off and stands now with three tied for first place, Gilfeather, Decker and Barrows; Newcomb second, and Austin standing third. The tournament promises to be fast and hard. The winner is to be presented with a cup, engraved with his name and the event. A trophy worth working for.

Last Wednesday evening Mr. Say-ford, president of the association, gave his banquet to the boys. About one hundred were present. Music was furnished by the Glee Club, singing the Brown, Harvard and Yale songs. This was followed by the statement of the Extension Work Committee given by its chairman, Sydney Hill. The address of the evening was by Mr. Sayford, who in a few but earnest words showed the need for MEN the developed man. The social committee kept things going before and after the banquet and did all in their power to make things interesting for those present.

Sunday at the Younger Men's Meeting Mr. Sherman L. Whipple, a lawyer of Boston, will speak. Every boy over 12 years, whether member of the association or not is invited. It will be short and interesting, dont miss it.

Recital.

The pianoforte pupils of Miss Emma Juliette Pierce gave a Rubinstein recital Saturday afternoon, which was pronounced one of the most interesting recitals of the season. Instructive papers on the life and works of the great artist were read by Stella Marcy, Winifred Crencey and Ethel Chessman and piano selections from this composers works were played by Edith Thayer, Jennie Pellican, Vida Chase and Jennie Wright and miscellaneous numbers by Helen Sheehan, Gertrude Shaughnessy and Mildred Chase. A pleasing number was the reading by Miss Pellican "A Reminiscence of Rubinstein."

At the Churches.

The Junior Auxiliary of Grace church is to hold a cake and candy sale in the

THE HALF-DOLLAR MUSIC SERIES

A unique edition and one that will be of interest to all music lovers, whether teachers or students, is the "Half-Dollar Music Series," published by the Oliver Ditson Company. It consists of twenty-six different books, each containing sixty or more pages of music of proven acceptability. Eleven volumes of this series are for piano solo, some belong in the very easiest grades for beginners. "Waltzes and Two-steps for the Piano" and "Easy Salon Music," while of a popular order, are not in the same class with the "rag-time" variety, which, we regret to say, is found in many homes where one would expect to find music more in keeping with a higher standard of intelligence. Three books of piano duets are among the number,
and other volumes are for the violin, mandolin and other instruments. "Thirty Songs for Children" is a book that will furnish entertainment to the little ones for many a long winter evening.

One of the latest additions to the series and a collection that is sure to meet with favor is "Popular Church Organ Pieces," compiled and edited by Hans Lichter. This book comprises fourteen numbers, all of which are eminently suited to the church service. The registration in every number is clearly indicated and they may be played on two manual organs. Half's "Cavatina," Chopin's "Noeturne in G Minor," "Consolation" and
"Spring Song" by Mendelssohn and "Lovely Appear" from "The Redemption" are among the contents of this book. One organist writes: "I am much pleased with Popular Church Organ Pieces; the type is good, the form convenient and the pieces therein 'popu-

Political Notes.

In view of certain mis-statements which have been made it may be of interest to Newton citizens to learn that Dr. Deborah Fawcett's naturalization was a very simple affair, as she has lived in the United States since early childhood and has been a resident of Newton for the past six years. The whole process of naturalization only took a very short time as final papers were issued by the Court immediately on application. Dr. Fawcett has always considered herself as an American citizen and it was only by the prompting of a friend that she attended to this formality.

Newton Hospital.

There will be general thanksgiving at the Newton Hospital this year for the Thanksgiving dinner next week will be cooked in the new kitchen. During the last few weeks the completion of the building has been pushed forward rapidly, for the needs of a better, larger and more up-to-date kitchen have been very pressing. As the family at the hospital to be fed every day the year round is between one hundred and one hundred forty persons, the wonder is how the institution has been able to get along all these years with the former kitchen. It was a part of the Administration Building which was planned when the hospital consisted of two buildings only and has never been enlarged, although thirteen new buildings have since been added to the hospital group.

The new Domestic Building is a substantial brick structure, with Monitor roof, slate floors, enamel tiled interior walls, and will be completely equipped with every known convenience. It includes the spacious kitchen, a large refrigerator—a room by itself—a commodious bakery, scullery, etc. This building has cost about $12,000.

The money for the Domestic Building has been secured through the efforts of the Hospital Aid Association, of which the late Mrs. N. Emmons Paine, the president, was a tireless worker. Her interest in the hospital and her earnest presentation of the great needs of a new kitchen won the cooperation of all Newton. She spent a great deal of time with the architects in studying the kitchens of other hospitals, endeavoring to adopt all the latest improvements for the needs of our institution. It is believed that there is no better planned kitchen department anywhere.

It is the regret of every friend of the hospital that Mrs. Paine's life was not spared to see the results of her thought and labor put into actual usefulness. Her interest and work for the hospital art typical of the way men and women are constantly giving of their time and money for this—Newton's principal work of charity. To our Newton physicians also, for both their work and spirit of cooperation the citizens of Newton owe much of the present high standing of our hospital.

This Domestic Building adjoins the Administration Building, in the basement of which are, a diet kitchen for the preparation of special foods for the sick; a dining room for the domestic employees; a serving room, and store-rooms for groceries, meats, coal, wood and all hospital supplies of a size to meet the large and increasing requirements of the hospital.

The expense incurred by moving the Administration Building, moved in order to properly locate the new kitchen, and making the necessary additions and improvements is much greater than was anticipated.

A delightful custom has been established by the citizens of Newton. At Thanksgiving time all join in making a contribution to the support of the hospital. On the Sunday before Thanksgiving, the churches throughout the city take up a collection for its work and all individuals are requested to give at this time either directly to the hospital or through the churches.

Larger contributions than usual are requested this year, both on account of the larger needs of the hospital and on account of the necessary and unusual expenses incurred in moving, changing and enlarging the Administration Building.

The number of patients cared for during 1904 was 13 per cent. greater than during the year 1903, and the record for the first eight months of 1905 shows a still further increase. During this latter period there has been an average of fifty-eight patients in the care of the hospital.

YOUNG MEN AND WOMEN WILL SELL TICKETS

An official of the Boston Elevated Company says:

"The employment of young men and women is not a new thing for the Boston Elevated. They have been in the employment of the constituent companies which now form the Boston Elevated system almost from the beginning, fifty years ago. Now about seventy women are employed. Moreover, the average pay of women is equal to, if not higher, than that of men. It is now more than 27 cents an hour. Further, in the new force for ticket selling, nearly half of whom will be young men, the women will be paid the same rate of wages as the young men.

"As a matter of fact, the company decided to establish the new force: first, because it has thousands of applications from people who, either because of their youthful age or sex, are not fitted for the car service, and the establishment of a training class such as the new force would provide for many of these; and second, because the work in these ticket offices is of a comparatively simple nature, although requiring deftness and quickness of hand. The highly trained and skilled men now filling these positions would be released for more important service. Of course, all of the men in the present force the company is glad to retain while they are worthy, at the same compensation.

"The young men to be employed as ticket sellers will be given the opportunity from time to time of promotions to positions in the train and car service, so far as they are qualified therefor, and the young women to higher positions in the company's service, if they, too, are qualified.

"Many instances arise where members of the families of conductors and motormen, or widows and children of deceased conductors and motormen, are desirous of securing work, and the company intends to offer them the preference, as far as possible. The net result will be the provision of employment for a larger number of people, and will enable the company to meet a larger number of applications of worthy people for work. The demand is shown by the fact that already there are nearly fifteen times as many applications as there will be positions, and almost all of the applications are from people who appear to be entirely suitable.

"The substitution of the new force for the old will not be made on any given day, but will be effected gradually."

PROBATE COURT.

MIDDLESEX, ss.
To the heirs at law, next of kin, creditors, and all other persons interested in the estate of Thomas Dunn, late of Newton, in said County, deceased, Intestate.

WHEREAS, a petition has been presented to said Court, to grant a letter of administration on the estate of said deceased, to William Franklin Dunn of Newton, in the County of Middlesex, without giving a surety on his bond.

You are hereby cited to appear at a Probate Court to be held at Cambridge, in said County of Middlesex, on the twelfth day of December, A. D. 1905 at nine o'clock in the forenoon, to show cause, if any you have, why the same should not be granted.

And the petitioner is hereby directed to give public notice thereof, by publishing this citation once in each week, for three successive weeks, in the Newton Graphic, a newspaper published in Newton, the last publication to be one day, at least, before said Court.

Witness, CHARLES J. MCINTIRE, Esquire, First Judge of said Court, this eighteenth day of November in the year one thousand nine hundred and five.

W. E. ROGERS, Register.

The Monday Club of Newton Highlands arrived at Rome at their meeting this week and were delighted with papers on the "Topography and General Situation of Rome," "The Strangers' Quarters," and a special topic on the "Character of the Romans." Next week they will meet at the Pomroy Home and as last year it will take the form of a Thanksgiving donation.

At the meeting of the Waban Woman's Club on Monday, November 20, Dr. Spaulding, superintendent of schools spoke on "The Newton Schools." He spoke appreciatively of the good condition in which he found them and then told of some things which he hopes to accomplish. The meeting was full of interest.

The Newtonville Women's Guild held its regular meeting on Tuesday afternoon, November 21. In connection with this was held the annual meeting of the Newtonville Branch of the Needlework Guild. Nearly six hundred garments were exhibited and will be distributed to the Pomroy Home, the Newton Hospital and the Associated Charities.

The program of the afternoon included fine music by the Dvorak Trio, consisting of the Misses West, Williams and Haynes and an interesting paper by Mrs. Mary R. Martin on her work for the Associated Charities.

The Ladies' Home Circle will meet at the Unitarian church parlors, West Newton, on Wednesday, November 29, at two o'clock. Tea will be served.

The Auburndale Whist Club met with Mrs. C. H. Drake of West Newton on Monday afternoon.

The Pierian Club met with Mrs. Charles R. Brown of Linden street on November 15. Papers were read upon "Written History of Japan," "Ancient Rulers," "The Way of the Samurai," and "The Present Imperial Family." During the intermission refreshments were served and two selections given upon the graphophone.

The subject of "Pure Food and the Pure Food Laws" was exhaustively treated by Dr. Albert E. Leach, chemist of the State Board of Health, before the Social Science Club on Wednesday morning. He said in part, that the per capita cost of food in the United States is greater than in any other country. In earlier times the chief substances used for the preservation of food materials were sugar, salt and vinegar and these had a distinct food value, but in recent years certain chemicals have been employed, which while they may not be actually poisonous to the system, they have no real food value, and are supposed to retard digestion. Massachusetts, however, allows the use of these preservatives provided the amount is stated upon the label. Dr. Leach showed how the use of foreign coloring matter may be detected and exhibited some samples of woolen cloth which he had dyed by boiling in raspberry jam and tomato ketchup. The operation had left the liquid clear or nearly so and the color had all gone into the cloth. The pure fruit juice would have merely stained the cloth a dull, unattractive shade. One of the greatest frauds in the food supply is the masquerading of a cheap mixture of materials as a high priced article. The laws of this state say, "Let the label tell."

Of the adulteration of liquor, he said, that it consists mostly of the addition of sugar and water, rather than of any poisonous substances, the real poison being the alcohol which all acknowledge to be there. After a very careful examination of most of the cheapest whiskey to be found in Boston, no wood alcohol nor anything poisonous was discovered. The so-called "patent medicines" are, however, alcoholic beverages in disguise, for nearly all have been found to contain alcohol, which is the secret of their effect upon those who take them. Nearly every state has some laws relative to pure foods, but we are far behind Great Britain. In speaking of milk, he thought that subject to be one to which the Women's Clubs may well turn their attention, especially as regards the securing of a clean milk supply. While milk is sometimes colored artificially in order to deceive the consumer and antiseptics are employed to preserve it from souring, yet to his mind more harm comes from unclean conditions of production than from any other source. Dr. Leach showed a bottle containing milk that had been preserved sweet for nearly five years by the use of some chemical. In speaking of butter, he said, the law allows the farmer to use coloring matter in his butter, but oleomargarine must not be colored to imitate butter. That is illegal.

To him, oleomargarine was preferable to a poor quality of butter.

The greater proportion of the cheap qualities of jellies and jams have for a basis, apple, often obtained from the parings and cores of the fruit in the canning factory. To this an added glucose, a coloring matter and a small proportion of the flavoring, the name of which the article will bear. The contents must be given on the label, but frequently it is printed in so small type or in such an inconspicuous manner that the public does not see it and purchases it under the impression that it is getting the real thing. Coffee and spices are articles which are often adulterated, also cocoa. While we may not be injured by the consumption of these things, the fraud lies in the deceit which is practiced. Flavoring extracts more often contain injurious substances. Lemon extract has been found to contain wood alcohol, which is very poisonous.

The laws in the different states are very various and to be sure of all states failing alike there is much need of uniform laws and so on this account the people of the land are urging the passage of a national pure food law. The Hepburn Bill, which is such a one, passed the House last year, but failed in the Senate, so effort is being made that it may be passed at the coming session of Congress.

The morning was of great interest and many questions were asked. The exhibition of articles was examined carefully at the close.

Miss Mary P. Anderson, instructor of Botany at Mount Holyoke College, addressed the Club last Friday evening on "Some Winter Aspects of Trees." The talk was illustrated by many specimens showing methods of growth, and fruits that can be seen at this season, and also by charts which had been made by some of her pupils. The evening was much enjoyed by all and several went home with the firm determination to pursue the study of trees further. Miss Anderson considered the interest in this study to be next to that of the study of birds which has been so popular for some time.

MASSACHUSETTS SCHOOLS.

The report of the Massachusetts Conference Committee on Education from the Federated Clubs and the Association of Collegiate Alumnae which was presented at the annual meeting of the State Federation in May by Caroline Stone Atherton, chairman, has just been given to the public through the Federation Bulletin. It contains so much of interest and of value that extracts are given below:

"The Association of Collegiate Alumnae and the Federation of Women's Clubs in their desire to work most effectively along educational lines have joined forces and now have conference committees in several states doing practical work for education. The committee for Massachusetts decided to concentrate its attention on the elementary schools, whose interests are too often overlooked by the public, especially by the better-educated, who are apt to give all their thought to the higher learning that is for the privileged few. The problem of universal significance is that of the common school, and the committee aims to arouse a quickened sense of public obligation, so as to give each and every child his due; namely, the best education that can be had from the beginning of his life in the public schools.

"Effort has been made to learn actual conditions in the elementary schools of Massachusetts. Reports have been received from each county and from one hundred and thirty-five cities and towns. These include every city, all the larger towns but one (of twelve thousand inhabitants), and some of the smallest rural places, so that the facts may fairly be called representative of conditions throughout the State.

"Among other peculiarities it is noticed that a general feeling of satisfaction with present conditions characterizes the reports. In most cases the town is persuaded that its own schools are the best in the State, even while admitting certain defects. The idea that Massachusetts has anything to learn from any other State or city would seem rank heresy. If this unthinking self-satisfaction and consequent apathy can be disturbed, one great obstacle to progress will have been surmounted.

"The questions deal with the organization and administration of schools, and with certain educational problems which are always with us. If our cities can be persuaded to consider the advisability of reducing the number of members of the school committee and having a body which shall represent not ward politics, but educational interests, whose members shall confer together, shall legislate, putting the executive work into the hands of experts employed for the purpose, then, and not till then, may they hope to secure the services of educators who cannot be expected to give their valuable time to petty details such as absorb the attention of school boards today.

"Professor Hannu aptly compares the school board with the board of trustees of a hospital. The latter would never think of selecting nurses or prescribing for a patient, while the former does not hesitate to select teachers, choose textbooks, and determine courses of study. In a city that has recently taken a step backward in this respect, a member of the board during the discussion that resulted in curtailing the power of the Superintendent said frankly that the nomination of teachers should be in the hands of the school board because it was not a question as to the qualifications of the appointees, but only as to the expediency of the appointment. In other words, when a vacancy is to be filled, those whose charge from the public is to do the best possible for the schools and the children are satisfied that they have done their whole duty when they select for the position not the one best fitted to do the work, but the one whose appointment is, for sundry reasons, expedient. And the public does not lift up its voice.

"The only argument that should have weight in the selection of teachers will be heeded when the public insists on one great truth; namely, that the schools are for the children, that the best available teacher for any position is the only one whose appointment is expedient and this regardless of the place of residence, regardless, too, of the need of financial stress of the applicants, it being too vital a matter to admit of a mingling of charity and business.

"This apparent distrust of skilled labor, so utterly at variance with the spirit of the age, and the assumption that natural ability or common sense (the fetish of school men) is never by any chance associated with professional training, would seem to warrant the claim that teaching is not considered a profession,—a subject of bitter lament on the part of teachers of pedagogy.

"In only seventeen places is there provision for tenure of office after a due period of probation. Elsewhere annual election is the rule.

"Of what use is it to speak of salaries, when the opinion still prevails in many communities that teachers are a favored class, and earn their generous salaries only too easily? One point, however, can be made here. In fifty cases a lower salary is reported for primary than for grammar teachers. In eight more the minimum salary is the same, with a higher maximum for the teacher of grammar grades. At least so much of Massachusetts holds that it matters little how the children are started, provided they come into better hands after a time, and holds it logical to grade the salaries of teachers according to the size of the children,—a thing that Dr. Balliet declares no less absurd than it would be to grade the fees of physicians according to the size and age of their patients.

"With reference to educational problems. The fact that only thirty-one towns and cities of Massachusetts have public kindergartens is explained largely on the ground of the expense, although here and there may still be found those who claim that the kindergarten is superfluous. There can be little question as to the need of what Superintendent Maxwell has called the greatest blessing of the Nineteenth Century has given to little children, In factory towns, where the mother is often a wage-earner, and in certain sections of our large cities, where the home influences are anything but favorable to the child's best development, the kindergarten is indispensable. In two places, in addition to those given above, we find record of a kindergarten in connection with normal school work. In one town they were voted too costly by the school board, and abolished, to be restored in two weeks when the women rose in a body and demanded them. In a certain city they were discontinued on account of the expense, and the Superintendent of Schools is still trying to arouse public-spirited citizens to demand that they be made again a part of the school system.

"Manual training is reported in forty-two towns and cities, and in nine places in high schools only. Again it seems largely a matter of cost, the Superintendent meeting this argument in the school board and from prominent citizens whose interest he tries to awaken. The day is not far distant when a new view of the importance of industrial training will be general. Let us readjust our courses of study to include what will make school work more vital in the eyes of child and parent alike, and then the boy may be induced to follow longer a course that is seen to fit him to help himself.

"The reports show a faint attempt at physical training in the schools. In only fourteen cases is physical training reported under a special teacher or regular teachers supervised by a specialist. "Vacation schools are found in twenty-four places, all but three being supported by private agencies. And yet the long vacation that turns so many children into the street and bids them go absolutely free is a serious question for the mother, the neighbor, and the community, and is not for the best interests of the children themselves.

"Provision for the feeble-minded and defective is sadly inadequate. In behalf of these unfortunate, in behalf of the normal children with whom they are associated, in behalf of the teacher whose task is rendered more difficult by the presence of both together in class, we ask the cities and towns of Massachusetts to consider their obligation to the mentally deficient.

"These figures show that there is something for the public to do for its schools in Massachusetts, on the one hand in ways that do not involve a great expenditure of money, as the selection of teachers on merit alone, the reorganization of school boards, inspection of school buildings, and the improvement of janitor service. Surely, delay here is inexcusable. On the other hand, reforms are needed that must wait until public opinion has formed to believe the extra expenditure of money justified by the value of what the money procures. A school board cannot maintain the best schools if it has behind it an indifferent or pennywise public.

"Educators agree that reforms cannot come until the public takes hold. In these days when women go far afield, when the home is less and less the boundary of their interests, may we not reasonably ask that the schools receive their thoughtful attention? Let the women once see clearly what the public school has meant to this country, what it means today with the fast increasing foreign population to emphasize such meaning. Let them in their various organizations give educators a hearing, and come to understand the questions which they are discussing, and they may be trusted to act. They will seek to interest others in the home and in the school; in short, to form a public sentiment that will demand as reasonable and absolutely essential what now passes for a school man's hobby. It is a most encouraging fact that new organizations of men and women of the nature of civic or public school associations have already been formed in Fitchburg, Lynn, Weymouth, and Worcester.

"Let us not be deceived. Our schools are what we make them. Serious, consecutive, intelligent thinking about the school and its problems is what we need. The balancing of the limited good accomplished by a pet philanthropy with the inestimable good done by the far-reaching public school will put the needs of the school in a new light. No higher service can the thoughtful citizen render to the Commonwealth than to do his utmost to promote the interests of her coming citizens, the children of today."

Thanksgiving Favors

Automobiles With Pumpkin Wheels and Odd Candy Boxes.

Decorations for the Thanksgiving dinner table arouse much interest in the candy and pastry shops. There never was such a variety before.

Three inch turkeys constitute candy boxes. There are dolls dressed in pumpkin color paper from hat to train. In their hands they carry little bags made out of tiny pumpkins.

Little negro doll boys clap pumpkin cymbals, others guide automobiles that have pumpkin wheels. Little pumpkin coaches, as charming as the one that carried Cinderella to the ball, stand in line with other devices.

Fruit plates are piled with red checked apples and grapes, bananas, pears, lemons, each one of which is a candy box. Careful reproductions are seen in the mammoth peanuts and the miniature lobsters, which also make candy boxes.

Special Thanksgiving features for children are provided in the great paper slippers, some three feet long, which when broken spill forth stocks of Thanksgiving candies, in the Jack Horner pies done up in holiday colors and in the big paper house-that-Jack-built, filled with goodies.

THEATRES

HOLLIS STREET THEATRE.—On Monday, November 27, to begin a three weeks' engagement, Charles Frohman will present, at the Hollis St. Theatre, the distinguished and tremendously popular artists, E. H. Sothern and Julia Marlowe, in a series of magnificent Shakespearean revivals. The arrangement of the repertory will be as follows: The opening week, beginning Monday, November 27, with a special matinee on Thanksgiving day, will be given to "The Taming of the Shrew"; the second week will be devoted to "Twelfth Night", and the third and final week will be divided between "The Merchant of Venice" and "Romeo and Juliet." The plays, it need scarcely be mentioned, will be presented in a splendidly elaborate manner in regard to scenic investitures, costumes and accessories, and there will be a remarkably strong supporting company. Wherever Mr. Sothern and Miss Marlowe have appeared this season they have aroused the keenest interest and discussion over their interpretation of the new roles which they have undertaken, and crowded houses have greeted them everywhere. Their appearance at the Hollis St. Theatre will be the chief dramatic event of the Boston theatrical season.

Majestic Theatre.—It is a well known fact that there is always a larger demand for seats at a holiday performance at a theatre than at any other time, but usually the extra matinee suffices to take care of the holiday enthusiasts who have been disappointed at not being able to secure seats at night during the advance sale. It has seldom happened, however, that the advance sales have reached such proportions for holiday performances that it seemed advisable to add a third presentation on a holiday, yet that is what the management have found it necessary to do for "As Ye Sow" and performances are announced for Thanksgiving as follows: 11 A. M., 2 P. M. and 8 P. M.

The Lend-A-Hand Dramatic Club will present Shakespeare's comedy "As You Like It" at the Bijou Theatre on Wednesday evening, December the sixth, for the benefit of the Floating Hospital and other charities. This is the fourth annual performance of Shakespeare plays, given by the club. The orchestra, which is composed of club members, is in charge of Miss Evelyn Fellows of Cambridge. Tickets at $1.00 may be obtained from any member of the club or from the box office of the Bijou Theatre on Monday and Wednesday afternoons. The performance will begin promptly at 7.45 P. M. There will be a dress rehearsal on Tuesday afternoon December fifth at 2 o'clock. Tickets for this will be on sale at the Bijou box office Friday afternoon, Nov. 24th.

Rates and Rate Inequalities.

(From the Washington Correspondent New York Sun, November 9, 1905.)
In his Raleigh speech the President advanced no new argument in support of Federal control of railway rates. With characteristic vigor he pounded a recognized evil for the suppression of which existing laws are only a little short of duly adequate. He made no allusion to the possible results of a stern and unrelenting enforcement of laws already provided for the restraint of what he calls "unscrupulous and ruthless cunning in railway management," by which "some big shippers and some railroad managers who are always willing to take unfair advantage of their weaker competitors force other big shippers and big railroad men who would like to do decently into similar acts of wrong and injustice, under penalty of being left behind in the race for success."

This, which is the main line of the President's argument, does not seem to touch the principal issue of the present consideration, namely, the question of reasonable rates. Upon the issue of the equality of rates and treatment for all shippers there is little room for argument. Shippers, railways and the public are in general agreement upon that point. With some elaboration of the present laws, to which little or no objection will be raised, the point of unfair discrimination may be covered as well as it can be. It is doubtful if any such law could be made absolutely effective.

But that is an issue which is quite distinct from the proposal to place rate making powers in the hands of an administrative body. There appears to be confusion upon this point. There is a wide difference between the prohibition of any form of unfair discrimination between shipper and shipper, or between point and point, and the determination of rate charges by a Federal commission. It is to the latter and not to the former that objection is made. Mr. Roosevelt said that "actual experience has shown that it is not possible to leave the railroads uncontrolled." I do not know the exact period of this actual experience. I am under an impression that railroads are, and always have been subject to a long list of restraining laws, statutory as well as economic.

Our transportation system has made this country what it is today. Our development has not come in spite of our system, but because of it. That abuses have crept in is undeniable. Abuses have crept into our Government controlled postal system and into our Government supervised and regulated banking system. But freedom of action in rate making has enabled railways to open enormous areas of otherwise valueless land, and to distribute the products of our farms and our workshops in a manner impossible under restrained action. The history of all State rate making shows the inevitable tendency of that method toward the flat distance tariff. Such a system in this country of enormous areas and distances would turn farms into waste places and valuable machinery into junk.

Nowhere in the entire range of the railway discussion has it been shown that the country has suffered or that it is suffering from excessive railway rates. Outside of individual instances, whose rarity makes them almost unique, there has been neither complaint of excessive charges nor clamor for reduction by a Federal commission. The call for rate regulation by a commission or by a court does not come from our thousands upon thousands of shippers. It is the cry of a few who hope to gain by it, augmented by the roaring of non-shippers who have little or no knowledge of transportation questions.

The country, the shippers and even the railways will support the President in any effort to remedy evils, to correct abuses, to stamp out inequalities and unfair discriminations. But it not railway managers only who are staggered by proposals that a commission be empowered either to fix rates or to regulate railway tariffs.

Dr. P. S. Henson, pastor of Tremont Temple, tells this:

While travelling through the west it happened that Dr. N. E. Wood, president of the Newton Theological institution, was in the same car, and was standing in the aisle talking with some acquaintance, when Dr. Henson came past him on his way to get a glass of water for Mrs. Henson, and afterward returned to his seat. After a short time another glass of water was wanted, and a second time he had to pass Dr. Wood. Dr. Wood looked up and said: "Dr. Henson, you seem to be a drawer of water."

Dr. Henson replied: "Well, if you don't get out of the way I'll be a hewer of wood."

Washington Letter.

The International Board of Consulting Engineers who are acting in advisory capacity to the Panama Canal Commission voted this week on the subject of the type of canal to be adopted. Their decision has not yet been made public but will be early next week. When it is once decided whether the canal is to be of the lock type or built at sea level, the work can proceed with more rapidity. But up to date there has been a great deal done, how much very few people in the United States seems to know or care. There has been a great deal of criticism of the canal commission for not proceeding faster. But the fact is that the work has been pushed as rapidly as possible considering the number of changes in the commission and engineers that have been necessary.

The decision as to the type of canal marks an important period in the work, and it is just as well to consider at this moment what has already been accomplished. In the first place the Isthmus has been cleaned up as it was never thought possible to do it. In fact the work of the sanitary corps under Col. Gorges has been as important as the digging of the canal itself. For the sanitation of the Isthmus has made it a habitable strip. The French tried to do the canal work without the preliminary sanitation and failed utterly. Of course partisan critics will profess themselves skeptical of the amount of work actually done. But the records of the war department state the following as some of the things accomplished. A sewer system has been advised for the town of Panama and is half completed. The town in being paved with brick for the easier cleaning and policing, and there has been installed a complete system of water works so that for the first time in three centuries the inhabitants will have good drainage and a pure drinking supply. There will be three other water systems necessary, one for Culebra, one Empire and a third for Cristobal and Colon. All these are under way. By cleaning the towns and killing the mosquitoes, the yellow fever cases have been reduced from 61 in June to 3 in October. There are now 13,000 laborers on the ground and the rate of sickness is only 25 per 1,000 which would be considered moderate in a northern climate.

In the line of actual construction the United States inherited the unfinished French work which consisted of fifteen miles of sea level canal at the North end and five miles at the South. The work has eaten into the great Culebra Hill to a point 140 feet above sea level. This hill is 340 feet high and ten miles wide and has been the great bugbear of a canal line at Panama. There are 20 steam shovels on the ground and sixty more ordered or on their way to the scene of the work. The Panama railway has been double tracked with the exception of nine miles which will soon be doubled also. This is not a bad showing for the work up to date. There has been a great deal of opposition to the canal from the railroad interests which will of course be affected by it and there probably will be a great many more calamity howls to the effect that it is an engineering impossibility. But one can consider the progress made with a great deal of satisfaction and the assurance that in about five years the work will be completed.

Political interest in the past few days has turned largely toward "Uncle Joe" Cannon who as the next Speaker of the House will have the making or blocking of a great deal of legislation. Mr. Cannon after his first visit to the White House admitted that he would not admit before the possibility of railway rate legislation at the coming session. But he has come out in a flat footed statement against tariff legislation and there is going to be a hard fight over this. The President feels that he has the country behind him on the tariff revision plan as well as on rate fixing and the visit of the shoe men the other day headed by Governor Douglas of Massachusetts, indicates that he is going to have some warm and strong support. There are some more business delegations that are coming to Washington on the same errand, and Speaker Cannon, astute politician as he is will find he has all his work cut out if he intends to block consideration of the tariff, and as he contemptuously expressed it, "prevent the country being held up by the tail this winter."

It is not often that Secretary Hitchcock lets himself go as he did the other day on the subject of the convictions in that Oklahoma land fraud case where two men were imprisoned six hours and fined $1,000 for illegally fencing 212,000 acres of government land. The Secretary declared that the conviction had cost the government thousands of dollars and four years of hard work and he was disgusted with the inadequate punishment in the case. He said, however, that the Government proposed to follow the case up and if the fences were not torn down that other indictments would follow and a fresh effort made to put the guilty parties where they belonged, that was in the penitentiary for a term of years.

Thanksgiving Service.

On Thanksgiving Day for several years less than one-tenth of our united congregations have assembled to join in that public expression to God, common in the days of our fathers, which it is the purpose of this service to perpetuate. No doubt family reunions, and the desire to have an entire day free from any call, are in part responsible for such small attendance.

In order to avoid this conflict of interests, we have arranged to hold our meeting this year on the evening before Thanksgiving Day. We therefore invite you to assemble in Channing Church, Wednesday evening, November 29, at quarter before eight o'clock, for a union service of Thanksgiving to our heavenly Father for His bountiful blessings upon our homes, our churches, our city, our state and our nation.

Hunnewell Club Concert

The season's first offering of the Entertainment Committee of the Hunnewell Club was a concert last week Thursday evening by the Kuntz Orchestra Club of Boston. The personnel of this club is made up partially of members of the Boston Symphony orchestra and the work of the club was marked with the usual smoothness of tone, in so far as the strings were concerned. One of the innovations was the substitution of the oboe for the clarinet and the effect of five strings, piano, flute and oboe was excellent.

The opening number was Lachner's "March Celebre" and the second number was an overture by Strauss, "Die Fledermaus." The third number, and one heartily received by the audience was Mrs. Hollis' offering, a tuneful melody by Luckstone, "Delight."

Mrs. Hollis has appeared in Newton before although she was not remembered except by those who follow the work of the singers, her solo was rendered in her best manner.

Mrs. Hollis for several seasons was the soprano soloist with the Boston Operatic Company with which aggregation she was seen last year.

By the time the fourth number was reached, the orchestra was thoroughly warmed to its work and its rendition of Liszt's "Loreley" was a most musicianly one. The selection from "Rigoletto" however was the number giving the best opportunities for each instrumentalist to shine. Especially good were the flute, oboe and cello passages and the selection was brought to a fitting close with fine finish.

Mrs. Hollis' second number was "My Sweetheart and I" and this number did not by any means satisfy the audience who insisted on her singing the "Doll Song" for two encores.

In spite of the excellent playing of the program, the audience seemed really to be more at home when the first strains of the closing number were played, "Woodland."

Take the concert all together and it was certainly a success and the hit of the evening can safely be said to have been achieved by Mrs. Hollis. One of the regrets was not to have heard Mrs. Hollis sing either with violin or orchestra accompaniment, for it is with such that she appears best to advantage.

A suggestion that could perhaps be offered from a musical standpoint to the orchestra, would be to not use the piano to such an extent in working up fortissimo passages. In fact, with a combination of that size, the piano should not be used in orchestral work at all, unless for marches and similar numbers.

Hospital Sunday

In accordance with a well-established custom, the Newton Hospital appeals for contributions for its support during the coming year. At this Thanksgiving season it asks consideration, from those who have prospered and been free from sickness, for the benefit of those, their neighbors, who may be less favored and exposed to suffering.

This Hospital is purely a local institution. Its doctors, officers, and supporters are all of this city, and so are almost all its patients, although strangers in need of help are not neglected. It must depend upon Newton givers for its maintenance.

During the past year several greatly needed improvements and additions have been started, which during the coming year will be ready for use. Of these the most important are a kitchen, with proper space and adequate facilities, and a new nurses' home. These will enable the Hospital not only to do its present work better, but to extend its usefulness. This increased service will require more money for increased running expenses.

The Hospital has never been obliged to refuse its aid to those properly entitled to receive its care. Will you not do your part, however small or great, to maintain this record—a record for which Newton may be truly grateful? (Contributions for the Hospital will be taken at all the churches in the city on Sunday, November 26, but, if you prefer to subscribe individually, kindly send direct to the Treasurer, Mr. G. R. Pulsifer, 20 Birch Hill Road, Newtonville.

The Executive Committee of the Board of Trustees takes this opportunity of calling your attention to the work of the Hospital.

The number of patients at the Hospital shows a constant increase, due, we believe, not to a greater amount of sickness, but to the increase of population and, we hope, to increased appreciation of the facilities of the Hospital.

During the coming year the new kitchen will be in use. This will have ample space for cooking and storage, which at present are sadly lacking. The opening of Ellison Hall, the new nurses' home, will make it possible to double the number of pupil nurses in the training school, and thus furnish better attendance in the Hospital and more liberally supply the constant demand for nurses in private homes.

This Committee has constantly endeavored to systematize the work of the Hospital, especially in the matters of the purchase and use of supplies and the expenditure of money. While such efforts will not be relaxed, the Committee feels that the Hospital expenses are kept on a reasonable basis, while no patient is deprived of the care and comforts which he needs.

The Hospital Aid Association has been requested by the Trustees to investigate the work of the Hospital among the poor, and renders the following report:—

The total number of patients from October 1, 1903, to September 30, 1904, was 854. Of these, 64 had the use of free beds without cost to themselves, 167 paid a small part of their cost to the Hospital, while 162 paid nothing. These figures show that 46 per cent. of the whole number of patients received aid.

From October 1, 1904, to September 30, 1905, the total number of patients treated was 919. Of these, 13 received the benefit of free beds, 270 paid a part of the cost, while 99 paid nothing to the Hospital. Therefore, 50 per cent. of the whole number of patients received aid during the past year.

It should be understood that of the remaining 50 per cent. many are charity patients, but are paid for by the Overseers of the Poor and the Board of Health of the city of Newton. The cost of the maintenance of all these patients has been materially lessened by generous contributions of food and clothing for their use and comfort from many individuals and organizations throughout the city, in addition to the work of the Hospital Aid Association.

Grand Opera House—Miss Selma Herman, the talented emotional actress who will appear in Theodore Kramer's new and most sensational play entitled, "Queen of the Convicts" will make her appearance upon the stage here in the first act in her bare feet. The cast that will support Miss Herman is an exceptionally good one made up of Metropolitan players, each chosen for their special fitness for the roles assumed. The part of Queen Draga gives Miss Herman exceptional opportunities towards displaying the histrionic ability which she possesses and the author has written many a strong scene which will be hailed with delight and thrill her auditors. Matinees will be given as usual on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday.

Mr. Coote will be supported by a competent company. An event of more than passing interest in musical circles especially, will be the announcement of the engagement of Edward Mollenhauer the World-famous violinist and instructor, and the founder of the first conservatory of music in America. He has appeared before all the crowned heads of Europe and many of the foremost violinists of today have been his pupils. No musical artist of the age has done more to win the admiration and respect of the American musical public than this clever artist. The surrounding program combines the best variety entertainers in this country and several European artists. Included in the list are R. J. Jose, who will always be identified with the song successes "With All Her Faults" and "Belle Brandon," Asra, clever European performer on the billiard table; Spissell Brothers and Mack, eccentric comedy acrobats; Nat LeRoy and Minnie Woodford, conversational comedians; the Durand trio, European street singers; Sid Baxter, aerial cyclist; Daly and Devere, in a comedy sketch, and Bertina and Brockway, singers and dancers. Belle Hathaway's monkeys and baboons have been specially engaged for the juveniles. The usual new list of comedy and interesting

Literary Notes

One function of the up-to-date magazine is to reflect the moving spirit of the time, and this is the striking thing about the December McClure's. As befits a holiday number, it is filled with good, strong fiction, there is a Jack London story one of his best, and six other short stories; but first in importance are the contributions of William Allen White, Ray Stannard Baker and the Rev. Charles D. Williams. William Allen White who, as a judge of public men has become almost the national oracle, incisive, unerring, fixes the place of Folk in national affairs. He tells of his great accomplishments in Missouri, measures the man, and finally shows that he is not big enough yet for Presidential timber. "Railroad Rebates" is Ray Stannard Baker's second paper on the Railroad Question. He explains what rebates are, how they are paid, who pays them and how they affect industry; illustrating the whole process by specific instances, little human stories picked up from railroad men and shippers the gainers and sufferers by the system. Jack London's "Love of Life" is a harrowing tale of human endurance, pitting against nature and against each other a starving man and a starving wolf. Blumenschein has illustrated wonderfully in color. In contrast to this tale of primitive strength is a delicate, fanciful Irish folk tale full of the nimble wit of the race in which Herminie Templeton introduces again Darby O'Gill, and the King of the Fairies. Then there is the "Courtship of the Boss," the heart-history of a ringster, an amusing and true story; "The Deepwater Debate," a wholesome little tale of the excitement and the love-making of an old home town and stories by Jean Webster and Adeline Knapp. Editorially appears a character sketch of Charles Evans Hughes who has been lifting the lid from Insurance in New York, and a critical estimate of Christianity in practice, "The Final Test of Christianity," by the Rev. Charles D. Williams.

The December Suburban Life is alive with bright and entertaining features which will delight every country lover and suburban dweller. While there is a distinctive Christmas atmosphere, in harmony with the spirit of the holiday season, a glimpse of the table of contents shows that there are plenty of the practical articles for which the suburban home-maker is so eagerly sought by the urban home-maker. A stirring story of animal life is contributed by Edward Howe Forbush, who carries "Fleet-foot," a wild deer, through a series of adventures terminating in his finding a home of peace and plenty with a herd of domesticated deer. Caroline Benedict Burrell is the author of a human piece of fiction, entitled "Christmas Flotsam," a story of how the true Christmas spirit was brought to the hearts of a crabbed, old light-house keeper and his maiden sister. Hostesses who are planning their fun-making for the holidays will find many ideas in Katharine Landon's "Entertaining in the Country" with illustrations from photographs of characters in an amateur circus.

Prevent Fraud and Crime

There is a great deal being said and written about the illegal use of the mails by individuals and corporations and the determined efforts of the Postmaster-General, Mr. Cortelyou, to prevent the spread of criminal use of the mails.

Quite a large number of these rascally schemes have been unearthed, deprived of the use of them and the courts are pursuing them vigorously. Hardly a daily or weekly paper, and the religious papers are included, but in its advertising columns, advertisements that the editors must know are frauds pure and simple. While the Postmaster-General is doing all he can to break up this nefarious use of the mails, there is another duty for another class of officers that, apparently, deserves immediate attention. It seems strange that this has not long ere this, been given the attention it deserves. I refer to the advertisements found in nearly all our papers and some magazines, and the numerous and continually coming get-rich-quick plans and offerings, health giving frauds and other schemes to beguile the money from innocent victims to fill the pockets of those scoundrels and public vampires, and still they print them, thus aiding these rascals (for the money these papers receive for the advertising) in the great wrong.

Almost weekly some of these schemes are exposed and occasionally the principles are tried and convicted. But the majority are untouched. Some of these rascally schemes are commended by ministers and other good, reputable people who are misled and hoodwinked by these wily, unscrupulous and plausible fellows.

Of late the papers have made quite an effort to help expose the rascality of some of the schemes they helped to promote—Brokerage firms, bucket shops, Cattle Ranches, Rubber Plantations and others too numerous to mention, do draw money from the pockets of the easy gullible who bite eagerly at the promised large returns only to find they have been swindled, cheated and robbed.

"Lock the door after the horse is stolen," is old adage. Prosecute and jail these detestable scoundrels whenever they are exposed is well as far as it goes; but how much better it would be to nip their plans and them before the harm is done, before the money has been stolen from innocent persons.

There ought to be a law enacted by the United States and by every state authorizing the appointment of a commission whose duty should be to investigate these schemes and schemers just as soon as they are made public.

This commission should have power to stop them, as the law has power to prevent lotteries and not only to thwart the schemers but to prosecute them for swindling and even for attempting to swindle, punishing them by fine or imprisonment or both.

Hardly a week passes that I do not receive circulars from New York, Chicago or other places further West, from nine agents, stock brokers etc., inviting me to invest, even as low as twenty-five dollars in their rascally schemes, and although they generally do not promise enormous returns, they show figures proving (?) as they assert, that they have made from one hundred to one hundred and fifty per cent for their customers during the last year.

One firm from another city offers great inducements to take my money and speculate in cotton with it, with, almost, a promise that my share of the profits will be very large. Another man or firm asks me to let him have money to speculate in wheat and in glowing colors shows the enormous returns he can give me.

These circulars, letters and booklets come to me nearly every week and although they always go into my waste basket, still they come. In almost every instance these rascally schemes come from rascals who should be investigated and when proved frauds should land the authors in the state prisons.

The duty of this commission should be to scan the daily, weekly and monthly advertisements and whenever one showed on its face, or apparently showed that it was a fraud, at once investigate and ascertain whether it was a rascally scheme and fraud.

Circulars sent through the mails (when forwarded to these commission-ers by those receiving them) should receive the same thorough investigation. If proved fraudulent, the Postmaster-General ought, at once, to be notified and he will forbid these parties using the mails and prosecute them if he deems best.

Stop the attempted thieving before the theft. Stop the attempted swindle before the swindler has swindled. Compel these schemers to prove their plans and promises are honest and just and true. If they are not, forbid them the use of the mails and prosecute them by the fullest extent of the law.

Compel the press to carefully scrutinize the advertisements offered, before inserting them in their columns, and when one looks suspicious have them refer it to this commission for investigation. This will reduce their income. It will greatly reduce their power to do public harm.

Look at the medical advertisements in the daily papers—almost all of which are unmitigated frauds or worse—for criminal, illegal purposes.

These advertisers and their places are well known—have been known for years by the police and others but have been seldom molested.

Now a great crime has been brought to light in the "Dress Suit Case" and the public is thoroughly aroused and demands that the law punish the criminals to its fullest extent, when found and proved guilty. If such a commission as I have referred to could be appointed, would it not largely disclose these rascally schemes and purify many of the dens that pollute our cities? Does it not seem that good might result?

J. F. Frisbie, M. D.

Organ Dedicated

Organ

The external appearance of the new organ is such that the case is pronounced to be in many respects the most beautiful in New England, and the Gothic interior of the main auditorium together with the organ case, choir screens and console make a combination which hardly can be excelled. The organ case was designed by Shepley, Rutan & Coolidge, the architects of the church, and was constructed by Irving & Casson.

The organ itself, which was built by the Austin Organ Company of Hartford, Conn., is one of the finest in New England, and has many features which are of special interest in organ construction. Among these may be mentioned the Austin wind chest, really an air tight room, which contains air under pressure and distributes it without flues or wind-ways to the pipes, which draw their air directly from the chest, where a great volume of air under pressure is immediately available at all points, and a perfectly uniform pressure at all times is maintained. This chest may be entered through an air-tight vestibule while the organ is in operation, and the mechanism of the valves and working parts being exposed, may be readily reached and adjusted.

The console is also interesting, being so designed that every part of it is under the absolute control of the performer. The stops, contrary to custom, are above the keyboards and consist of stop-keys extending the length of the console. These are so arranged that by depressing or lifting the keys the stops are drawn or shut off, and so grouped that a glance suffices to show just what combinations are in use. The stop-keys are also controlled by the combination pistons. Air for the organ wind chest is supplied by two sets of feeders which are operated independently by water motors, also controlled from the console.

About Town

To conform with the new law the letter boxes are being painted green. Eringo-brag.

Much complaint is being heard regarding vandalism in and about vacant houses. In one residence in Newtonville last week a large rock was thrown through a heavy plate glass window, demolishing it and doing considerable injury to the interior.

There is a marked lack of interest in municipal politics in Newton this year as there is practically no contest for the various offices. This is an unhealthy condition and at some future time may lead to unsatisfactory results. In one precinct, up to 5 o'clock, only 15 votes had been cast at the primaries on Tuesday. Probably election day will be a repetition of Tuesday and if so why might not the friends of some undesirable person take advantage of the light vote and by using stickers win a victory for their candidate.

The picturesque city of Rutland, Vt., can give Newton points in some matters. A pair of horses connected with the fire department were becoming unfit for use on account of old age. The children of the schools became interested in their welfare and raised a sum of money sufficient to put them on the retired list for life.

The Newton branch of the Young Ladies Charitable Association will participate in the fair to be held in December in Boston in aid of the Young Ladies Charitable Association held for the benefit of the consumptives home.

The many friends of Miss Josephine Sherwood have been interested this week in her engagement with the Nat. C. Goodwin Company at the Colonial Theatre, Boston.

Just Mention It

It pays the buyer to buy from an advertiser and to say he saw the article advertised in this or that paper. The man who mentions an advertisement when buying goods really gets the best possible service—even better than the regular customer when this is possible. Why? Simply because the advertiser pays good money for his advertisement and he is glad to hear from it. It is a compliment to his good business judgment.

Board of Health Hearing

In consequence of certain charges made by Mr. Addison C. Burnham of Newton Centre relative to action taken by the Agent of the Board of Health in the matter of diphtheria in the Mason school district, a hearing was held at City Hall Monday afternoon at 4.30 o'clock. Dr. Francis Geo. Curtis, chairman presided and all the members were present. City Physician Utley, Messrs Seward W. Jones, William F. Harbach and Geo. Royal Pulsifer.

Mr. Burnham was the principal speaker and said he had two distinct matters to present, one in reference to the action to be taken by the Department in future cases and the other in relation to action of the Health Agent in the present instance.

Mr. Burnham reminded the board that it held in its hands the issues of possible life and death and if it fails to do the right thing, great harm will be done to the community. He then presented a petition signed by E. Ray Speare and over 200 others asking that the Board confiscate the pens, pencils and books of pupils taken ill with contagious diseases and promptly disinfect all school and dressing rooms used by such pupils. Mr. Burnham said that in obtaining signatures but one person had refused to sign and that the list contained the names of many Newton physicians.

The facts of the case according to Mr. Burnham were that a boy named Alfred had been taken ill on Wednesday afternoon, Oct. 25 and sent home by the teacher. He did not come to school the next day nor on Friday, and Friday night, a physician was called, who took a culture. The next day the boy died in the ambulance on the way to the Hospital. On Monday, Mr. Copeland, Master of the School telephoned the Health office and asked as to disinfection and was informed that the department did not deem it necessary. During that week another case of diphtheria was reported from that room and the following Saturday, the room was disinfected by the Board. Mr. Burnham claims that Agent Stone told him over the telephone that the dressing room adjoining the class room was also disinfected and that he has evidence from Mr. Russell, who is Mr. Stone's assistant, and from the janitor of the school that the dressing room was not disinfected. Mr. Burnham also states that Mr. Stone in his telephone conversation was insolent and discourteous.

He stated that he was unable to understand the failure of the Agent to take action as requested on Monday morning and was negligent in not doing so. Mr. Burnham then went on to criticize Dr. Curtis' letter to him regarding the difficulties of disinfection of rooms and of pens etc and gave the Chairman of the board considerable advice as to what could have been done under the circumstances.

Mr. Burnham then read the answers of Dr. MacCallum of the Boston City Hospital to certain questions asked by Dr. Baker. First, Is diphtheria contagious in its early stages? Answer, Yes. Second, Will the diphtheria germs become devitalized within five days? Ans. No, in 20 days. Yes. Third, Can disinfection of a school room be delayed or neglected without danger to the children? Ans. No. Fourth, Should books, pens and pencils be disinfected in questionable cases? Ans. Yes. Fifth, Is it possible to disinfect coat rooms where outer garments are hung? Ans. Yes.

He then went on to the second part of his complaint, regarding the personal bearing and words of Agent Stone. He began with a description of what a city official should be, claiming that he should be courteous and truthful and that in all matters citizens have a right to truthful and courteous answers to their inquiries. Mr. Burnham stated that Mrs. Chapin had reported that Mr. Stone had answered her insolently. Prof. Ripley, when talking over the telephone to Mr. Stone in Mr. Burnham's presence had said to Mr. Stone, "I want to discuss this matter mildly" and to Mr. Burnham, Mr. Stone had said "You Newton Centre people are a set of alarmists."

Mr. Burnham said that Mr. Stone was discourteous, insolent and frequently the reverse of what he should be. In the matter of disinfection of the dressing room Mr. Stone had stated what was not true.

Mr. Burnham claimed to have no personal acquaintance with Mr. Stone and had never heard of him until this matter had come up and it was a most disagreeable duty for him to bring such charges.

Mr. Henry Haynie said that he had helped obtain signatures to the petition and had been astonished at the strong feeling in Newton Centre against Mr. Stone as Agent. He emphasized the importance of disinfecting the dressing rooms which were used for two classes.

Mr. E. Ray Speare said there was a wide spread feeling of dissatisfaction in Newton Centre with the attitude of Agent Stone. There was a feeling of pride in the Newton Schools and of confidence in the Board of Health and there was necessity here for action on the part of the board so that in similar cases in the future would be met courteously and truthfully.

Prof. W. Z. Ripley came in late and said that he had children in the Mason school and in this case it seemed to him that the citizens had not been fully informed. Action was not as prompt as it should have been and the Agent met me with a spirit of interference in matters which did not concern him. In this case there was a slip up and we hope it will not occur again.

The board then took the matter under advisement.
